The Distinguished Service Order was instituted 6th September, 1886. The Bar to the Order was instituted 23rd August, 1916.

The Distinguished Service Order

Appointments and Services as Gazetted from 1st January, 1916, to date, including all awards made during the same period, of Bars to D.S.O.'s

These Extracts from the Gazettes are arranged chronologically

London Gazette, 1 Jan. 1916.—"Admiralty, 1 Jan. 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their bravery and devotion to duty during mine-sweeping and mine-laying operations. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

WALTERS, RICHARD HUTH, Commander (Acting Capt.), R.N.
MORANT, EDGAR ROBERT, Commander, R.N.
RIGG, WALTER GEOFFREY, Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), R.N.
HEATON, GERVAISE WILLIAM HEATON, Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), R.N.
CARMICHAEL, JOHN, Engineer-Commander, R.N.R.
THURSTAN, NORMAN MALET COLQUHOUN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.
RICE, WILLIAM VICTOR, Lieut., R.N.

London Gazette, 1 Jan. 1916.—"Admiralty, 1 Jan. 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

COODE, CHARLES PENROSE RUSHTON, Capt., R.N. For the services described in the London Gazette of the 16th Aug. 1915.
FITZMAURICE, RAYMOND, Commander, R.N. For his services in charge of the operation of blocking the Rufigi river to prevent the escape of the Königsberg on the 10th Nov. 1914. Commander Fitzmaurice was on board the collier Newbridge, which was sunk up the river, and was exposed to heavy fire at short range from both banks both when entering the river and again when returning in the steam cutter of H.M.S. Chatham.

SNEYD, RALPH STUART, Commander, R.N. For his services during operations in the Cameroons. Commander Sneyd has commanded several successful operations on the coast and up the rivers, notably on the Dibamba River on the 10th Sept. 1914, when he engaged and sank a large enemy launch, drove the enemy out of their post at Piti, and captured important defence plans.

HUGHES, ROBERT HERBERT WILFRID, Commander, R.D., R.N.R. For his services during operations in the Cameroons. At the beginning of the campaign Commander Hughes superintended the work of clearing a way through the wreck barrage and piloting H.M.S. Challenger to within bombarding distance of Duala, and he has subsequently, at considerable risk and frequently under fire, carried out survey work on the Sanaga, Njong and Campo Rivers, and continuously harassed the enemy's coast outposts.

BRUCE, KENNETH MERVYN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. For his services in command of a submarine in the Sea of Marmora, where he made a prolonged cruise, during the course of which he inflicted much damage on enemy shipping and engaged and put to flight by gunfire a Turkish gunboat and a destroyer, and subsequently displayed much coolness and resource in extricating his boat from a difficult position.

PIRIE, WILFRID BAYLEY, Lieut., R.N. For his services in command of a submarine in the Sea of Marmora, where he inflicted much damage on enemy shipping, and co-operated with Lieut.-Commander Bruce in the chase of a Turkish gunboat.

BARR, EDWIN HAROLD, Capt., R.M.A. For services with the Royal Marine Artillery Anti-Aircraft Brigade in France.

LEAF, HENRY MEREDITH, Temporary Capt., R.M. For services with the Royal Naval Division Motor Transport Company in France.

FERRAND, JAMES BRIAN PATRICK, Flight Sub-Lieut., R.N. On the 28th Nov. 1915, accompanied by First Class Air Mechanic Oldfield as gunner, Flight Sub-Lieut. Ferrand attacked a hostile seaplane, which was accompanied by three more seaplanes and a destroyer, off the Belgian coast, and brought it down by gunfire into the water, where it immediately sank. He then attacked the destroyer, and only abandoned the attack after coming under heavy shell fire both from the destroyer and the shore batteries of Westende.

VINEY, TAUNTON ELLIOTT, Flight Sub-Lieut., R.N. For his services on the 28th Nov. 1915, when, accompanied by le Lieut. en second de Sinçay as observer, he destroyed a German submarine off the Belgian coast by bombs dropped from an aeroplane.

London Gazette, 10 Jan. 1916.—"Admiralty, 10 Jan. 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

DUFF-DUNBAR, KENNETH JAMES, Lieut.-Commander R.N. In recognition of his services in attacking and torpedoing a German auxiliary vessel on the 22nd Dec. 1915. The ship was protected by a screen consisting of a torpedo boat, a small sloop, four trawlers and several tugs and small craft, and Lieut.-Commander Duff-Dunbar showed great determination in prosecuting the attack through the screen.

London Gazette, 11 Jan. 1916.—"Admiralty, 11 Jan. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the following Officer to the Distinguished Service Order."

BOND, THOMAS ARTHUR, Lieut., R.A.N.R. In recognition of his services during the operations against the German possessions in the Western Pacific, 1914. On 11 Sept. 1914, during the attack upon the Wireless Station, Bita Paka, German New Guinea, Lieut. Bond displayed conspicuous ability and coolness under fire in leading his men through most difficult country and enforcing the terms of surrender whilst drawing off the attack by another body of the enemy. He showed great daring, when accompanied by only one officer and one man, in suddenly disarming eight Germans in the presence of 20 German native troops drawn up under arms, all of whom were then marched off and held prisoners. Later he personally captured five armed natives.

London Gazette, 12 Jan. 1916.—Officers (amongst others) specially recommended in the Despatch dated 3 Dec. 1915, of Vice-Admiral Sir Reginald H. S. Bacon, Commanding the Dover Patrol.

JOHNSON, C. D., Commodore, M.V.O., 6th Flotilla. In command of the Destroyer Flotilla, and has performed much valuable work during the whole of the operations, and directly responsible for the efficiency with which the patrol was conducted.

WIGRAM, E., Capt., H.M.S. Prince Eugene. Commanded the detached squadron during a successful attack on Zeebrugge on 6 Sept., which caused considerable loss and inconvenience to the enemy.

BIRD, F. G., Capt., Dover Drifter Patrol. In personal charge of the drifters during five of the major attacks, and contributed materially to the success of the operations.

BOWRING, H. W., Flag Capt., Dover Patrol. Acted as Chief of my Staff during all the operations and afforded me most valuable assistance.

BICKFORD, W. G. H., Commander, Dover Patrol. In charge of the forward observation party under the close fire of the batteries during two attacks, and largely assisted in correcting the fire of the guns.

"Admiralty, 12 Jan. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the undermentioned Officers in recognition of their services as mentioned in the foregoing despatch. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

JOHNSON, CHARLES DUNCAN, M.V.O., Commodore, R.N.
WIGRAM, ERNEST, Capt., R.N.
BIRD, FREDERIC GODFREY, Capt., R.N.
BOWRING, HUMPHREY WYKEHAM, Capt., R.N.
BICKFORD, WILLIAM GEORGE HASTINGS, Commander, R.N.

London Gazette, 14 Jan. 1916.—"War Office, 14 Jan. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned Honours and Rewards for distinguished service in the field, with effect from 1 Jan. 1916, inclusive. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

FALLA, NORRIS STEPHEN, Major, New Zealand Artillery.
 HASTINGS, NORMAN FREDERICK, Major, Wellington Mounted Rifles.

London Gazette, 22 Jan. 1916.—" War Office, 22 Jan. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

HOWARD, LEWIS CHARLES, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, 8th Battn. Prince Albert's (Somerset Light Infantry). For conspicuous gallantry and ability on the night of 15th/16th Dec. 1915, near Armentières. He organized with the greatest energy and skill a successful raid by his battalion on the German trenches. His example inspired all ranks with enthusiasm and confidence. He displayed complete indifference to personal danger during the withdrawal of the raiding force under heavy fire. Lieut.-Colonel Howard has been previously brought to notice for gallant work near Loos on 26 Sept. 1915.

NEWCOMBE, STEWART FRANCIS, Major, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Anzac, Gallipoli Peninsula, on 29 Oct. 1915. During rescue operations he entered a mine tunnel soon after the first casualties were reported, and, although suffering from the effects of fumes, he continued to lead rescue parties till he was completely disabled by the gas. One officer lost his life on this occasion in the attempt at rescue.

BELL-IRVING, MALCOLM McBEAN, Capt., Royal Flying Corps (Special Reserve). For conspicuous and consistent gallantry and skill during a period of nine months in France, notably on 19 Dec. 1915, between Lille and Ypres, when he successfully engaged three hostile machines. The first he drove off, the second he sent to the ground in flames, and the third nose-dived and disappeared. He was then attacked by three other hostile machines from above, but he flew off towards Ypres, and chased a machine he saw in that direction. He overhauled it and had got to within a hundred yards when he was wounded by a shell and had to return.

FINDLATER, ALEXANDER, M.D., Capt., 1st London Mounted Brigade Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps, Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on several occasions, notably on 29 Sept. 1915, at Chocolate Hill, Gallipoli Peninsula. He crossed over two hundred yards of open ground under very heavy shell fire to render aid to two wounded men. He saved the life of one, but the other was beyond help.

HUNTINGTON, RICHARD HALL, Temporary Capt., 8th Battn. Prince Albert's (Somerset Light Infantry). For conspicuous gallantry and skill on the night of 15/16 Dec. 1915, near Armentières. He was in command of a raiding party of his battalion, which, largely owing to his skill, entered the German trench undiscovered, and, after disposing of all the enemy found in the trench, were very ably withdrawn. Capt. Huntington was previously brought to notice for good work at the Chalk Pit, near Loos, on 26 Sept. 1915.

JACKSON, ERNEST CHARLES, Temporary Capt., 5th Canadian Infantry Battn. For conspicuous gallantry on 15 Dec. 1915. He commanded the attack on a German advanced barricade on the Messines road with great dash and determination. Previously, on 7 Nov. 1915, he displayed great daring in entering a German sap opposite our trenches on Hill 63, and in withdrawing under heavy fire.

EATON, ARTHUR ERNEST, Temporary Second Lieut., General List (late 7th Battn. Leicestershire Regt.), attached 184th Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and determination near Moulin de Fargny on the night of 4/5 Jan. 1916. Lieut. Eaton made a most daring reconnaissance, remaining six and three-quarter hours behind the German lines and bringing back valuable information. He stunned a German sentry whom he believed to be aware of his presence and finally had to swim back to the point from which he started.

London Gazette, 2 Feb. 1916.—" War Office, 2 Feb. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for Distinguished Service in the field. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

London Gazette, 14 March, 1916.—"Admiralty, S.W., 14 March, 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

WRAY, FAWCET, Capt., R.N. In command of H.M.S. Talbot, which was the mainstay of the supporting cruisers and light craft, especially at Suvla from 6 to 10 Aug.

McCLINTOCK, JOHN WILLIAM LEOPOLD, Capt., R.N. Was in command of H.M.S. Lord Nelson, and inflicted severe damage on the enemy in the operations of last May. Is mentioned for having handled his ship most ably.

VYVYAN, ARTHUR VYELL, Capt., R.N. Beachmaster at Anzac on 25 April and subsequently. Was frequently exposed to heavy shell-fire while carrying out his very arduous duties.

GODFREY, HARRY ROWLANDSON, Capt., R.N. Senior Officer afloat of the Destroyer Flotilla. Showed a fine example to all under him whilst sweeping and patrolling inside the Straits under heavy gunfire.

BEVAN, GEORGE PARKER, Commander, R.N. Has done continuous patrol work with great zeal and energy, and carried out valuable feints at landing in the Gulf of Xeros on 6 and 7 Aug. during the landing at Suvla.

SWABEY, GEORGE THOMAS CARLYLE, Commander, R.N. Rendered very valuable assistance to the Army as Naval Observation Officer. Strongly recommended by General Sir Francis Davies and General Sir William Birdwood.

DIX, CHARLES CABRY, Commander, R.N. Assistant Beachmaster, and later Beachmaster, at Anzac. Performed exceptionally good service under most trying conditions. Was twice wounded.

RAMSAY, THE HONOURABLE ALEXANDER R. M., Commander. Flag Commander to Vice-Admiral de Robeck, and has done exceptionally good service throughout the operations.

SEYMOUR, CLAUDE, Commander, R.N.

CUNNINGHAM, ANDREW BROWNE, Commander, R.N.

CAMPBELL, LEVESON GRANVILLE BYRON ALEXANDER, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

WYLD, HERBERT WILLIAM, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

BACCHUS, ROY, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

CLARK, JAMES LENOX CONYNGHAM, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

All Officers of the Destroyer Flotilla, and specially recommended for the good services they have performed.

CHANGE, GEORGE HAROLD DE PEYSTER, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. Has performed consistent good service on the Beaches.

HARDY, HENRY NOEL MARRYAT, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. Has performed exceptionally good service in command of a Trawler Flotilla inside the Straits, then in H.M.S. Folkestone, and lastly in H.M.S. Racoon.

GRATTAN, ERNEST LOFTUS COLLEY, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. In charge of Wireless Telegraphy at Cape Helles since 1 May. Admiral de Robeck reports that the work carried out by this Officer has been of inestimable service.

SEATH, GORDON HAMILTON, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), R.M.L.I. Has acted as Naval Observation Officer at Helles since 1 May, 1915. Has shown great enterprise and resource in his duties under very heavy fire.

JONES, RONALD LANGTON, Lieut., R.N.R. Assistant Beachmaster at Helles since 30 May, 1915. Has set a magnificent example throughout.

SINCLAIR, JOHN LEWIS, Acting Lieut., R.N.R. Has rendered valuable service on patrols and on carrying out reconnaissances close inshore in very exposed positions.

London Gazette, 14 March, 1916.—"Admiralty, 14 March, 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

DAVIDSON, ALEXANDER PERCY, Capt., R.N. In charge of Suvla covering force.

TALBOT, HENRY FITZROY GEORGE, Capt., R.N. In general charge of vessels off the beach at Helles evacuation.

LAMBART, THE HONOURABLE LIONEL JOHN OLIVE, Commander (Acting Capt.), R.N. Performed good service on the staff of Rear-Admiral Wemyss at the evacuation of Suvla and Anzac, and previously.

SOMERVILLE, JAMES FOWNES, Commander, R.N. Fleet Wireless Officer. Has had duties of exceptional difficulty, which he has performed most efficiently.

HOOD, BASIL FREDERICK, Assistant Paymaster (Acting Paymaster), R.N. Secretary to Vice-Admiral de Robeck. Has carried out very heavy duties under arduous conditions.

MULOCK, GEORGE FRANCIS ARTHUR, Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), R.N. Mainly responsible for the evacuation of the great quantity of war material and animals, and for the comparative immunity from losses amongst beach craft at the final evacuation of Helles. Took a prominent part in Suvla and Helles evacuations.

BEVAN, RICHARD HUGH LORAIN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. Performed meritorious service on the staff of Rear-Admiral Wemyss at evacuation of Suvla and Anzac.

London Gazette, 15 March, 1916.—"War Office, 15 March, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

HERBERT, GEORGE MELBOURNE, Major, 2nd Batta. The Dorsetshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and determination. He led his battalion forward against heavy odds after his senior officer had been severely wounded. On a later occasion he successfully covered a retirement with great skill and tenacity.

UTTERSON, HENRY KELSO, Major, 2nd Batta. The Dorsetshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. He led his men with marked coolness and skill when assaulting a strong redoubt. He behaved very gallantly in several engagements, during one of which he took command of his battalion when all the senior Officers had been killed or wounded, and led a successful charge resulting in the capture of the enemy's trenches.

APTHORP, SHIRLEY EAST, Capt., 96th Berar Infantry, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry. During a retirement, when it was found that two wounded men had been left behind, he immediately volunteered with a private to return some 300 yards to their rescue in face of a heavy fire from the advancing enemy. A sergeant and private were guarding the wounded men, and between them all they brought them back into safety.

DE GREY, GEORGE, Capt., 2nd Batta. The Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in the performance of his duties as Adjutant. He repeatedly crossed fire-swept zones in order to take orders, send up ammunition and direct reinforcements, until he was severely wounded. His cool bravery had twice previously been brought to notice.

JUKES, ANDREW HENRY, Capt., 9th Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army (Staff Capt., 6th Canadian Infantry Brigade). For conspicuous good service and ability as a Staff Captain, Intelligence. Capt. Jukes organized on two occasions enterprises against the enemy trenches, with marked success. His enterprise and careful training has resulted in most excellent work on the part of the Scouts.

MACINTYRE, DUNCAN EBERTS, Capt., 28th Canadian Infantry Batta. For conspicuous gallantry when leading an assaulting party after personal reconnaissance. Having reached the enemy trenches, Capt. MacIntyre acted with great promptness, and later showed great coolness and presence of mind in the selection of a suitable line of retirement.

The Distinguished Service Order

SWINBURNE, THOMAS ANTHONY STEWART, Capt., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and continuous good work in action, notably when a mine was exploded by us in close proximity to the enemy. Directly our bombers had made good the near edge of crater, Capt. Swinburne organized and controlled the digging parties to consolidate it. This work was carried out under heavy fire. Later he explored the far edge of the crater and descended the mine shaft, as it appeared that some of the enemy had been entombed by the explosion.

TAYLOR, KENNETH CHURCHILL CRAIGIE, Capt., 20th Canadian Infantry Bn. For conspicuous gallantry when leading bombers in a raid on enemy trenches. Although wounded, Capt. Taylor jumped into the trench, and disposed of several of the enemy with bomb, revolver and bayonet. Later he withdrew his men most coolly, and assisted in taking back wounded.

KNOX, ROBERT UCHTRED EYRE, Temporary Lieut., 8th Bn. The Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry. When firing a "West" gun one of the grenades landed in our own parapet. Seeing that two of his men could not possibly get under cover, he rushed to pick up the grenade and throw it over the parapet. Just as he reached it it exploded. Although by an extraordinary chance he was only slightly injured, it was a fine example of bravery. He has several times undertaken tasks requiring coolness and daring.

WARDER, RICHARD OLIVER, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), A Battery, 78th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery (Special Reserve). For conspicuous gallantry. During a heavy bombardment, when the other Officers and many men were temporarily injured and three gun emplacements had been damaged, Lieut. Warder, with one bombardier, continued to fire the fourth gun. He personally brought up ammunition from a cellar which was under fire.

London Gazette, 28 March, 1916.—" War Office, 28 March, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the undermentioned rewards for gallantry in connection with the engagement at Sollum, Egypt, 14 to 17 March, 1916. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

WESTMINSTER (DUKE OF), HUGH RICHARD ARTHUR, G.C.V.O., Major, Cheshire Yeomanry, T.F.

London Gazette, 30 March, 1916.—" War Office, 30 March, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BARKER, WILLIAM ARTHUR JOHN, Temporary Major, 8th Bn. The South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When organizing a counter-attack he was wounded in four places by a bomb, but continued to command his battalion throughout the three following days till it was relieved.

CROSFIELD, GEORGE ROWLANDSON, Major, 4th Bn. The Prince of Wales's Volunteers (South Lancashire Regt.), Territorial Force (attached 2nd Bn.). For conspicuous gallantry and good service. He repeatedly visited the front line under heavy shell fire, and during the successful assault rallied and led back to the attack men who had suffered much from artillery fire. Previously he had made an excellent and daring reconnaissance of the enemy's position.

FISHER, JOHN WILFRED, Temporary Capt., 10th Bn. The Sherwood Foresters (Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt.). For conspicuous gallantry. When the enemy blew up a portion of the front trench, he drove off their attack and skillfully organized the defence. He continued fighting long after he was wounded, and set a fine example to all around him.

GILLUM, WIDGWOOD WILLIAM, Capt., D Battery, 79th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of four forward guns, although wounded in the face and much shaken by the explosion of a heavy shell, he continued to encourage and direct his men under a fierce concentrated fire until he was a second time wounded.

GALE, ARTHUR WITHERBY, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), (Reserve of Officers) 2nd Life Guards (Commanding Trench Mortars, 3rd Division). For conspicuous good service. He took command of all the trench mortars concentrated for an attack, and made all arrangements. The fine work done by the trench mortars under his direction contributed largely to the success of the assault.

LOCH, ALEXANDER ARTHUR FRANCIS, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 1st Bn. The South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and determination. When the enemy had bombed our grenadiers out of a new post, he led a counter-attack up our sap, and with a machine-gun dispersed some thirty of the enemy who had collected. He was twice wounded, and the man by his side was killed, but he hung on till nightfall, and eventually made the post bullet-proof under very heavy fire.

MOZLEY, BERNARD CHARLES, Temporary Lieut., 6th Bn. The Dorsetshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry. When the Officers of two companies had been killed or wounded he took command, and ably organized a withdrawal. Later, though badly wounded in the arm, he dragged into safety an Officer, who was also badly wounded, under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire.

TAYLEUR, CHARLES LANCELOT OLIVER, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 110th Battery, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and good service throughout the campaign, notably on one occasion when an enemy H.E. shell had ignited several of our own H.E. shells in a gun pit. Capt. Tayleur rushed into the pit regardless of personal danger, and, by pouring buckets of water on the flames, put out the fire.

TRIPP, DONALD OWEN, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 3rd Bn. (attached 1st), The Loyal North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and determination. When he and several of his bombers had been wounded during an enemy bomb attack, he had his wounds hurriedly dressed, returned to his post, and with only a sergeant and two bombers kept the enemy at bay. When the two bombers were wounded he sent the sergeant back for reinforcements, and single-handed held up the enemy for twenty minutes till relieved.

HENDERSON, MALCOLM, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), 4th (Ross Highland) Bn. Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs, The Duke of Albany's), Territorial Force, and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry when, on photographic reconnaissance, his machine was struck by a shell from an enemy anti-aircraft gun. The shell passed through the nacelle of the machine, and took off his left leg just below the knee. In spite of this he succeeded in coming down from 7,000 feet, and landing 3,000 yards behind our line, thus saving his aeroplane and the life of the Observer.

SANDERSON, CHRISTOPHER, Temporary Second Lieut., 1st Bn. Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry. During a successful assault he led the grenadiers and personally forced the enemy's machine-guns to retire. He then, by throwing bombs, put two enemy grenadier posts out of action, and was himself slightly wounded. Later, when two enemy grenadiers appeared from behind, he went out into the open and shot them both. The capture of the enemy trench was largely due to his gallantry. He had previously distinguished himself as a sergeant.

LYALL, EDWARD, Quartermaster and Honorary Lieut., 2nd Northumbrian Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps, Territorial Force (attached 195th Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a large camouflaged was blown in by the enemy he hurried through a flooded gallery in the dark, and under heavy fire went for proto apparatus. Finding all the proto apparatus already in use, he hurried on and, although in an exhausted state, descended a shaft without any apparatus, assisted in the rescue of an officer, and then went further, rendered aid to two men, and made a most gallant effort to save two officers.

London Gazette, 31 March, 1916.—" Admiralty, S.W., 31 March, 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services in the Patrol Cruisers, under the command of Rear-Admiral Sir Dudley R. S. De Chair, K.C.B., M.V.O., during the period ending the 31st Dec. 1915. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

LAWFORD, VINCENT ADRIAN, Fleet Paymaster, R.N.

GILLESPIE, EDWARD, Capt., R.M.L.I.

London Gazette, 4 April, 1916.—" War Office, 4 April, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the undermentioned reward for gallantry and distinguished service in the field during the engagement on 26 Feb. 1916, at Agadir, Egypt. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

SOUTER, HUGH MAURICE WELLESLEY, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 14th Murray's Jat Lancers, Commanding Dorset Yeomanry, T.F.

London Gazette, 7 April, 1916.—" War Office, 7 April, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the undermentioned reward for gallantry and distinguished service on the occasion of the attack on the Hartlepool by the German Fleet on the 16th Dec. 1914. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

ROBSON, LANCELOT, Lieut.-Colonel, Durham Royal Garrison Artillery, T.F.

London Gazette, 7 April, 1916.—" Admiralty, 7 April, 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

BONE, REGINALD JOHN, Lieut., R.N., Flight Commander, R.N.A.S. In recognition of his services on the 19th March, 1916, when, flying a land machine and unaccompanied by an observer, he chased out to sea, and after bold and skilful manoeuvring, disabled and brought down by gunfire a German seaplane, which had been engaged in a raid on the coast of Kent.

SMITH, CYRIL ALDIN, Lieut., R.N.V.R. For excellent work on the nights of the 13th-14th and 14th-15th March, 1916, in connection with enterprises against the enemy's trenches south of Verlorenhoek. This officer on two successive nights went forward to the enemy's wire, superintended the laying of torpedoes and blew gaps in the enemy's wire. His conduct and gallantry were conspicuous on both occasions.

London Gazette, 15 April, 1916.—" War Office, 15 April, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

ANNESLEY, ALBEMARLE CATOR, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), The Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regt.), Commanding 8th Bn. For conspicuous ability and energy when in command of his battalion during an attack. The success of the attack and the subsequent defeat of counter-attacks were due to his foresight, energy and example.

KEELY, FREDERICK PETER CHARLES, Major, 125th Napier's Rifles, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions, notably when, after being wounded, he continued to lead his company with great coolness. Finally he escorted a badly wounded officer to a field ambulance under heavy fire, and returned at once to his post when his own wound was dressed. He has set a fine example.

OSBORN, WILLIAM LUSHINGTON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), The Royal Sussex Regt., Commanding 7th Bn. For conspicuous ability in the performance of his duties. The excellent training of his battalion and the careful attention paid to all details of organization of defence, ensured that the captured position he took over on relief was securely held, in spite of constant counter-attacks. He showed great initiative in launching counter-attacks.

COPE, THOMAS GEORGE, Capt. (Temporary Major), The Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regt.), attached 8th Bn. For conspicuous ability in supporting his own line, affording help to captured craters and gaining valuable information. Though wounded, he remained on duty till the following day.

GUBBINS, STAMER, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), The Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regt.), Commanding 9th Bn. This officer commanded his battalion in an attack, the success of which was due to the excellent organization he had established in his battalion and to the fighting spirit he had fostered in it.

MACRAE, JOHN, Capt., 1st Bn. Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs, The Duke of Albany's). For conspicuous gallantry. He took command of his battalion at a critical moment when all the senior officers had become casualties, and by his coolness and energy saved a critical situation. At one time in the darkness he fell into the hands of the enemy, but escaped by the use of his fists.

HAMILTON, SACKVILLE WILLIAM SACKVILLE, Capt., 70th Field Company, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and resource when in charge of Royal Engineers, consolidating captured craters. Capt. Hamilton's example under heavy shell and grenade fire, and his energetic dispositions, contributed largely to the success of the undertaking.

WEIR, DONALD LORD, Capt., 2nd Bn. The Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry. He took command of his battalion when his Commanding Officer had been wounded, and led it with marked ability. Later he showed great skill and coolness in withdrawing his men in the dark under heavy fire.

ABERCROMBIE, ALEXANDER RALPH, Lieut., 1st Bn. The Queen's (Royal West Surrey Regt.). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After an assault he found himself with one man only in the hostile saphead. Lieut. Abercrombie sent this man back for support, and bombed, meanwhile, along the sap. When his supply of bombs was exhausted, he fell back, and with rifle fire held the sap for three hours single-handed. He has done most excellent work.

DAWSON, WILLIAM ROBERT AUFRERE, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), The Queen's Own (Royal West Kent Regt.), attached 6th Bn. For conspicuous gallantry. Though severely wounded, Capt. Dawson rejoined his company as soon as his wounds had been dressed, remained at his post till an attack had been repulsed and was again wounded later. His example of courage, endurance and devotion to duty was one of a very high order.

BEASLEY, WALTER HENRY, Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 181st Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry. He was in charge of operations by which a large part of the enemy's gallery was destroyed. He explored their mining system until finally overcome by foul gas.

London Gazette, 17 April, 1916.—"War Office, 17 April, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for services rendered in connection with military operations in the field, with effect from 1 Jan. 1916, inclusive. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

HICKMAN, CHARLIE STEWARD, Commander, Royal Indian Marine.

COTTER, HARRY JOHN, Major, Royal Artillery, Commandant 30th Mountain Battery, Indian Army.

LODGE, FRANCIS CECIL, Major, Norfolk Regt.

MCLEOD, TORQUIL JOHN, Major, 2/7th Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army.

NELSON, JOHN WEDDALL, Major, Royal West Kent Regt.

BYBOT, NORMAN VICTOR LACEY, Major, 76th Punjab, Indian Army.

STILWELL, WILLIAM BYRON, Major, 1/4th Batta. Hampshire Regt. (T.F.).

BEARUCHA, PHIROZSHAH BYRAMJI, F.R.C.S., Capt., Indian Medical Service.

BUTTERFIELD, EDWARD, Capt., Indian Army, attached 90th Punjab.

COLAN, HARRY NORMAN, Capt., 67th Punjab, Indian Army.

DENT, WILKINSON, Capt., 103rd Mahratta Light Infantry, Indian Army.

HEWETT, GEORGE, Capt., 48th Pioneers, Indian Army.

HIBBERT, OSWALD YATES, Capt., Royal West Kent Regt.

WILSON, ARNOLD TALBOT, C.M.G., Capt., Indian Army (Political Department).

WILSON, NIGEL MAITLAND, Capt., 2/7th Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army.

London Gazette, 18 April, 1916.—"War Office, 18 April, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to appoint the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their distinguished service and devotion to duty at the Camp at Wittenberg, Germany, during the Typhus Epidemic which prevailed there from Feb. to June, 1915."

VIDAL, ALAN CUNLIFFE, Capt., R.A.M.C.

LAUDER JAMES LA FAYETTE, Temporary Capt., R.A.M.C.

London Gazette, 2 May, 1916.—"War Office, 2 May, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for Distinguished Service in the field, with effect from the 1st Jan. 1916. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

GOSTLING, ERNEST VICTOR, Lieut.-Colonel, R.A.M.C., Territorial Force.

BELL, JOHN GRENVILL, M.B., Major, R.A.M.C.

BEST, THOMAS ANDREW DUNLOP, Major, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.

BOWEN, HUGH RICE, Major, Essex Regt.

CARR, HENRY ARBUTHNOT, Major, Worcestershire Regt.

GIBBON, JOHN HOUGHTON, Major, Royal Artillery.

GREENWAY, THOMAS CATTELL, Major, South Wales Borderers.

HAMILTON, NORMAN CHIVAS, Major, Army Service Corps (Lieut.-Colonel, New Zealand Imperial Force).

HUTTON, GEORGE FREDERICK, Capt., Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

MACAULAY, ROBERT KEITH AGNEW, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Engineers.

SHANNON, WILLIAM BOYD, Capt. (Temporary Major) (Reserve of Officers), York Regt., Service Batta.

TALLENTS, GODFREY EDWARD, Capt., Lancashire Fusiliers.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

GELLIBRAND, JOHN, Major, Staff (Reserve of Officers, late Manchester Regt.).

FOSTER, WILLIAM JAMES, Capt., Staff.

London Gazette, 16 May, 1916.—"War Office, 16 May, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

SCOTT, WILLIAM HENRY, Major, 9th Light Horse Regt., Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous ability and good work. He led a small column to reconnoitre a distant enemy post, attacked it, killed several of the enemy, and brought in thirty-eight prisoners, including the officer in command. His plans were so well laid that he effected this with the loss of only one man and one horse.

SUTHER, PERCIVAL, Major, 71st Heavy Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous good work on more than one occasion as Forward Liaison Officer with the Infantry. His observations were very valuable, and greatly aided the successful work of the Artillery.

WILD, WILFRID HUBERT, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Batta. Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous ability in the training and leading of his battalion. The successful capture and occupation with trifling loss of a portion of the enemy's position was mainly due to his fine example, skill, and the efficiency to which he has brought his command.

CONGREVE, WILLIAM LA TOUCHE, Capt., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry. He consolidated a newly-won position under very difficult conditions at a critical moment, and by personal courage brought about the surrender of a considerable body of enemy officers and men.

HILL, ROBERT McCOWAN, M.B., Temporary Capt., R.A.M.C. (attached 2nd Batta., Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went to an area which was under intense bombardment, amputated the leg of a wounded officer, and attended to other wounded under most difficult and dangerous circumstances. Finally, he accompanied two stretcher cases back under shell fire.

WILSON, ROBERT EDWARD, Capt., Royal Garrison Artillery (attached 30th Mountain Battery, Indian Army). For conspicuous gallantry during a retirement. He commanded a section of guns with great ability, and finally extricated them most skilfully, having to use his revolver on the enemy, who were within 50 yards.

TYNAN, JOHN, Second Lieut., Wiltshire Regt. (attached 6th Batta.). For conspicuous gallantry on patrol duty, notably when he took out a party and successfully rushed an enemy listening post within 30 yards of the enemy's lines, and obtained important information. On another occasion he brought in with his patrol an enemy officer, sergeant and private.

London Gazette, 31 May, 1916.—"War Office, 31 May, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

FREETH, JOSEPH CASHMORE, Lieut.-Colonel, 7th Batta. South African Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and determination. With only eighteen men he established and held a position for several hours.

IRVINE, ALFRED ERNEST, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Batta. Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a critical period and continuous bombardment by the enemy lasting three days he was up with his front companies each night directing and organizing the defences. His energy, cheerfulness and splendid example were invaluable.

THOMPSON, WILLIAM JAMES, Major, 7th Batta. South African Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry. He successfully assaulted the enemy's position, compelled the enemy to retire, and held the position till dawn.

HOWARD, SAMUEL WILLIAM, Capt., 1st Batta. Connaught Rangers. For conspicuous gallantry when rallying parties of men who had become detached during operations. It was greatly due to his fine example that these men were safely withdrawn from within 80 yards of the enemy's trenches. He was also largely responsible for the capture of about fifty enemy prisoners.

INGRAM, THOMAS LEWIS, Temporary Capt., R.A.M.C. (attached 1st Batta. Shropshire Light Infantry). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He collected and attended to the wounded under very heavy fire, and set a splendid example. Since the commencement of the war he has been conspicuous on all occasions for his personal bravery.

MONBER, EDWARD MARIE FELIX, Capt. (Temporary Major), 176th Tunnelling Company, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and skill in connection with mining operations. By his energy and determination he has achieved important successes over the enemy.

OWEN, GORONWY, Temporary Capt., 15th Batta. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and determination in organizing and leading a successful raid on the enemy's trenches. Many of the enemy were accounted for, and Capt. Owen covered the withdrawal with great skill under heavy fire. Although slightly wounded, he gave assistance to wounded men.

PODMORE, HUBERT, Temporary Capt., 6th Batta. Northampton Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during a night attack by the enemy. It was largely due to Capt. Podmore that his company held its own in spite of very heavy bombardment, and repelled every attack.

ROBERTS, ROBERT JESSE ADAMS, Temporary Capt., 10th Batta. Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry. He led a party to lay a torpedo in the enemy's wire. When the torpedo failed to explode he made, with a lance-corporal, a very gallant attempt to get it back. When shown up by a bright flame emitted by the burning torpedo he was attacked at fifteen yards' distance by several of the enemy, but both he and his companion threw bombs which caused casualties, and got back safely. The torpedo was destroyed.

THOMPSON, HAROLD, Capt., Royal Scottish Fusiliers (Adjutant, 4th Batta. Territorial Force). For conspicuous gallantry and skill. He took up reinforcements to a point which was being attacked, assumed command, and, with great dash, led a counter-attack, which dispersed the enemy.

WYNTER, JOHN RAWSON, Capt., 52nd Sikhs (attached 159th Sclde Rifles), Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry. Though shot through the shoulder, he continued to lead an attack on an enemy redoubt, entered it, and held his position for some time against bomb attacks from both flanks. He then covered a flank with marked ability during the retirement, although again hit twice.

HENDERSON, GEORGE STUART, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 1st Batta. Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and determination in an attack on an enemy redoubt. On entering the redoubt he organized and led bombing parties which cleared out the enemy, of whom he personally shot five. He subsequently covered our withdrawal, and was one of the last to leave the redoubt.

KERR, WILLIAM, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 2nd Batta. Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry. During an intense bombardment and subsequent attacks by the enemy, it was mainly due to his coolness, bravery, and careful disposition that the enemy was driven off.

POPE, VYVYAN VAVASOUR, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 1st Batta. North Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a party of the enemy broke into our trench, he at once organized a counter-attack, drove them out, and, although himself wounded in two places, remained at the point of danger till all was quiet. He then had his wounds dressed, but refused to leave his duties.

DRIVER, HARRY, Temporary Second Lieut., 7th Batta. Bedfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions, notably when leading a successful raid on the enemy's trenches. He forced the enemy back into their dug-outs, entered a deep dug-out and personally bombed the occupants, shot the sentry over another dug-out, and, though himself wounded in two places, remained at the point of exit till every man was reported present. He was wounded a third time on his way back to our trenches.

SWELL, ALBERT ERNEST, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), 1st Batta. Northampton Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. He displayed great pluck in reconnoitring the enemy's trenches during several nights, and finally led a successful raid against them with great dash and skill.

The Distinguished Service Order

London Gazette, 31 May, 1916.—"Admiralty, S.W., 31 May, 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their services whilst employed on Transport duties at the Dardanelles."

LAMBERT, ROBERT CATHCART KEMBLE, Capt., R.N., H.M.S. Europa. As Beachmaster on "V" Beach on 25 April, 1915, and subsequent days, by his coolness under fire, zeal and energy, showed a magnificent example to his subordinates in a most difficult and dangerous position. Has since proved a most able assistant to the Principal Naval Transport Officer, Mudros.

MUIR, HENRY GEORGE, Commander, R.D., R.N.R., H.M.S. Sarnia. Sarnia has carried out the arduous duties of a ferry steamer, plying between Mudros and the peninsula, carrying troops and military stores, entailing constant moving and going alongside other ships. Commander Muir has handled his ship well, and it is owing to his zeal and attention to duty that the work has been satisfactorily performed under trying conditions.

EYERS, FRANK, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.R., M.F.A., Carrigan Head. Has performed meritorious service in the Eastern Mediterranean during the past nineteen months, including the saving of his unarmed ship when attacked by an enemy submarine.

BAKER, JAMES MITCHELL, Major (Temporary Major in Army).

London Gazette, 22 June, 1916.—"Admiralty, S.W., 22 June, 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

CORBETT, ROBERT GWYNNE, Capt., R.N. In recognition of his services in the cruisers engaged in the North Atlantic Patrol since the outbreak of the war.

WARDLE, THOMAS ERSKINE, Capt., R.N. In recognition of his services in command of H.M.S. Alcantara on the 29th Feb. 1916, when he engaged and sank S.M.S. Greif.

GROVES, ROBERT MARSLAND, Commander, R.N. (Wing Commander, R.N.A.S.). In recognition of his services in command of a Wing of the Royal Naval Air Service at Dunkirk. Commander Groves has by his personal skill as a pilot, and also by his untiring zeal, effected a marked advancement in the general standard of flying on active service. He has on several occasions carried out successful reconnaissances to Ostend under fire, and by his own example has proved the utility and great importance of night flying.

GERRARD, EUGENE LOUIS, Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), R.M. (Wing Commander, R.N.A.S.). In recognition of his services in command of a Wing of the R.N.A.S. in the Eastern Mediterranean. The present efficiency of this Wing is due very largely to Wing Commander Gerrard, whose personal example and the manner in which he has encouraged the younger officers under his command are all that can be desired.

SMITH, HENRY FRANK, Engineer Commander, R.N. In recognition of his services in one of the cruisers engaged in the North Atlantic Patrol since the outbreak of war.

OLIVER, DOUGLAS AUSTIN, Lieut., R.N. (Squadron Commander, R.N.A.S.). In recognition of his services on the morning of the 25th April, 1916, when he pursued out to sea the enemy fleet which had bombarded Yarmouth, and flew along the line dropping bombs, being subjected to intense anti-aircraft fire.

WILLIAMS, CHARLES ALFRED NORTON, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N.R. In recognition of his services in charge of the engine-room of H.M.S. Alcantara on the 29th Feb. 1916, during the action with S.M.S. Greif.

SAVORY, KENNETH STEVENS, Flight Lieut., R.N.A.S.

DICKINSON, RICHARD SEBASTIAN WILLOUGHBY, Flight Sub-Lieut., R.N.A.S.

In recognition of their services on the night of the 14th-15th April, 1916, when they carried out a flight to Constantinople and dropped bombs upon points of military importance, returning safely to their base after a long flight in rough and stormy weather.

MULOCK REDFORD HENRY, Flight Lieut. (Acting Flight Commander), R.N.A.S. In recognition of his services as a pilot at Dunkirk. This officer has been constantly employed at Dunkirk since July, 1915, and has displayed indefatigable zeal and energy. He has on several occasions engaged hostile aeroplanes and seaplanes, and attacked submarines, and has carried out attacks on enemy air stations, and made long-distance reconnaissances.

DALBIAC, JOHN HENRY, Lieut., R.M.A. In recognition of his services as an aeroplane observer at Dunkirk since Feb. 1915. During the past year Lieut.

Dalbiac has been continually employed in coastal reconnaissances and fighting patrols. The Vice-Admiral Commanding the Dover Patrol, in reporting on the work of the R.N.A.S. at Dunkirk, lays particular emphasis on the good work done by the observers.

London Gazette, 24 June, 1916.—"War Office, 24 June, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

GRIESBACH, WILLIAM ANTROBUS, Lieut.-Colonel, 49th Canadian Infantry Batta. For conspicuous gallantry and skill in the handling of his battalion during a heavy bombardment and subsequent attack by the enemy. On another occasion by his prompt action and fine example he was largely responsible for the rescue of several men who had been buried by shell fire.

PEACOCKE, WARREN JOHN, Temporary Major, 9th Batta. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. He organized and commanded with great skill a successful raid on the enemy's trenches, and displayed great coolness throughout. He succeeded in bringing in all his wounded in spite of heavy shell fire.

KNOTT, JOHN ESPENETT, Temporary Capt., 8th Batta. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his fine example and coolness during an enemy attack he kept up the discipline and fine spirit of his company under very difficult and trying circumstances.

MAXWELL, ARTHUR, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 8th Batta. London Regt. (T.F.). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy, after an intense bombardment, penetrated a portion of our trench, Lieut.-Colonel Maxwell, though wounded by shrapnel, personally organized two counter-attacks, and refused to leave his post till ordered next day to do so.

UNIAKKE, EVELYN WILLIAM PIERREPONT, Capt. (Temporary Major), 2nd Regt., King Edward's Horse (attached 8th Batta. Royal Irish Fusiliers). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a party of the enemy had penetrated into an unoccupied portion of our trench, he organized bombing parties, one of which he led himself, and, though twice severely wounded continued to fight till the enemy were driven out.

BRUNGER, ROBERT, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 4th Batta. Suffolk Regt. (T.F.). For conspicuous gallantry when leading a successful raid on the enemy's trenches. Although the enemy were alert and offered a strong resistance he inflicted considerable loss, and finally withdrew skillfully with only few casualties.

HAPPOLD, FREDERICK CROSSFIELD, Temporary Second Lieut., 9th Batta. North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry. When the enemy exploded a mine, he at once collected a few men, rushed up and out-bombed a far larger force of the enemy in the crater until reinforcements arrived. After being wounded he continued to lead and encourage his party.

London Gazette, 24 June, 1916.—"War Office, 24 June, 1916. The undermentioned Officers have been awarded the Distinguished Service Order, and the specific acts for which the rewards have been granted will be announced as soon as possible in the London Gazette." (See London Gazette, 27 July, 1916.)

 STORDY, ROBERT JOHN, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Army Veterinary Corps.
 WATKINS, OSCAR FERRIS, Temporary Major, East Africa Transport Corps.

London Gazette, 14 July, 1916.—"Admiralty, 14 July, 1916. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have received with much satisfaction from the officers in charge of the Auxiliary Patrol areas at home and abroad reports on the services performed by the officers and men serving under their orders during the period 1 Jan. 1915, to 31 Jan. 1916. These reports show that the officers and men serving in Armed Yachts, Trawlers and Drifters of the Auxiliary Patrol during the period in question have carried out their duties under extremely arduous and hazardous conditions of weather and exposure to enemy attack and mines with marked zeal, gallantry and success.

"The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of the services referred to in the reports mentioned above. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

HOWARD, WILLIAM VANSITTART, Capt., R.N.
 SMITH, SUTTON, Commander, R.N.
 BOOTHBY, EVELYN LEONARD BERIDGE, Commander, R.N.
 MARSHALL, WILLIAM, Commander, R.D., R.N.R.
 GIBB, ALFRED SPENCER, Commander, R.D., R.N.R.
 ARCHER, HUGH EDWARD MURRAY, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.
 VENN, GEORGE WILLIAM CAVENDISH, Lieut.-Commander (Acting-Commander), R.N.R.

"The King has also been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services in connection with the evacuation of the Serbian Army and Italian troops from Durazzo in Dec. 1915, and Jan. and Feb. 1916. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

CRAMPTON, DENIS BURKE, Capt., M.V.O., R.N.
 HATCHER, JAMES OLDEN, Commander, R.N.
 COCHRANE, MORRIS EDWARD, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

"The King has further been graciously pleased to approve of the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of the services stated. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

BRIDGEMAN, THE HON. RICHARD ORLANDO BEACONSFIELD, Commander, R.N. Commander Bridgeman displayed great courage and coolness on the 19th Aug. 1915, in command of two whalers which proceeded into Tanga Harbour. The manner in which the whalers endeavoured, though subjected to a heavy and accurate fire, to carry out their orders and board the S.S. Markgraf was worthy of the best traditions of the Royal Navy.

BRIDGES, HENRY DALRYMPLE, Commander, R.N. Commander Bridges proceeded into Sudi Harbour with two whalers on the 11th April, 1916, and remained under fire with two vessels in a very hot corner, spotting the fall of shot from H.M.S. Hyacinth to enable her to destroy a store ship which was in the harbour. In order to reach the requisite position the whalers were obliged to run up a narrow harbour, where they were confronted with a heavy fire from 4-inch guns at close range.

London Gazette, 25 July, 1916.—"Admiralty, 25 July, 1916. Officers (amongst others) specially recommended in the Despatch dated 29 May, 1916, of Vice-Admiral Sir Reginald H. S. Bacon, Commanding the Dover Patrol, reporting the operations of the Dover Patrol since 3 Dec. 1915."

GIBBS, GEORGE LOUIS DOWNALL, Commander. Commanded a Division of Destroyers with marked ability and dash in action against the enemy.
 OLIPHANT, HENRY GERARD LAURENCE, Commander, M.V.O. Commanded a Division of Destroyers in action and on patrol duties off the enemy's coast.
 HANCOCK, REGINALD LIONEL, Commander. Carried out surveying operations of considerable importance under heavy gun fire off the enemy's coast.

"Admiralty, 25 July, 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services as mentioned in the foregoing Despatch. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

GIBBS, GEORGE LOUIS DOWNALL, Commander, R.N.
 HANCOCK, REGINALD LIONEL, Commander, R.N.
 OLIPHANT, HENRY GERARD LAURENCE, Commander, M.V.O., Royal Navy.

London Gazette, 27 July, 1916.—"War Office, 27 July, 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BATTYE, BASIL CONDON, Capt. and Brevet Major, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during a period of active operations. His skill and energy in sending forward reinforcements and ammunition under very difficult circumstances tended much to the success of the operations. He had previously made a personal reconnaissance of great value.

DOPPING-HEPENSTAL, MAXWELL EDWARD, Major, 1st Battn. 1st Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry when leading his battalion in the attack under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire.

HUNT, HENRY RICHARD AUGUSTUS, Capt. and Brevet Major, 25th Punjab, Indian Army (attached 142nd Infantry Brigade). For untiring and invaluable work as Brigade Major during operations. He was continually exposed to shell fire in the performance of his duties.

KITSON, CHARLES EDWARD, Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, 2nd Battn. Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack on the enemy's trenches. He dug his men in under heavy shell, rifle and machine-gun fire, and later returned under heavy fire for a stretcher for a wounded officer. Though himself wounded by three bullets, he remained on duty till unable any longer to walk.

ROSS, JOHN ALEXANDER, Major, 24th Canadian Infantry Battn. For conspicuous gallantry. He volunteered for and carried out, with another officer, a very dangerous reconnaissance in face of heavy fire, and secured information of the utmost value regarding the enemy.

ATKINSON, GUY MONTAGUE, Capt. (Temporary Major), 1st Battn. King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous coolness and power of command. With his battalion he relieved another battalion under intense shell fire, and quickly got his men into assaulting position on an extremely difficult and open bit of ground.

CAMPBELL, ALEXANDER, Capt., 12th Field Company, Royal Engineers. For gallant conduct and excellent work during an important infantry enterprise. Capt. Campbell controlled the efforts of large working parties, and the work performed was of the greatest importance to our operations. His example and energy were remarkable. He went from point to point over ground heavily swept by fire.

DAWSON, WALTER, Temporary Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when dressing the wounded and directing stretcher-bearers in the firing line. At dusk he searched the front himself under heavy rifle fire till every wounded man had been removed.

DENE, HUMPHREY, Capt., 1st Battn. Welsh Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. When in command of an attack his arrangements were such that the enemy were taken by surprise, and he carried his objective without loss. When the enemy counter-attacked next morning, he went over the open to the front line under heavy fire, and controlled a difficult situation with great coolness and skill.

GOW, PETER FLEMING, Capt., M.B., Indian Medical Service. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on several occasions, notably when he took one end of a stretcher after three bearers had been hit, and brought in a wounded officer.

GRANT-DALTON, STUART, Capt., Yorkshire Regt. and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and resource. When on return from escort duty his observer, Second Lieut. Paris, discovered one of our machines which had been forced to land in enemy country owing to damage by hostile fire. Capt. Grant-Dalton with great gallantry landed, destroyed the machine, which was past repair, and returned ninety miles to his aerodrome with his observer and the pilot of the other machine.

HAMILTON, ERNEST GRAHAM, Capt., Connaught Rangers. For conspicuous gallantry during an enemy counter-attack. He rallied men of different regiments at a critical time and under heavy rifle fire. His efforts were successful in stopping the enemy.

HOBART, PERCY CLEGHORN STANLEY, Capt., Royal Engineers (attached 1st Sappers and Miners, Indian Army). For conspicuous gallantry when carrying out a series of dangerous reconnaissances under fire, during which he collected much useful information. On one occasion he made gallant efforts to rescue one of his escort, who was wounded; on another occasion he was wounded himself.

HOWELL-PRICE, PHILIP LLEWELLYN, Capt., 1st Battn. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry when leading a party, which he had previously trained, in a successful raid on the enemy trenches. In face of heavy opposition and uncut wire he carried through his attack with great coolness and resource, and saw every officer and man back in our trenches before he returned.

MILLER, WILLIAM ARCHIBALD, Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps, Special Reserve (attached 22nd (S.) Battn. Royal Fusiliers). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Capt. Miller followed the front line of our attack over ground swept by shell, machine gun and rifle fire. He searched in every direction for wounded, and gained valuable information regarding the situation. This he at once communicated and again continued his search for wounded. This officer has on previous occasions shown distinguished gallantry.

MURDIE, ROBERT, Capt., 5th Canadian Infantry Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. During a long continued and very heavy bombardment of his trench by the enemy he set a fine example of cool courage, and by his skillful dispositions materially reduced the casualties.

ROWLETTE, LIONEL MATTHEW, Temporary Lieut., Royal Army Medical Corps (attached 1st Battn. Welsh Guards). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a heavy bombardment he crawled across the open for a considerable distance to attend to two wounded men. Later he went out again and, although twice wounded, dressed the wounds of seven wounded men and tended them till he had to be himself removed.

TOOP, FRANCIS HART, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Gloucestershire Regt. (attached 14th Battn.). For conspicuous gallantry and ability during a successful raid on the enemy. When his C.O. had become a casualty he took charge, behaved with great gallantry, and was largely responsible for the success of the operations.

FRAME, ANDREW CARMICHAEL, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 9th Battn. Highland Light Infantry (T.F.). For conspicuous gallantry and ability. He organized and carried out with great dash a successful raid on the enemy's trenches. Many of the enemy were killed, many prisoners taken and two machine guns destroyed.

HERD, HERBERT JAMES, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), 1/7th Battn. Royal Highlanders (T.F.). For conspicuous gallantry when in command of a raiding party. Accompanied by a wounded sergeant he completed work which his bombers had failed to do. Under very heavy fire Lieut. Herd carried a wounded sergeant to safety, and on three separate occasions went out under heavy fire to look for missing men.

McCUBBIN, GEORGE REYNOLDS, Second Lieut., Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and skill. Seeing one of our machines about to engage two Fokkers he at once entered the fight, and his observer shot down one Fokker, which crashed to the ground. On another occasion when returning from a bombing raid he saw one of our machines being followed by a Fokker. He recrossed the lines to the attack and his observer shot down the Fokker. Although very badly wounded in the arm he successfully landed his machine well behind our lines.

MURRAY, SYDNEY, Second Lieut., 2nd Battn. Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and determination when leading a raid on the enemy's trenches. He personally entered a dug-out and bombed the few remaining enemy who still offered fight. It was mainly owing to his skillful organization and dash that the raid was completely successful in spite of heavy opposition.

POTTER, JOHN, Temporary Second Lieut., 1st Battn. South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry. During the storming of an enemy position he was the first man to enter it, and then with his platoon captured and held under heavy fire till reinforced an hour later a point of great tactical importance. Later he took part in the assault on another position which was taken owing to his personal gallantry and fine leadership.

VANLISSE, HAROLD BOYD, Second Lieut., 29th Battn. (attached 14th Battn.), Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and determination when leading an attacking party during a raid. He forced the wire which was uncut, entered the trench, inflicted heavy loss on the enemy and supervised the withdrawal. While forcing the wire he was wounded in the face, later he was wounded by a bullet in the neck, and finally when withdrawing he was again wounded and had to be carried in. He set a fine example to all with him.

NOTE.—The Officers who were awarded the Distinguished Service Order, as notified on page 6305 of the Gazette of 24th ultimo, are included in the foregoing list, with statement of services now specified.

London Gazette, 27 July, 1916.—“War Office, 27 July, 1916.—The undermentioned Officer has been awarded the Distinguished Service Order, and the specific act for which the reward has been granted will be announced as soon as possible in the London Gazette.” (See London Gazette, 19 Aug. 1916.)
DAVIDSON, ADRIAN NORMAN, Capt., Gordon Highlanders, Special Reserve (attached 2nd Batta.).

London Gazette, 27 July, 1916.—“War Office, 27 July, 1916. Gazetted on this date as M.C. for the following services. The M.C. was cancelled and the D.S.O. awarded for the same service.” (See London Gazette, 6 Aug. 1916.)

STANWAY, WILLIAM HENRY, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 2nd Batta. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. When the enemy exploded a large mine which wrecked some 75 yards of our trench, and then attacked in force after bombarding the spot heavily, several officers being incapacitated, Capt. Stanway, who commanded the next company, at once took charge, and after the enemy had been driven off, with great skill and coolness occupied the near lip of the crater and organized the defences.

London Gazette, 28 July, 1916.—“Admiralty, 28 July, 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointment to the Distinguished Service Order.”

FULLER, CYRIL THOMAS MOULDEN, Capt., C.M.G., Royal Navy. In recognition of the ability and success with which he organized the naval operations in the Cameroons, where he was Senior Naval Officer throughout the campaign.

London Gazette, 5 Aug. 1916.—“War Office, 5 Aug. 1916. Correction.—The announcement of the award of the Military Cross in the London Gazette of 27 July, 1916, to Lieut. (Temporary Capt.) William Henry Stanway, 2nd Batta. Royal Welsh Fusiliers, is cancelled. The Distinguished Service Order was awarded, and not the Military Cross.”

London Gazette, 18 Aug. 1916.—“War Office, 18 Aug. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for Distinguished Service in the field. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order.”

CHAMBERS, PHILIP ROPER, Brevet Major (Temporary Major), Indian Army.
CHATTERTON, GEORGE DAVENPORT LATHAM, Lieut.-Colonel, Indian Army.

COCHRAN, GEORGE WALKER, Capt. (Temporary Major), Indian Army.

COOK, CHARLES CHESNEY, Lieut.-Colonel, Indian Army.

DARLEY, JAMES RUSSELL, Lieut.-Colonel, Indian Army.

MACDONALD, ARTHUR CAMERON, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Engineers.

MACRAE, JOHN OECIL, Capt., Indian Army.

OGG, ARTHUR CHARLES, Major, Indian Army.

RENNY-TAILYOUR, JOHN WINGFIELD, Major, Royal Artillery.

TOBIN, HARRY WALTER, Brevet Major (Temporary Major), Indian Army.

WILLIAMS, LESLIE GWATKIN, Capt., Indian Army.

EAST AFRICAN FORCE.

NUSSEY, ALBERT HENRY MORTIMER, Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, South African Mounted Brigade.

WILKENS, JACOB, Major, 1st South African Horse.

London Gazette, 19 Aug. 1916.—“War Office, 19 Aug. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field.”

BIBBY, JAMES VICTOR, Temporary Capt., Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry when, during operations, he held his own three days and two nights in an exposed position, organizing and leading successful bomb attacks, and being himself constantly attacked.

COBB, ERNEST CHARLES (name Ernest corrected to Edward, 29 Aug. 1916), Capt., Northampton Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When he was knocked into a shell hole and his leg was broken in two places by shrapnel, he collected some 20 men, and though himself unable to move, formed them into a bombing post and held his own under constant fire till dark.

DAVIDSON, ADRIAN NORMAN, Capt., Gordon Highlanders, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and determination during an attack on a strong enemy position. With 50 men he reached a point and held it for seven hours till reinforcements came up, when 600 of the enemy surrendered. His tenacity was largely instrumental in the final capture of the position.

FLETCHER, HERBERT PHILLIPS, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous ability and skill in the performance of his special duties, which have been carried out at great personal risk and devotion to duty at all times.

GIMSON, EDWARD CARWARDINE, Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry when continually attending to the wounded under very heavy shell fire. He has displayed the greatest devotion to duty and contempt of personal danger.

GORDON-KIDD, ARTHUR LIONEL, Temporary Second Lieut., Special List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry, skill and determination. On one occasion he dived his machine from a height of 7,500 feet to 900 feet, and placed a bomb on the enemy's ammunition train, which set it on fire and blocked the line. A few days afterwards he performed another very hazardous undertaking well within the enemy's lines, whilst exposed the whole time to all descriptions of heavy fire.

WATKIN-WILLIAMS, PENROSE LANYON, Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry when tending the wounded for six hours in a shell crater under very heavy shell fire. He was twice knocked over by the explosion of shells, and his coat and puttees were ripped by shrapnel.

CANADIAN FORCE.

DENISON, WALTER WALBRIDGE, Major, Canadian Mounted Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry. He held on to his position under an intense bombardment, and later, after retiring in order to make a stand at another post, collected a few men and went back to gather information.

DRAPER, DENIS COLBUEN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Canadian Mounted Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry in face of the enemy. He led reinforcements to exposed points, and twice drove off determined hostile counter-attacks. Though himself wounded, he carried his mortally wounded C.O. from the firing line.

HILL, CLAUDE HARDINGE, Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry when in command of his battalion. He repelled several attacks and displayed great coolness and courage in directing bodies of men under heavy fire.

HOBBINS, ALBERT KEEFE, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in face of the enemy. He launched his battalion in counter-attack after his senior Officer had been wounded, and by his fine example and leading seized and held the position gained under heavy hostile fire.

MASON, DOUGLAS HERBERT CAMPBELL, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry when commanding an assault. He displayed great dash and, though wounded in the head and foot early in the attack, continued at his post till the objective was gained and secured.

MCALLUM, ERIC EDWARD NAPIER, Lieut., Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry. When on patrol with two scouts, one of the latter was killed and the other wounded. Although himself wounded three times in the back and once in the leg, he dressed the other man and carried him some 600 yards under shell fire into safety.

McMORDIE, STEWART PEROIVAL, Major, Canadian Pioneers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, notably when assisting to consolidate some newly-won trenches. Though severely wounded in the head and arm, he stuck to his post till the company was withdrawn.

NIVEN, HUGH WILDERSPIN, Capt., Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry when in command of his company and holding an advanced position. He repulsed the enemy and hung on to his position when he was practically surrounded and the enemy were calling on him to surrender. He continued to direct operations after being wounded.

PERRY, KENNETH MEIKLE, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry on several occasions, notably when he commanded the two first lines in an attack. He led his men with great dash through a heavy barrage of fire up to the enemy's front line. Here he was wounded in the leg and back, and compelled to retire.

STYLES, ALFRED GAVILLER, Capt., Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry. When his men had suffered severely under a heavy bombardment and the mine explosions which followed, he reorganized the remainder and held a defensive post against numerous hostile attacks. Though himself blown some distance by the blast of a shell, he continued to carry on with great coolness.

VERRETT, HECTOR BACON, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry. Although wounded by shrapnel, he stuck to his command under most trying circumstances, and assisted greatly in strengthening the position. He set a fine example to all under him.

London Gazette, 25 Aug. 1916.—“War Office, 25 Aug. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field.”

ASTON, REV. BASIL, Temporary Chaplain to the Forces, 4th Class. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. For two days and a night he worked incessantly tending and clearing the wounded under shell fire. During the night, after he had been working twelve hours, he helped to carry a wounded man to the dressing station through trenches blown in and knee-deep in mud. He then immediately went back to rescue others.

BALDWIN, RAYMOND HENRY, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He has displayed great coolness under fire as Battalion Commander, and his fine example has inspired his men. On one occasion he captured and held two lines of enemy trenches under very difficult circumstances.

BECK, EDWYN WALTER TYRELL, Temporary Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. By his fine example of coolness and courage he steadied his company under an intense bombardment. In the enemy's trenches he did fine work, personally capturing two officers and twenty men of the enemy.

BIRCHALL, EDWARD VIVIAN DEARMAN, Capt., Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. He led forward his company with great dash under heavy fire, entered the enemy's trenches, and, though dangerously wounded, refused any assistance till assured that the position won was firmly held.

BRICKWOOD, ROBERT, Temporary Capt., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and determination during a raid. He reached the enemy trenches in the face of strong opposition and himself accounted for four of the enemy. When wounded he stuck to his command till forced by his wounds to go back. It was chiefly due to his leading that the raid was successful.

BRINSON, HAROLD NEILSON, Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with great dash and skill across the open, dealt with the enemy's machine guns, and, after accounting for many of the enemy, consolidated his position and repelled a counter-attack. During the next twenty-four hours he repelled another counter-attack and did further fine work.

BROWN, OSBERT HAROLD, Temporary Capt., Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. With only one orderly he proceeded to the enemy's third line, where, collecting details of all units, he drove off two hostile counter-attacks and repelled a strong bombing attack. He held his position till relieved.

CALLAGHAN, MICHAEL AUGUSTINE, Temporary Second Lieut., Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. With a bombing party of 16 N.C.O.'s and men he went down an enemy trench repelling bombing attacks all day. Finally, owing to his vigorous and ceaseless attacks, two officers and 128 men of the enemy surrendered to him.

CALVERLEY, GEOFFREY WALTER, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry during several days of fighting. He led his company with great dash, and successfully beat off enemy counter-attacks. He helped to organize bombing attacks, which broke down the enemy's resistance, and led to the capture of a large number of prisoners.

CURRIN, RICHARD WILLIAM, Temporary Capt., York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous courage and ability in organizing the defence of front line trenches, and by personal example and total disregard of danger securing good work under heavy fire. He was instrumental in bringing in 80 wounded from exposed positions.

DEWING, ROBERT EDWARD, Capt., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when preparing for the offensive and later when consolidating positions won. Though wounded early one morning he stuck to his post all day, and drove off an enemy counter-attack with great determination.

HARRISON, AIDAN, Temporary Second Lieut., North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during several days of fighting. He displayed the greatest coolness and bravery in fighting his guns under heavy fire, and repeatedly rendered the greatest assistance to the infantry.

HARRISON, HAROLD CECIL, Lieut. and Temporary Capt., Royal Marine Artillery (attached South African Artillery, with rank of Temporary Major). For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He carried out two dangerous reconnaissances far in front of our foremost line, and brought back valuable reports. On both occasions he was under heavy shell and rifle fire. He had previously been observing from a tree when it was struck by a direct hit from an enemy gun.

HOBSON, FREDERICK GREIG, Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.) West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good work during operations. During 30 hours he continually organized parties for water and bomb carrying, and also for carrying the wounded. He collected men who had lost their way in the dark, and did fine work generally.

HUGHES, HUGH LLEWELLYN GLYN, Temporary Lieut., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations. He went out in broad daylight, under heavy fire, and bandaged seven wounded men in the open, lying out in an exposed spot for one and a half hours. At nightfall he led a party through a heavy barrage and brought the seven men back.

HUME-SPRY, CHARLES AUGUSTUS NELSON, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having been ordered to demolish with fire certain wire in front of enemy trenches, this officer went out in front of our infantry position, accompanied by his telephonist only. He crawled along till he could see the wire and there remained till his work was done. He was under heavy fire and might have been rushed at any time by an enemy patrol.

HUNTER, DOUGLAS WILLIAM, Temporary Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He tended the wounded incessantly in the open and in the front line trench under very heavy fire. When no combatant officer remained in the battalion he took command, rallied the men and set a splendid example. (See London Gazette, 26 Sept. 1916.)

JONES, DAVID ALEXANDER, Temporary Lieut., Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action and repeated fine work with his bombers. On one occasion he held an advanced post for 48 hours under heavy machine-gun fire. Throughout he showed the greatest determination.

LAMB, HENRY JOHN, Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Local Forces. For conspicuous gallantry and good work during operations. As liaison officer to the three brigades of his division he rendered most valuable assistance to brigadiers when communications were broken down by shell fire. He displayed great courage and ability.

LOOKER, ARTHUR WILLIAM, Second Lieut., Cambridgeshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry when leading a raid on the enemy's trenches. In face of heavy fire he forced his way through uncut wire and ran up and down the enemy's parapet firing in their faces. Though wounded in both hands, foot and abdomen, he refused assistance till quite close to our own trench.

MADDEN, JOHN GREVILLE, Temporary Capt., Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the leading waves of attack were wavering after losing most of their officers, he pushed forward, rallied the men and led them into the village. Later he organized and led a party which repelled a counter-attack.

MAULE, WILLIAM HARRY FOWKE, Temporary Capt., North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry when leading his company during operations. During several days' fighting he set a fine example of cheerfulness and cool courage to those around him. He was three times knocked down by the blast of shells.

MORIARTY, OLIVER NASH, Capt., Royal Garrison Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous and consistent gallantry when reconnoitring and reporting under very trying conditions, constantly under heavy shell fire. On one occasion his pluck and enterprise prevented a premature attack.

MOULD, JAMES, Temporary Lieut., Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous courage and ability in erecting a block in an advanced trench heavily enfladed by fire. The prompt measures taken checked an enemy counter-attack, and he, in addition, inflicted heavy casualties with a Lewis gun.

OGILVIE, SHOLTO STUART, Temporary Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and determination in action. He took command when his seniors became casualties, and by his energy and fine example inspired the depleted battalion, so that they maintained all the ground won against repeated counter-attacks and continuous shelling.

PEASE, HERBERT ERNEST, Temporary Capt., Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during four days of fighting. He set a fine example of dash and bravery when leading the battalion in the attack which led to the capture of the enemy's trench. Subsequently he did fine work in the consolidation of the positions won.

PETERSON, ARTHUR JAMES, Temporary Capt., Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He fought his battery for five days and nights within 400 yards of the enemy's position, in spite of heavy retaliations, and rendered the greatest assistance to our infantry. His personal bravery and devotion to duty were beyond praise.

RAMSAY, STUART, Temporary Lieut., North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the enemy attacked our trenches in greatly superior numbers he repeatedly organized and led bombing attacks against them, keeping them at a distance. He frequently reconnoitred over the parapet, which was swept by machine-gun fire, and gave valuable information to our artillery.

REID, NOEL SPENCE, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. By promptly bringing up his company he ensured the success of the leading troops, and, after assuming command when his senior officer became a casualty, did fine work in making good the position, in establishing connection with isolated troops on his right, and in repelling counter-attacks.

RICHARDSON, MORRIS ERNALD, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When he had received three wounds in the attack he refused to go back till he had given orders to his successor. He remained two hours in a dangerous spot, and then walked back to Brigade Headquarters, and personally reported the situation.

ROBINSON, HENRY HAROLD, Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After a raid in the enemy's trenches, he twice crawled out in broad daylight to assist wounded men under fire. They were brought in at night.

RUSSELL, GORDON BRUCE, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous courage and ability in the capture, with his company, of an enemy trench. He subsequently repelled violent attacks. Regardless of all personal risk he organized and directed his company. He has consistently done most excellent work.

SIM, GEORGE EDWARD HERMAN, Capt., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led forward his company with great bravery in the assault on a wood, and then advanced himself under heavy fire of all kinds to locate strong points for the defence of the wood. Finally, after putting his men to work, he was severely wounded.

SPARKS, HUBERT CONRAD, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. During an assault on the enemy's trenches he took command when his senior officer was killed, and rallied his men, who were under heavy fire, and had expended nearly all their ammunition. With a handful of men he made a most determined stand, although nearly surrounded, and thus enabled the remainder to withdraw. He was the last to leave.

SPOONER, CECIL CHARTERS, Capt. (Temporary Major), Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He crossed over 400 yards under heavy shell and machine-gun fire to take back an accurate report of the situation. He has always shown an utter disregard of danger.

TRENCH, CHARLES FREDERICK, Capt., Lancers, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry. Capt. Trench, with another officer and a party of 13 Sowars, carried a very urgent message some 12 miles through country swarming with enemy horsemen and successfully delivered it.

WILDER-NELIGAN, MAURICE, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry when commanding a raid in force. His careful training and fine leading were responsible for the success attained. Fifty-three of the enemy were killed and 24 prisoners taken, besides a machine gun, many rifles and much equipment. Though wounded in the head he stuck to his command.

WINNER, CHARLES RUPERT PETER, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He led his battalion with great dash and ability during several days of hard fighting, and showed remarkable coolness and resource.

London Gazette, 6 Sept. 1916.—"Admiralty, 6 Sept. 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

DORMAN, THOMAS STEPHEN LEWIS, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. For his gallant conduct at Reshire on the 9th Sept. 1915, when he volunteered and endeavoured to bring a machine gun into action, exposed to a heavy fire from the enemy, at about 300 yards' range. A Yeoman of Signals who accompanied Lieut.-Commander Dorman was mortally wounded.

CLARKE, WILLIAM HOWARD, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N. After his ship had been holed below the water-line in action off the Belgian coast, he kept the engines running under most difficult conditions.

EGERTON, WILLIAM MARKHAM, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.V.R.

FLEMING, ALOYSIUS FRANCIS, Staff Surgeon, R.N.

LOUGH, REGINALD DAWSON HOPCRAFT, Capt. (Temporary Major), R.M.L.I.

In recognition of their services with the Royal Naval Division in the Gallipoli Peninsula.

Extracts from despatch of Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, G.C.B., G.C.V.O., Commander-in-Chief, Grand Fleet, dated Iron Duke, 23rd Aug. 1916.

"SIR,—With reference to my despatch of 24th June, 1916, I have the honour to bring to the notice of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty the names of the following Officers who are recommended for honours and special commendation.

"Where all carried out their duties so well it is somewhat invidious and difficult to select officers for special recognition.

"THE REMARKS OF THE FLAG OR COMMANDING OFFICERS OF THE SQUADRONS CONCERNED, IN WHICH I CONCUR, HAVE BEEN INSERTED AFTER THE NAMES OF THE OFFICERS RECOMMENDED IN THE FOLLOWING LIST."

LIST OF OFFICERS RECOMMENDED FOR HONOURS FOR SERVICE IN THE BATTLE OF JUTLAND.

BLAKE, GEOFFREY, Commander, R.N. Gunnery and principal control office of H.M.S. Iron Duke, whose zeal, knowledge and devotion to duty throughout the war, and coolness and skill in action resulted in severe damage being inflicted by Iron Duke's 13.5-inch guns on a German battleship of the Koenig class in the action off the coast of Jutland on 31 May.

Remarks of Admiral Sir Cecil Burney.

CURREY, HUGH SCHOMBERG, Commander, R.N. Executive officer of Marlborough, whose untiring energy and skilful work greatly assisted in saving the ship after she was torpedoed.

SKELTON, REGINALD WILLIAM, Engineer Commander, R.N. A valuable officer whose department during the action reflected credit on his organization.

FINLAYSON, HENRY WILLIAM, M.B., Fleet Surgeon, R.N. A zealous and hardworking officer, who organized his department in an efficient manner for the action.

MURRAY, HERBERT PATRICK WILLIAM GEORGE, Staff Paymaster R.N. (Secretary to Second-in-Command). My Secretary, whose services were most valuable to me during the action.

KITSON, JAMES BULLER, Lieut.-Commander R.N. My Flag Lieut.-Commander, who was of very great assistance to me during the action.

Remarks of Vice-Admiral Sir Martyn Jerram.

SANDERS, WILLIAM CORY, Engineer Commander, R.N. A very capable and zealous officer, who showed great ability throughout the action in the working of the engine-room department.

HORNE, RICHARD, Commander, R.N. An officer of great ability, who coned Orion throughout the action with ability and skill.

CARRINGTON, JOHN WALSH, Commander, R.N. An officer of great ability, who coned King George V. throughout the action with good judgment and prompt decision. He was navigating officer of H.M.S. Inflexible in the action off the Falkland Islands and in the Dardanelles.

Remarks of Vice-Admiral Sir Doveton Sturdee.

MOON, JOSEPH AGNEW, Fleet Surgeon, R.N. Was responsible for the excellent medical arrangements for dealing with the wounded in H.M.S. Benbow, which were very efficient.

JOHNSON, CYRIL SHELDON, Paymaster, R.N. Rendered valuable services as my Secretary in keeping records and generally assisting me during the action. His name was mentioned in despatches after the Falkland Islands action.

SPENCE, ROBERT, Engineer Commander, R.N. By his general management of the machinery and stokers under his orders in H.M.S. Vanguard enabled the ship to be taken into and maintained in action in a most effective manner.

Remarks of Rear-Admiral Evan-Thomas.

WALWYN, HUMPHREY THOMAS, Commander, R.N. Commander Walwyn, from the moment the first shell struck the ship, managed to be everywhere where attention was necessary in putting out fires, plugging holes, shoring, etc., with the fire brigade and repair parties. Considering the size of the ship and the damage sustained, and also the fact that he was keeping the Captain fully informed of her condition, the work effected by Commander Walwyn in the short space of time was marvellous, and the Captain considers it greatly due to his prompt action that much water was prevented from access into the port wing and main engine rooms.

BROWNRIGG, HENRY JOHN STUDHOLME, Commander, R.N. Commander Brownrigg took charge of and conducted the operations in connection with dealing with fires and repairs to damage by shell. He was continually in positions of greatest danger, and where the conditions were most trying to the nerves. His example inspired all those under him, and he was largely instrumental in keeping the ship in effective fighting condition to the end of the action, notwithstanding the severe damage from shell fire.

Remarks of Rear-Admiral Herbert L. Heath.

INGHAM, JAMES GEOFFREY PENROSE, Commander, R.N.
KITCHING, HENRY WALTON, Engineer Commander, R.N.

Remarks of Commodore Charles E. Le Mesurier.

BICKFORD, BERTRAM RALEIGH, Staff Surgeon, R.N. For great gallantry and devotion to duty in action. This officer, though severely wounded by a shell splinter, persisted in attending to the wounded, only yielding to a direct order from myself to place himself on the sick list.

Remarks of Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty.

SPICKERNELL, FRANK TODD, Acting Paymaster, R.N. (Secretary to the Vice-Admiral Commanding Battle Cruiser Fleet). For very valuable services in the action and throughout the war.

SEYMOUR, RALPH FREDERICK, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. (Flag Lieut.-Commander to Vice Admiral Commanding Battle Cruiser Fleet). For very valuable services in the action and throughout the war.

LONGHURST, GERALD FORTESCUE, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. (now Commander). Gunner Officer of my Flagship. Controlled the fire of Lion with greatest coolness, courage and skill, and inflicted immense damage on the enemy. This is the third time he has controlled the fire of Lion in action.

MACLEAN, ALEXANDER, M.B., Fleet Surgeon, R.N. Performed his exhausting duties with the greatest zeal and courage. The medical staff was seriously depleted by casualties; the wounded and dying had to be dressed under very difficult conditions on the mess deck, which was flooded with a foot of water from damaged fire mains. Fleet Surgeon Maclean has suffered considerably since the action from his devotion to duty.

MARTELL, ALBERT ARTHUR GREEN, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N. In charge of all fire and salvage parties, and directed and led them with complete success, setting an example of coolness and vigour of action which unquestionably prevented far more serious damage.

DANNREUTHER, HUBERT EDWARD, Commander, R.N. The senior of the two surviving officers of the Invincible. Up till the moment when the ship blew up Commander Dannreuther controlled the fire of Invincible in a manner which produced visible and overwhelming results on the enemy.

MACDONALD, MALCOLM HENRY SOMERLED, Commander, R.N. For his coolness in the night action, when he extinguished the fires on mess deck, and his prompt action in preventing the fore magazine from being flooded.

BAMFORD, EDWARD, Capt., R.M.L.I. In after control when it was blown to pieces by a shell burst. Slightly burnt in face and slightly wounded in leg. Then assisted to work one gun with a much reduced crew, and controlled another gun. Assisted in extinguishing a fire, and in general showed great coolness, power of command, judgment and courage, when exposed to a very heavy fire.

PALMER, LAURENCE REYNOLDS, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. For his gallantry, when his destroyer was disabled, in proceeding to the assistance of Onslow and taking her in tow under heavy shell fire. He succeeded in towing her in a heavy sea until relieved by tugs when in sight of land.

MOCATTA, JACK ERNEST ALBERT, Lieut., R.N. Supported Commander Bingham, of Nestor, in his gallant action against destroyers, battle-cruisers, and battleships, in the most courageous and effective manner.

ALISON, ROGER VINCENT, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. For promptness and gallantry in taking advantage of the opportunity of attacking the enemy's vessels with the torpedo on two occasions, as described in my original despatch.

LEGGE, MONTAGUE GEORGE BENTINCK, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. Having defeated the enemy destroyers, gallantly pressed home attack with torpedoes on the enemy battle-cruisers.

BLAKE, CUTHBERT PATRICK, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. Having defeated the enemy destroyers, gallantly pressed home attack with torpedoes on the enemy battle-cruisers.

Remarks of Capt. Percy M. R. Royds.

VACHER, CECIL CHARLES BRITAIN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. For controlling the fire from the ship in the coolest manner from a very exposed position under extremely heavy fire.

Remarks of Capt. Waller L. Allen.

COLES, GORDON ALSTON, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. The commander of his division speaks highly of the way he coned his ship. Ambuscade fired three torpedoes, and the rapid reloading under fire reflects great credit on all concerned, and proves the ship is in a high state of efficiency.

Remarks of Commodore James R. P. Hawkesley.

HOLMES, JAMES MCALISTER, M.B., Staff Surgeon, R.N. For the very efficient manner in which the wounded were attended to whilst under fire and subsequently.

MOORE, HENRY RUTHVEN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. For the assistance he gave the Commodore (F), both during the day and night action, and the manner in which he carried out his duties.

SULIVAN, HAROLD ERNEST, Commander, R.N. As second-in-command of the flotilla he manoeuvred his half very ably during the daytime, and at night, when Castor could make no signals owing to damage by gunfire, he very ably turned his half-flotilla and kept clear of the first half-flotilla manoeuvring.

Remarks of Capt. (D) Anselan J. B. Stirling.

CHAMPION, JOHN PELHAM, Commander, R.N. Handled his division with great ability whilst in action, and led his division to attack an enemy battle squadron with great gallantry.

CORSAR, JOHN KIRK, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N. Kept his department in good order and kept the boiler water going in spite of evaporator being semi-disabled most of the time and out of action entirely for some period.

Remarks of Capt. Berwick Curtis.

TOSTEVIN, HAROLD BERTRAM, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N. This officer's organization of the engine room department and general energy at all times, keeping the machinery of the ship in a thoroughly efficient state, contributed largely to the success of Abdiel's operations on the night of 31 May, observing that the ship proceeded at full speed for over six hours.

Staff of the Commander-in-Chief (with remarks of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe).

BEST, THE HON. MATTHEW ROBERT, M.V.O., Commander, R.N. Has performed valuable staff work during the war and services during the action.

FORBES, CHARLES MORTON, Commander, R.N. My Flag Commander, who has always afforded me great assistance. This officer was Executive Officer of H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth during the whole period that ship was employed at the Dardanelles.

WOODS, ALEXANDER RIAL WADHAM, Commander, R.N. Controlled the visual signal work with great coolness and accuracy.

NICHOLSON, RICHARD LINDSAY, Commander, R.N. Controlled the wireless telegraph work with great coolness and most marked efficiency, and reaped the reward of the excellent organization for which he is responsible.

London Gazette, 15 Sept. 1916.—"Admiralty, 15 Sept. 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services, as mentioned in the foregoing Despatch. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

SULIVAN, HAROLD ERNEST, Commander, R.N.

CURREY, HUGH SCHOMBERG, Commander, R.N.

HORNE, RICHARD, Commander, R.N.

BEST, THE HONOURABLE MATTHEW ROBERT, Commander, M.V.O., Royal Navy.

WALWYN, HUMPHREY THOMAS, Commander, R.N.

WOODS, ALEXANDER RIAL WADHAM, Commander, R.N.

CARRINGTON, JOHN WALSH, Commander, R.N.

FORBES, CHARLES MORTON, Commander, R.N.

BROWNRIGG, HENRY JOHN STUDHOLME, Commander, R.N.

MACDONALD, MALCOLM HENRY SOMERLED, Commander, R.N.

INGHAM, JAMES GEOFFREY PENROSE, Commander, R.N.

BLAKE, GEOFFREY, Commander, R.N.

DANNREUTHER, HUBERT EDWARD, Commander, R.N.

CHAMPION, JOHN PELHAM, Commander, R.N.

NICHOLSON, RICHARD LINDSAY, Commander, R.N.

LONGHURST, GERALD FORTESCUE, Commander, R.N.

COLES, GORDON ALSTON, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

KITSON, JAMES BULLER, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

LEGGE, MONTAGUE GEORGE BENTINCK, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

ALISON, ROGER VINCENT, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

SEYMOUR, RALPH FREDERICK, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

BLAKE, CUTHBERT PATRICK, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

PALMER, LAURENCE REYNOLDS, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

MOORE, HENRY RUTHVEN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

VACHER, CECIL CHARLES BRITAIN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

MOCATTA, JACK ERNEST ALBERT, Lieut., R.N.

SANDERS, WILLIAM CORY, Engineer Commander, R.N.

SPENCE, ROBERT, Engineer Commander, R.N.

SKELTON, REGINALD WILLIAM, Engineer Commander, R.N.

KITCHING, HENRY WALTON, Engineer Commander, R.N.

TOSTEVIN, HAROLD BERTRAM, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

CORSAR, JOHN KIRK, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

MARTELL, ALBERT ARTHUR GREEN, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

MOON, JOSEPH AGNEW, Fleet Surgeon, R.N.

MACLEAN, ALEX., Fleet Surgeon, M.B., Royal Navy.

FINLAYSON, HENRY WILLIAM, Fleet Surgeon, M.B., Royal Navy.

BICKFORD, BERTRAM RALEIGH, Staff Surgeon, R.N.

HOLMES, JAMES MCALISTER, Staff Surgeon, M.B., Royal Navy.

MURRAY, HERBERT PATRICK WILLIAM GEORGE, Staff Paymaster, R.N.

JOHNSON, CYRIL SHELDON, Paymaster, R.N.

SPICKERNELL, FRANK TODD, Assistant Paymaster (Acting Paymaster), R.N.

BAMFORD, EDWARD, Capt., R.M.L.I.

London Gazette, 22 Sept. 1916.—"War Office, 22 Sept. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

HOUBLON, RICHARD ARCHER, Capt., Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations. He was wounded when wire-cutting under heavy shell fire, but stuck to his duty till two days later, when he was again seriously wounded. He has always shown great coolness and bravery.

BOURDILLON, LANCELOT GERARD, Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When an officer had been killed carrying in a wounded sergeant, Capt. Bourdillon went out in broad daylight, bandaged the sergeant's wounds, and only came in when certain that the latter could not live.

CANNAN, HORATIUS JAMES, Temporary Capt., Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry, during a long period of operations, in going forward to observe before positions were consolidated. On several occasions he has come in personal contact with the enemy, and acquitted himself most courageously. His reconnaissances, carried out at great personal risk, have produced much valuable information.

CAMPBELL, WILLIAM KEALTY, Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went ahead of the bearers and dressed the wounded in the open under heavy shell fire. Whilst establishing advanced dressing stations he was wounded and half-blinded by the explosion of a shell, but carried on his work. He set a splendid example to those around him.

CARTER, THOMAS HEALY HUNTON, Capt. (Temporary), Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry. When the explosion of an enemy mine wrecked a portion of the defences, Capt. Carter, though dazed by the explosion, rallied the survivors under heavy shell fire and beat off a strong enemy attack. He has constantly shown great courage.

COLLEY, FRANK, Temporary Second Lieut., York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his men to the attack under very heavy fire, and, after being wounded in the face and shoulder and put out of action for some time, he insisted on returning to the front line. Here he continued to do fine work, and was only stopped by being hit again in both wrists.

DAVIS, SIDNEY ALFRED, Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), General List, Commanding Trench Mortar Battery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He worked his guns with great skill and courage, repelling three counter-attacks. Finally he carried his wounded to the dressing station under heavy fire.

ELLIS, ARCHIBALD JENNER, Major, Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his reserve under very heavy machine-gun fire till he was severely wounded. After this he continued to direct operations and to reorganize men in "No Man's Land."

EVANS, HENRY COPE, Temporary Second Lieut., General List (attached Royal Flying Corps). For conspicuous gallantry and skill on many occasions in attacking hostile aircraft, frequently against large odds. In one fortnight he brought down four enemy machines, returning on one occasion with his machine badly damaged.

FRASER, ARTHUR WILLIAM, Temporary Second Lieut., Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. After suffering heavy casualties he led his company up to the enemy wire at a place where it was uncut. Though severely wounded, twice by bombs and once by rifle fire, he continued to direct the wire-cutting till he lost consciousness.

GALLAUGHER, HENRY, Temporary Lieut., Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When other officers became casualties he took command and led on his men with great dash. Seeing the enemy firing on our wounded, he got into a shell hole with a private, and shot six enemy snipers with a rifle. Finally he volunteered and with 20 men rescued 28 wounded men under very heavy fire.

GLOVER, GEORGE WRIGHT, Second Lieut., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Though twice wounded in the advance, he continued to lead his men forward under heavy machine-gun and artillery fire into the enemy's third line, where he organized the defences. Although his left arm was useless, he threw bombs as long as there was any supply. He set a splendid example all day.

GOUGH, ROLAND IVOR, Temporary Capt., Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his men with great dash under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, and, though his company suffered severely, he reached the enemy's trenches, where he was dangerously wounded. Nevertheless he continued to direct his men until exhausted.

GRANT, IAN CAMERON, Capt., Cameron Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the attack was wavering he went forward into the front line and cheered on the troops till he was badly wounded. As Brigade Major he has set a fine example to all the officers in the brigade.

HALL, HENRY SIDNEY HOFFMAN, Temporary Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry when leading his company in two attacks, and consolidating and holding a new line at a very critical time, until blinded by a wound, and forced to give up his command. He displayed the greatest coolness and bravery, and set a fine example to both officers and men.

HANOE, HENRY MALKIN, Second Lieut. (Temporary Major), Reserve of Officers, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry during mining operations. He has done fine work and has set an example of great courage and determination under very hazardous conditions.

HOBSON, ALLEN FABER, Second Lieut. (Temporary Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions. By his absolute coolness in danger he has set a magnificent example to his company and has carried out important work under trying conditions.

HOPKINSON, JOHN OLIVER, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion against the enemy trenches, captured them, and held his ground for 13 hours under heavy fire, repulsing constant attacks. He continued to command after being wounded.

JONES, JAMES WALKER, Capt., M.B., Indian Medical Service. For conspicuous gallantry and presence of mind in closing with a soldier who had lost his reason and was moving along a trench prior to an attack with a bomb in each hand. Realizing the situation, Capt. Jones closed with him, and wrenched one bomb from his hand. It immediately started to burn. Capt. Jones threw it some yards away, and it burst on touching the ground. Two officers were injured by the explosion, and several others might have been injured but for this prompt and courageous action.

KELLY, JOHN UPTON, Capt., Wiltshire Regt. and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and skill on several occasions. When making a reconnaissance he came down to 700 feet under heavy fire, and obtained valuable information. Again, in attempting to observe through clouds, he flew over the enemy lines at 500 feet, and although severely wounded and almost blind, he brought his machine back to our lines.

LAURIE, JOHN EMILIUS, Capt., Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry in action. At a critical time he rallied men of various units who were without leaders, did fine work consolidating the position and helped to repel a bomb attack.

McCALLUM, JOHN DUNWOODY MARTIN, Temporary Capt., Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry in action. As senior officer with the battalion he controlled the operations with great skill and courage. He organized the consolidating of the position, moving about utterly regardless of personal danger and encouraging his men.

McCLYMONT, ROBERT ARTHUR, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry. For several days he cut the enemy's wire, using an observation post which was exposed to heavy shell fire. Later, during an advance, he maintained communication with his battery, and was enabled to cut hostile wire and frequently to bring the fire of his battery to assist our infantry advance and to resist enemy counter-attacks.

McNAMARA, ARTHUR EDWARD, Major, Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. When acting as liaison officer between divisional headquarters and brigades he visited all brigade and battalion headquarters under very heavy shell fire. When both his orderlies were wounded he dressed their wounds under fire. After returning with his report he went out again, and when another orderly was wounded dressed his wounds also. While doing so a piece of shrapnel passed through his own clothing.

MILES, LANCELOT GEORGE, Temporary Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He handled his company with great skill and coolness during a heavy bombardment. He also led his company with great dash in an assault during which he captured four machine guns. During the attack he was severely wounded by a bomb.

MILLER, ALLISTER MACKINTOSH, Temporary Capt., Cavalry, and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and skill when attacking troops on the ground under heavy fire. On one occasion he flew close to the ground along a line of hostile machine guns, engaging them with his machine gun, drawing their fire, and enabling the cavalry to advance. Again, when alone, he engaged five enemy machines, bringing one down, and also successfully bombed a troop train, coming down to 300 feet to make sure of hitting.

MONTGOMERY, WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Temporary Capt., Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry in action. For five hours he fought a running fight in the trenches, and held up the enemy's advance. Eventually he threw bombs himself till utterly exhausted, when he had to be carried to our lines. He set a splendid example all day.

PAUL, COURTENAY TALBOT SAINT, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. During two days his battery and observing station were subjected to very heavy shell-fire. His coolness and utter disregard of danger gave great confidence to his battery, and he carried out wire-cutting with great success.

BAIKES, GEOFFREY TAUNTON, Capt. (Temporary Major), South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led forward his reserve under very great difficulty with the greatest coolness and courage. After dark he personally supervised the withdrawal of his wounded.

SANDYS, EDWIN THOMAS FALKNER, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry when leading his battalion and keeping its direction during an attack under very heavy fire. Although wounded in several places, he continued to lead it until further wounds made it no longer possible to do so. The fine behaviour of the battalion was largely due to the Commanding Officer's personal qualities.

SLADE, ERNEST COWPER, Capt. (Temporary Major), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He organized with great skill bombing attacks, in order to reach two companies which were isolated in a trench further north. On another occasion he was twice buried by shells in one night, but dug himself out and carried on as if nothing had happened.

SUGDEN, JOHN EDWIN, Temporary Capt., Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He took command of a battalion when his C.O. was killed at a critical moment in the advance. Under heavy machine-gun and trench mortar fire he handled the two leading companies with great skill and courage. Later he went back to fetch the two remaining companies. By his courage and fine example he kept the battalion together and reached the enemy line.

VAUGHAN, PHILIP EDMUND, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. After a long advance under very heavy machine-gun fire his battalion was held up by wire, but with another officer he forced his way through, got his men into a village, consolidated and held his position there, and captured over 150 prisoners and ten machine guns.

WESTERN, BERTRAM CHARLES MAXIMILIAN, Capt. (Temporary Major), East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. After a long advance over the open under heavy machine-gun fire, he assisted his C.O. to force a way through wire. They led on the men into a village, and held on to their position there, capturing over 150 prisoners and ten machine guns.

WILSON-CHARGE, JOHN ALEXANDER, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He organized a bombing attack which gained 220 yards of trench. After he had left it, the bombing party was driven back. He returned, and had succeeded in capturing some of the lost ground, when he was wounded.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

COOPER, VIVIAN STEWART, Lieut., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He repulsed a strong enemy counter-attack, and, when his battalion was relieved, remained in the position. When the enemy attacked he opened fire on them from a point which he had selected, killing large numbers. Ninety-one prisoners were taken by his battalion, 20 surrendering to Lieut. Cooper.

KINGSMILL, HORACE FREDERICK, Major, Australian Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and fine work during an attack, when acting as liaison officer, constantly under heavy fire. Without the clear and quick information supplied by him, the support given by the brigade would have been impossible.

LAWRANCE, STANLEY NORMAN, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack, when, although severely wounded, he continued to direct operations, and, in spite of great difficulties, consolidated and maintained his position, remaining at his post until overcome by loss of blood.

LODGE, AUGUSTINE BERNARD, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and skill in reconnoitring a position under heavy fire prior to an attack, and subsequently in leading the attacking force to their place of assembly. After one company had lost all its officers, Capt. Lodge went forward, rallied the men, and cleared the trench which was obstructing the advance. Although wounded, he continued his work until the objective had been gained.

MATHER, LESLIE FRANK STRANG, Major, Australian Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and consistent good work since the commencement of the campaign, and until he was wounded leading his company into action under heavy shell fire.

MEDCALF, FERDINAND GEORGE, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry when, in leading his company in an attack, he put the crew of a hostile machine gun out of action with a bomb and captured the gun. He showed unflinching courage and resource in holding captured ground. When wounded in three places, and unable to walk, he ordered the stretcher-bearers to take up a seriously wounded man, and to leave him to crawl to the rear.

MOORE, DONALD TICEHURST, Major, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry when leading his men during an attack under very heavy shell fire. He led through an intense barrage to an advanced position in the line just captured.

OATES, AUGUSTUS, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations in holding the enemy at bay on several occasions with revolver fire, thus enabling the erection of barricades and the evacuation of the wounded. He also organized and led bombing attacks with great courage and skill.

SAVAGE, PERCIVAL JAMES, Capt. (Temporary Major), Australian Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during a period of operations under very heavy shell fire. The good work done by his company was due to his untiring energy and fine powers of leadership.

VOWLES, ALAN STEWART, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership during a period of operations, when he commanded the greater portion of three companies in the front line with great success and ability. His cool appreciation and handling of the situation enabled the position to be held against counter-attack, and under heavy shell fire.

CANADIAN FORCE.

KILMER, CHARLES EDWARD, Capt., Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He led with great skill a successful daylight attack on the enemy's trenches. Though severely wounded, he was the last man to withdraw after all his party, including the wounded, had got clear.

London Gazette, 26 Sept. 1918.—"War Office, 26 Sept. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BALL, ALBERT, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), M.C., Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and skill. Observing seven enemy machines in formation, he immediately attacked one of them and shot it down at 15 yards' range. The remaining machines retired. Immediately afterwards, seeing five more hostile machines, he attacked one at about ten yards' range and shot it down, flames coming out of the fuselage. He then attacked another of the machines, which had been firing at him, and shot it down into a village, when it landed on the top of a house. He then went to the nearest aerodrome for more ammunition, and, returning, attacked three more machines, causing them to dive under control. Being then short of petrol he came home. His own machine was badly shot about in these flights.

BRISCOE, GEORGE SETON, Capt. (Temporary Major), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. During the attack he made untiring efforts under heavy shell fire to get consolidating parties forward to the newly-captured position. He led them personally until severely wounded.

BROUGHTON, NORMAN WOLFORD, Temporary Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations. During a very heavy bombardment he, on three occasions, helped to dig out men from blown-in dug-outs. Shells were bursting all round him, but he refused to take cover, and it was mainly due to his efforts that most of the buried men were rescued. He has done other fine and gallant work.

BUTCHER, HERBERT CECIL, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), Royal Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the battalion was suffering severe casualties it was largely due to his courage and utter disregard of personal danger that there was no check in the advance. When his C.O. was wounded he took command of the battalion, and displayed the greatest coolness and devotion to duty at a critical time.

CARMICHAEL, IAN, Temporary Second Lieut., Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry. He led a raid with great dash, jumped into the enemy's sap, killed two of the enemy, wounded another and took one prisoner. He was himself wounded. Subsequently he went out twice into "No Man's Land" and rescued wounded men.

CAZALET, GUY LANGSTON, Temporary Capt., M.C., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company in the attack, and held 500 yards of the trench won, although twice heavily counter-attacked by the enemy, who used liquid fire, bombs and rifles. Though wounded, he cheered on his men and refused to leave the trench.

CROSHAW, OSWALD MOSLEY, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When attached to Brigade Headquarters, he twice voluntarily passed through a very heavy artillery and machine-gun barrage, and brought back accurate information of the situation.

FEARENSIDE, EDMUND, Temporary Capt., Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led up two companies of reinforcements, over some 1,800 yards of open ground swept by machine-gun fire, into a village. Here he rallied his men and organized a further attack. He displayed the greatest coolness and courage.

FIFOOT, EDGAR LYN, Temporary Second Lieut., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. During the attack he made his way along a trench to get into touch with the battalion attacking on his right. He took several prisoners, and finally built a barricade when held up by the enemy's bombers. He was severely burnt in the enemy's liquid fire attack, but stuck to his duty and did further fine work.

FRASER-TYTLER, NEIL, Capt., Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. On several occasions he displayed the greatest coolness and courage under heavy shell fire, when ranging his own and other batteries from exposed positions. He has done other fine work and has set a splendid example.

GILLSON, ROBERT MOORE THACKER, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel) Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Under very heavy fire he attacked and captured a wood. Though wounded himself he resumed command when he heard that the next senior officer had been killed, and remained on duty till loss of blood compelled him to hand over to his Adjutant.

GRINLINTON, JOHN LIESCHING, Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry during several days of operations. As F.O.O. he sent back invaluable information. He was twice knocked over by shell-bursts, and his pluck and cheerfulness exercised great influence on his battery.

HALL, JOHN HAMILTON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion to consolidate a mine crater in the enemy's front line. In spite of very heavy casualties, he conducted the operation with the greatest determination, and succeeded in holding his position all day.

HILL, JOHN CHARLES HOLDEN, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the attack was held up by flanking fire, he ordered his men back and was the last to re-enter our trenches. After rallying his men, he went out 100 yards into "No Man's Land" and partly carried and partly dragged a wounded man back into safety. The enemy were sniping at them the whole time.

JESSUP, WILLIAM HENRY GRAY, Temporary Second Lieut., Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. When the enemy launched a heavy bomb attack on the flank of our attacking troops, he met them with a party of eight bombers and drove them back. The whole party except himself and one man became casualties. But, collecting another party, he held on for 24 hours under continuous fire in his isolated position.

MACFARLANE, WILLIAM MACCALLUM, Temporary Major, Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. Just as the relief of his company had been completed, the enemy made a strong bombing counter-attack, which drove back the relieving troops. Major Macfarlane at once led his company back to its original position, and repelled the counter-attack. He set a fine example of cool courage.

McKAY, ROBERT JAMES, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Though wounded early in the attack, he stuck to his post and seized a portion of the enemy's line with a small party of about 20 men. This he held against repeated attacks till he was forced back by overwhelming numbers four hours later.

O'DONNELL, ALBERT BERNARD, Temporary Second Lieut., Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. During an attack, when all his senior officers had become casualties, he took command, led the companies on, and captured the enemy's trench. He then reorganized the company and consolidated the defences. He himself shot six of the enemy in the trench.

PASK, ISAAC ARTHUR JAMES, Capt., M.C., Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He displayed the greatest coolness during a very heavy bombardment, and carried on after a shell had blown him across a gunpit and slightly wounded him. His dugout has twice been hit, and he has constantly gone out through a heavy barrage to observe fire. He put out a fire, although surrounded by ammunition and under heavy fire.

PROCTOR, WILLIAM HOWARD, Temporary Lieut., North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He supported a bomb attack on a strongly held trench. When the attack was checked, he at once joined in with great determination and carried the whole attack forward. Though wounded by a bullet through the jaw, he led his men on till exhausted by loss of blood.

PERKS, ROBERT OLEMET, Temporary Second Lieut., West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. When leading a bombing party, he was wounded in the face and rendered insensible. On recovering, he again took part in the attack. While throwing bombs he was again twice wounded, in the hand and foot, but continued to lead his men till rendered unconscious by a fourth wound in the face.

SELOUS, FREDERICK COURTENAY, Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry, resource and endurance. He has set a magnificent example to all ranks, and the value of his services with his battalion cannot be over-estimated.

TAYLOR, ARTHUR CHARLES, Temporary Second Lieut., Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Seeing a large number of men of another unit who had lost their bearings, he went out, and, finding that they had lost their officers, reorganized them, directed them where to dig in, and thus enabled the ground won to be held. Later, he did other fine work.

TURNER, ERNEST GILBERT, Second Lieut., Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. By a combined bombing operation with another platoon, he cut off and captured 63 of the enemy. Two days later he did fine and gallant work during an attack, and afterwards returned, under close machine-gun fire, and rescued wounded men.

WALSH, RICHARD KNOX, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Scottish Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He commanded the supporting battalion in the attack, and displayed great skill and courage. He was in charge of the captured village until relieved. Nine days later, when his battalion captured another position, he held on to it for 36 hours with great ability and determination. He has done other fine work.

WYNNE, FRANCIS GEORGE, Capt. (Temporary Major), North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. When the enemy, in overwhelming numbers, attacked our trenches, he remained at his post, though wounded and unable to stand, until the enemy were beaten off. He not only commanded his own company, but took charge of another, the officers of which had become casualties.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BEARDSMORE, ROBERT HENRY, Major, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Though wounded early in the engagement, he proceeded, without waiting to have his wounds dressed, to organize his company as a working party, and supervised the work for about ten hours. He did fine work throughout, and displayed great coolness and courage.

COULTER, LESLIE JACK, Major, Australian Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. When a "Push Pipe" failed to explode he went out, accompanied by a corporal, under heavy shrapnel and machine-gun fire, and blew up the exposed portion of the "Push Pipe." Later, when the leads were cut by hostile shell fire, he went out under very heavy fire to try and light the fuse further down the sap. Though wounded he refused to be removed till the "Push Pipe" had been successfully exploded.

CURRIE, PATRICK, Major, Australian Infantry. For consistent gallantry and good work during operations, notably on one occasion, during an attack, when he jumped over the parapet exposed to heavy fire in order to cheer on his men. He was subsequently wounded.

DEVONSHIRE, WILLIAM PENDENNIS, Capt., Australian Infantry. For consistent good work during operations, notably when he took charge of all the men of his battalion in the first captured enemy trench, and, after repulsing a counter-attack, led them on and captured further enemy positions.

HARPER, ROBERT RAINY, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led an attack on the enemy trenches, and, though wounded before reaching the enemy, stuck to his command and entered their trenches. He was almost immediately again wounded by a bomb, but remained at his post for over an hour. He refused to be removed till he had seen all his men in safety.

KENNEDY, REV. JOHN JOSEPH, Australian Army Chaplain Department. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried wounded men from the front trenches to the dressing station under very heavy shell fire throughout the whole night, returning repeatedly to the firing line. He also assisted in dressing wounded men, and did most gallant work throughout.

MARSDEN, THOMAS ROY, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He took charge of six guns in the front line, and remained in action all night. Finally with these guns he covered the retirement of our infantry, and then carried a wounded man back across "No Man's Land." Later he went forward again and carried in a sergeant.

MARSHALL, ALFRED, Lieut., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He displayed great skill and courage as Adjutant, when guiding a battalion into its position for attack across "No Man's Land" under heavy shell fire. On another occasion he did fine work consolidating the captured trench.

MAUGHAN, JOHN MALBON, Major, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during a bomb fight. He stood before the parapet firing a "Very" pistol, to light up the ground for his bombers. He was exposed to enemy snipers' fire from "No Man's Land," and the continual firing of his pistol showed his position. Finally he was wounded.

HUNTER, DOUGLAS WILLIAM, Temporary Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps. For exceptional gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer laboured incessantly tending and clearing the wounded in the open and in front line trenches under very heavy fire. At a critical time when casualties had been heavy he steadied and reorganized his stretcher bearers by his magnificent example and skilful control. After the battalion had withdrawn he continued searching the battlefield for wounded. He showed absolute disregard of danger. (Substituted for the announcement published in the London Gazette dated 25 Aug. 1916.)

The undermentioned have been awarded a Bar to their Distinguished Service Order for subsequent acts of conspicuous gallantry.

BALL, ALBERT, Lieut., D.S.O., Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt., and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous skill and gallantry. When on escort duty to a bombing raid he saw four enemy machines in formation. He dived on to them and broke up their formation, and then shot down the nearest one, which fell on its nose. He came down to about 500 feet to make certain it was wrecked. On another occasion, observing 12 enemy machines in formation, he dived in among them, and fired a drum into the nearest machine, which went down out of control. Several more hostile machines then approached, and he fired three more drums at them, driving down another out of control. He then returned, crossing the lines at a low altitude, with his machine very much damaged. (The award of the Distinguished Service Order is also announced in the Gazette of this date.)

GOSCHEN, ARTHUR ALEC, Major, D.S.O., Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. When a heavy shell knocked out one of his guns and buried several men he immediately commenced to dig them out, under very heavy shell fire, and, with assistance, rescued them all. On another occasion, when a pile of H.E. ammunition was ignited by a shell, he succeeded in extinguishing the flames at very great personal risk.

(The Distinguished Service Order was awarded in the London Gazette dated 27 Sept. 1901.)

MATTHEWS, ALEC BRYAN, Lieut., Royal Engineers.

MCKENNA, JAMES CHARLES, Capt. (Temporary Major), Rajputs.

MURPHY, LEO, Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps.

PEEL, BASIL GERARD, Capt., Pioneers.

REILLY, HUGH LAMBERT, Capt. and Brevet Major, Punjabis and Royal Flying Corps.

REYNE, GERARD VAN ROSSUM, Capt., Punjabis.

SMITH, HENRY BROKE, Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Field Artillery.

SWEET, ROY THORNHILL, Lieut., Gurkha Rifles.

THOMSON, HERBERT GUY, Major, Royal Field Artillery.

London Gazette, 20 Oct. 1916.—"War Office, 20 Oct. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

ALEXANDER, THE HONOURABLE HAROLD RUPERT LEOFRIC GEORGE, Capt., M.C., Irish Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He was the life and soul of the attack, and throughout the day led forward not only his own men but men of all regiments. He held the trenches gained in spite of heavy machine-gun fire.

ANSTRUTHER, PHILIP NOEL, Capt., M.C., Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When sent forward to report on the situation, he found some 150 men scattered about the edge of a wood with no officers. He rallied them and pushed on to the final objective, consolidated his position, brought five machine guns into action, and maintained his position against attacks from three sides.

BAILEY, FRANCIS WILLIAM, Surgeon-Major, Royal Field Artillery (Medical Officer). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the batteries of his brigade came under heavy shell fire, he at once went out to tend the wounded and dying in the open with utter disregard of danger.

BARKER, RANDLE BARNETT, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He took over and organized the defences of a wood with great skill, after making a personal reconnaissance of the whole wood under shell and machine-gun fire. He has done other fine work, and has displayed great personal bravery.

BARRINGTON-WARD, VICTOR MICHAEL, Temporary Major, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry. During a fire at an ammunition depot he took an engine between sheds where ammunition was exploding, and brought back 15 men who were exposed to considerable danger.

BELL, MICHAEL CHARLES, Capt., M.C., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and skilful handling of his company in attack. His organization and initiative were very marked. For ten days previous to this attack he had worked untiringly in preparation. He remained at duty though wounded.

BELLINGHAM, EDWIN HENRY CHARLES PATRICK, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He took command of the two leading battalions when the situation was critical, and displayed the greatest determination under shell and machine-gun fire. The success of the operation was largely due to his quick appreciation of the situation, and his rapid consolidation of the position.

BOSCAWEN, THE HONOURABLE MILDMAY THOMAS, Capt., M.C., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry in action. During two separate fights he showed great coolness and ability. He kept his C.O. informed of the situation by observing from a place which was heavily shelled all the time.

BROWNE-CLAYTON, ROBERT CLAYTON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel) (Reserve of Officers), South Irish Horse. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during five days of operations. He commanded his battalion with great coolness, and inspired his men with a fine fighting spirit.

BULL, PHILIP CECIL, Temporary Capt., Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When he alone was left out of the officers of two companies, he rallied both of them, organized the defences of the captured position, and held it with great determination. Later, he repelled an enemy bombing attack.

CARTER, WILLIAM HENRY, Lieut. (Temporary Major), M.C., South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He commanded the battalion after his C.O. was wounded, and displayed great skill and personal courage. He went about everywhere encouraging his men and making personal reconnaissances during three days of heavy fighting. He set a fine example to his command.

CLAY, BERTIE GORDON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous ability and good service during prolonged operations. The success of his battalion in the attack was largely due to his fine personal example and resource.

COLQUHOUN, SIR IAIN, Bart., Capt., Scots Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with the greatest dash during the day, and with a few men reached the enemy's second line, which was full of bombers. He personally accounted for six of them, and knocked over several others with a stick. He has done other fine work.

COSSART, ARTHUR RALEIGH BLANDY, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and good service. He was in command of a group during two prolonged periods of operations, and was largely responsible for the accurate shooting and the success achieved by the artillery, owing to his skill and careful organization.

CROOK, FRANCIS JOHN FIELDING, Temporary Major, Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and ability when in command of a battalion. Covering the left flank of our Allies in attack he carried out a difficult task with much skill. The success of the operation was very largely due to his ability.

DENISON, EDWARD BRIDGEMAN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), M.C., King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion in the attack with great skill and courage, and was completely successful. He displayed an utter disregard of personal safety, and set a fine example to his command.

DOBBIN, HERBERT THOMAS, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Warwickshire Regt. (Corrected to Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, attached Gloucestershire Regt. [London Gazette, 10 Jan., 1917.]) For excellent handling of his battalion while temporarily in command, notably on two occasions, when he captured, respectively, 500 yards and 400 yards of the enemy's trenches.

FLUKE, WALTER GEORGE, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He got up to the support line through a heavy barrage, and reorganized the line when all the officers had become casualties. On another occasion he led a bombing attack, although his company were much exhausted, and forced his way along the enemy trenches in an endeavour to reach a party of men who had been cut off. He showed an utter disregard of personal safety.

FOLLIT, CHARLES ALBERT ROY, Temporary Capt., Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. During our deployment in a wood the enemy twice attacked, and we came under heavy fire. It was mainly due to Capt. Follit's fine work that the deployment was completed. He also did most gallant work reconnoitring the enemy wire.

FRANCIS, ROBERT, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Though wounded during the morning, he led his company in the attack in the afternoon with the greatest gallantry. When hung up by machine-gun fire, he moved backwards and forwards under heavy fire, bringing up men to the firing line. Though again wounded, he remained with his company for five hours in the open. On previous occasions he has shown similar gallantry.

GRENFELL, ARTHUR MORTON, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry. He rallied a considerable number of men who were retreating, and, with some of his own working party, led them forward and consolidated a position under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. Later, while trying to get a wounded officer back to safety, he was himself wounded.

GWYNNE-JONES, ALLAN, Second Lieut., East Surrey Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He rallied the men of two companies which had lost their officers, and succeeded in gaining a footing in the enemy's position, gradually working the enemy out of it and consolidating his position under heavy shell-fire. On the previous day he carried out a daring reconnaissance and was slightly wounded.

HALL, PHILIP SANSFIELD, Temporary Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), West Yorkshire Regt. During the short time he has been in command of a battalion he has, by his personal example and initiative, created a fine soldierly spirit throughout all ranks. He has shown conspicuous ability as a leader in all situations.

HARMAN, ALEXANDER RAMSAY, Lieut.-Colonel, Worcestershire Regt. For the excellent handling of his battalion, notably when clearing the enemy's trenches with great determination during several consecutive days.

HARRISON, ROLAND DAMER, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He commanded and fought his battery with great skill, and went out in front of our infantry advance posts in search of O.P.'s. During many days of operations he showed great courage and devotion to duty.

HEATON, DAVID RIMINGTON, Temporary Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When his battalion had suffered heavy casualties and was unsupported, he led a bombing party and drove the enemy up a communication trench. He then cleared the enemy third line trench, taking 163 prisoners. Finally he rallied all troops near him and led them on to the final objective.

HEWETT, EDWARD VINCENT OSBORNE, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), C.M.G., Reserve of Officers, South Wales Borderers. For consistent gallantry and good service. During a prolonged period of operations he has, by his fine example and good leading, done excellent work with his battalion.

HOARE, WALTER JOHN GERALD, Temporary Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. With two sergeants, one of whom was wounded by the intense shell-fire, he dug out a buried sergeant and rescued him alive. He has done fine work throughout the operations.

HOPLEY, FREDERICK JOHN VANDER BYL, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Grenadier Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He showed fine leadership throughout the attack, in spite of being wounded himself, and of severe casualties among his men. He stuck to his position on the extreme flank throughout the day, though exposed to machine-gun fire, until the battalion was relieved.

HUNT, JOHN PATRICK, Temporary Capt., Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He formed and held a defensive flank for ten hours, until relieved, under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, thus frustrating the enemy's attempt to turn the flank.

PIGOT, ROBERT, Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and ability in action. During three days, operations he commanded his battalion with great skill and determination, and was entirely successful. During the operations three enemy officers and 79 men were captured, and also three machine guns.

INGLIS, ARTHUR MACQUELOCH, Capt., Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He brought his "Tanks" forward over very difficult ground. Although one of the wheels of his own "Tank" was blown off early by a shell he succeeded in reaching his objective and manoeuvring throughout the whole operation.

INGLIS, HAROLD JOHN, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), M.C., South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with great dash in the attack. When checked he went forward with a sergeant and private and captured nine of the enemy, at the same time gaining another 80 yards of trench.

IRWIN, ALFRED PERCY BULTEEL, Capt. (Temporary Major), East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the battalion was in danger of being hung up owing to heavy casualties and severe opposition he went forward, formed up the men as if on parade, and personally led them to the final objective.

JANTON, CLAUDE WILSON, Temporary Second Lieut., East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When he was the only officer left in his company he led it on with great determination. He personally led bombing parties down the enemy's trenches and cleared the first four lines of them. It was due to his good leading and pluck that the company reached its objective.

KELLY, EDWARD HENRY, Capt., M.C., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He organized and directed the concentration and deployment of the brigade by night with great skill. When the attack was hung up by uncut wire he personally reconnoitred under very difficult conditions, and organized bombing attacks from both flanks. It was mainly due to his fine work that 1,000 yards of trench were taken and 300 prisoners captured.

KEMP-WELCH, MARTIN, Capt. (Temporary Major), M.C., Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good service in action. When the battalion had suffered severely and matters had come to a standstill, he went forward, reorganized the battalion, restarted the attack, and carried it through to a successful conclusion.

LUCAS, LEONARD WAINWRIGHT, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), M.C., East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability when commanding his battalion, which captured in attack many prisoners and two machine guns. He displayed the greatest initiative and resource.

LYTTELTON, OLIVER, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He showed great bravery in the attack, led a company forward, and was largely instrumental in taking 100 prisoners. He stuck to his position for five hours under fire, till obliged to retire to prevent being surrounded.

MAHONEY, MICHAEL JOSEPH, Major, M.D., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. When his aid post was blown in he at once established another under heavy shell-fire, and tended the wounded for two days and nights. When relieved he took a few hours' rest and then returned to his gallant work.

MARTIN, CECIL WATSON, Capt., Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company in the attack with great dash, repelled bombing attacks, and displayed great courage in endeavouring to consolidate the position.

MICKLEM, JOHN, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), M.C., Rifle Brigade. For the excellent handling of his battalion, notably on two occasions during heavy counter-attacks by the enemy.

MILBURN, BOOKER, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), M.C., Hertfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations. He has handled his machine-gun company with great skill and determination, and stuck to his duty after being wounded in many places.

MILNE, JOSEPH ELLIS, Capt., M.D., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations. He has repeatedly tended the wounded under heavy shell-fire, and has shown himself utterly regardless of personal safety.

MORGAN, FREDERICK JAMES, Temporary Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When nearly all the officers had become casualties, he took command of the whole firing line, and, by his fine example, coolness and pluck, led the battalion on to its objective. On another occasion he did similar fine work.

NEGUS, RAYMOND EWINGS, Temporary Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When unable to find an opening in the enemy's wire, he continued to hack his way through under very heavy rifle and machine-gun fire, till he was badly wounded. He set a fine example to his men.

OLIPHANT, PHILIP LAURENCE KINGTON BLAIR, Temporary Major, Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When there was great difficulty in getting information regarding the situation, owing to casualties among officers and runners and to the enemy's heavy barrage, he went forward under very heavy fire, organized scattered parties in the firing line, repelled a counter-attack, and brought back valuable information.

PAPILLON, PELHAM RAWSTORN, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. When leading his battalion a shell burst in front of him, knocked him down, and cut his eye, but he carried on with the greatest coolness. Next morning another shell severely bruised him and broke the drum of his ear, but he refused to leave his post. He set a fine example to his command.

PERCIVAL, EDGAR, Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led a party of stretcher-bearers into a wood, and remained for over two hours searching for wounded under shell and machine-gun fire. On previous occasions he has done similar gallant work.

RICHARDSON, ARTHUR JOHNSTONE, Lieut.-Colonel, Reserve of Officers, South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous devotion to duty when commanding a battalion in attack. Although injured, he carried out his duties unrelentingly, and it was due to his personal example and perseverance that his battalion succeeded in holding a portion of the line subjected to constant heavy shell fire.

RYALLS, HARRY DOUGLAS, Temporary Lieut., Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He held on to his position during a very heavy bombardment. Though he had suffered heavy casualties, and was attacked by strong forces of the enemy on both flanks, he handled his company and machine guns with such skill that the attacks were repulsed with great loss.

SANDAY, WILLIAM DOUGLAS STOCK, Capt., M.C., Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and skill. He has led over 35 patrols with great gallantry. On one occasion a machine of his formation was attacked, but he charged and brought down the enemy machine in flames. He has destroyed at least four enemy machines.

SHELLARD, EDWIN, Capt. (Temporary Major), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led a successful attack on the enemy's front-line trenches, and, after their capture, reorganized the defences, consolidated the position, and held it against counter-attack.

SMITH, JACOB HARDY, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), M.C., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with great determination in two attacks, and it was mainly due to his training and fine example that the company did so well after losing very heavily. He was badly wounded in a fight with two enemy officers, both of whom he killed.

STAFFORD, RONALD SEMPILL HOWARD, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), M.C., King's Royal Rifle Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He commanded his company in the attack with great skill and courage, and it was largely due to his fine example and good leadership that persistent counter-attacks and bomb-attacks were driven off. He also took command of another company which had lost its officers, and, under heavy fire of all kinds, held on to the captured ground and consolidated it.

THOMPSON, GEORGE ERNEST, Second Lieut., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry when leading bombers in a raid. Though severely wounded, he continued to fight, and personally shot two of the enemy. He helped a wounded man back to our lines, and insisted on searching for a missing officer before his wounds were dressed.

TWEEN, ALFRED STUART, Temporary Capt., Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He took command of four companies after nearly all the officers had become casualties. By his fine example he held the men together, consolidated his position, and repulsed several counter-attacks.

VAUGHAN, EUGENE NAPOLEON ERNEST MALLET, Capt., Reserve of Officers, Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When in command of an isolated trench and attacked on front, flank and rear, he drove off the enemy, killing over 100 of them, and took 20 prisoners. His fine example has given great confidence to his men.

VERNON, HENRY ALBEMARLE, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion in the attack with great skill and courage, and was completely successful. He set a fine example to his command.

WARD, CLEMENT WYNDHAM, Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. After a successful advance, he secured his flank with great ability, and, owing to the good information which he sent back, it was possible to organize further attacks. He showed a quick grasp of the situation at a time when reinforcements were badly needed elsewhere.

WILKINSON, ALAN MACHIN, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Hampshire Regt., and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and skill. He has shown great dash in attacking enemy machines, and, up to the end of August, he had accounted for five. On one occasion while fighting a hostile machine he was attacked from behind, but out-manoeuvred the enemy and shot him down. Finally he got back, his machine much damaged by machine-gun fire.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BOURNE, GEORGE HERBERT, Major, Australian Light Horse. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He held the outpost line against heavy odds for four hours, and then gradually and skilfully withdrew. A few days later he held the extreme flank with great determination at a critical time.

NICHOLAS, GEORGE MATSON, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative. Having whilst on reconnaissance discovered a machine gun, Capt. Nicholas went out again alone, and with great dash and initiative captured the gun.

CANADIAN FORCE.

HAGARTY, WILLIAM GRASETT, Major, Royal Canadian Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. After an excellent reconnaissance he succeeded in bringing his battery into position by night, over difficult ground and under heavy shell fire. He did fine work next morning.

NEWFOUNDLAND CONTINGENT.

FRANKLIN, WILL HODGSON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Newfoundland Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his men in the attack with great dash, and directed a bombing party after being severely wounded.

The undermentioned Officers have been awarded a Bar to their Distinguished Service Order for subsequent acts of conspicuous gallantry.

DONE, HERBERT RICHARD, Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), D.S.O., Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous good service in action. He handled his brigade with great skill during two attacks, and showed great determination.

(The Distinguished Service Order was awarded in London Gazette dated 18 Feb. 1915.)

MORGAN, ROSSLEWIN WESTROPP, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), D.S.O., South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. When the C.O. and second in command of another battalion had become casualties, he took command of both battalions, organized his defences, and held his own against counter-attack and during a very heavy bombardment. He has always displayed the greatest bravery, and has set a fine example to his command.

(The Distinguished Service Order was awarded in London Gazette dated 14 Jan. 1916.)

SLADEN, GERALD CAREW, Major (now Temporary Brigadier-General), D.S.O., M.C., Rifle Brigade. For the excellent handling of his battalion, notably when he placed it at such a position as to cause the surrender of many of the enemy in a village. On another occasion he captured a whole system of enemy trenches and many prisoners.
(The Distinguished Service Order was awarded in London Gazette dated 14 Jan. 1916.)

London Gazette, 25 Oct. 1916.—"Admiralty, S.W., 25 Oct. 1916. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

LEIR, ERNEST WILLIAM, Commander, R.N.

BENNING, CHARLES STUART, Commander, R.N.

In recognition of their services in submarines in enemy waters.

TURNER, ROBERT ROSS, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. In recognition of his gallantry and determination in carrying out submarine attacks on enemy ships.

RAIKES, ROBERT HENRY TAUNTON, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

HARDEN, GEORGE ELLIOTT, Lieut., R.N. Lieut. Harden was temporarily in command of the river gunboat Comet during the attack on Ctesiphon and the subsequent withdrawal to Kut-el-Amara, and behaved with great coolness during the whole period. On the 1st Dec. 1915, when H.M.S. Firefly had grounded and been abandoned, he took a boat over from the armed launch Sumana under very heavy fire, and brought off the Firefly's crew.

ROBSON, HUMPHREY MAURICE, Lieut., R.N.

MACKENZIE, COLIN ROY, Flight Lieut., R.N.A.S. In recognition of his skill and gallantry in destroying a German kite balloon on the 7th Sept. 1916, under very severe anti-aircraft fire.

London Gazette, 28 Oct. 1916.—"War Office, 28 Oct. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to appoint the undermentioned Officer to be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

ELKINGTON, JOHN FORD, Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Warwickshire Regiment.

London Gazette, 2 Nov. 1916.—"War Office, 2 Nov. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their distinguished service and devotion to duty during the spring and summer of last year in the Prisoners-of-War Camp at Gardelegen, Germany."

WILLIAMS, AUGUSTUS SCOTT, Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps.

BROWN, ARTHUR JAMES, Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps, Special Reserve.

London Gazette, 14 Nov. 1916.—"War Office, 14 Nov. 1916. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

ALLERTON, CLAUDE, Temporary Lieut., Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. After his senior officers had become casualties in the attack, he took command of the battalion and carried on with coolness and judgment under heavy fire, until a senior officer arrived in the evening.

ASHTON, HENRY GORDON GOOCH, Temporary Capt., Welsh Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Owing to several casualties he found himself in command of three companies and some 50 men of other units. For many hours he was fighting the enemy on all sides, and had his men facing front and rear in the same trench. His great determination and fine leadership were largely responsible for the holding of the position.

BAILEY, THE HONOURABLE WILFRED RUSSELL, Capt., Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Capt. Bailey and Harcourt-Vernon led a company out of the trench with great dash. They themselves led by at least 50 yards, and shot many of the enemy with their revolvers. About 60 of the enemy were accounted for, mainly with the bayonet, and 42 made prisoners.

BARNES, ANTHONY CHARLES, Temporary Major, Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When in command of two companies he held his own with great determination under heavy fire for 30 hours, and later recaptured a lost position.

BARNETT, WILLIAM HAROLD LOUIS, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Bedfordshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with the greatest courage and determination. Later he led his company in the assault after suffering nine hours under barrage fire. His gallantry and initiative greatly assisted the success of the operations.

BAUGH, RUPERT STANTON, Lieut., Coldstream Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When cut off from his battalion he rallied the men of different units around him, and beat off three hostile counter-attacks. He hung on to his position for 48 hours, though himself twice blown up by high explosive shells, one of which rendered him unconscious.

BENFIELD, KARL VERE BARKER, Lieut., Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When observation officer, he, with two men and a N.C.O., attacked a party of the enemy, killing several and capturing seven prisoners and a communication trench. He displayed the greatest courage and initiative throughout.

BLUNT, DUNCAN HAMILTON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Devonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion with great dash in the attack and capture of a wood, and established his position in a captured enemy trench beyond. He thus greatly facilitated the further advance.

BRINDLEY, JAMES, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), M.C., East Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company in the attack with the greatest courage and initiative, himself accounting for 12 of the enemy. Later, although wounded, he continued to advance, and with a small party captured 61 prisoners. He has previously done very fine work.

BUCKLEY, GEORGE ALEXANDER McLEAN, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Leinster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion with the greatest courage and determination. He has on many previous occasions done very fine work.

CANGLEY, FREDERICK GEORGE, Temporary Second Lieut., Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company under intense fire to support a battalion which had been held up, displaying the greatest courage and initiative. Later, he assumed command of the battalion, rallied it, and organized the defence with great ability.

CLARKE, ROBERT JOYCE, Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He has handled his battalion with great skill and determination. On three separate occasions his fine leading has achieved important success.

CLEMINSON, CHARLES ROBERT DAVIDGE, Temporary Capt., Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. While leading troops to reinforce the attacking line, he saw the troops on his left retiring and leaving the flank of the division exposed. On his own initiative he at once took his two companies, and any other men he could gather, close to the position, consolidated a defensive flank and held it till relieved.

CROSBIE, WALTER McCLELLAND, Major, Royal Munster Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led two companies with the greatest courage and initiative. Later, he organized the position with great skill, displaying great coolness throughout. He was wounded.

DARELL, HARRY FRANCIS, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He organized a reinforcing attack, under heavy shell fire and when units were much mixed up. By his skill and good leading the attack reached its objective.

DAUBENY, GILES BUTTEEL, Major, Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He conducted the fire of his battery from the advanced trenches under heavy fire with great skill and determination. He also sent in accurate reports throughout the day.

DUNFORD, ROY CRAIG, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. For three days prior to an attack he directed the digging of assault trenches under heavy shell fire. During the attack his personal direction of his company resulted in heavy losses to the enemy and the capture of 150 prisoners. Finally he was shot through the body whilst organizing his defences.

FERGUSON, GEORGE DOUGLAS, Temporary Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He tended the wounded under very heavy fire, bringing in over 50 wounded men, and displaying the greatest courage and determination. His fearless bearing set a fine example.

FULLER, JOHN STEED, Second Lieut., Coldstream Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When his portion of the line was held up by rifle and machine-gun fire, he collected a party of his company and rushed the enemy's position in face of overwhelming odds, thus enabling the advance to proceed. Later he was seriously wounded.

GORELL, LORD (HENRY GORELL BARNES), Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He pushed forward and handled his battery under very heavy fire with the greatest courage and skill. Later, he carried out a daring reconnaissance and obtained most valuable information.

GOW, ANDREW, Temporary Capt., Cameron Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He took command of the whole of the forward operations and led the attack with great skill and determination. It was greatly due to his organizing powers and the excellent information he sent back that the operations were successful.

HARCOURT-VERNON, GRANVILLE CHARLES FITZHERBERT, Capt., Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Capt. Harcourt-Vernon and Bailey led a company out of the trench with great dash. They themselves led by at least 50 yards, and shot many of the enemy with their revolvers. About 60 of the enemy were accounted for, mainly with the bayonet, and 42 made prisoners.

HARGREAVES, THOMAS CHARLES, Capt. (Temporary Major), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led the advance with skill and determination when the attack was held up by machine-gun fire. Later, he set a fine personal example when beating off a counter-attack on an exposed flank. He was wounded.

HATFIELD, EDGAR RICHARD, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his battery throughout with the greatest courage and determination. Later, with one N.C.O., he put out a fire among burning ammunition in a gun-pit at great personal risk.

HOPE, JOHN FREDERIC ROUNDEL, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He commanded his battalion with great determination during two days of heavy enemy counter-attacks, and it was largely due to his personal example that the attacks were repulsed. He carried on after he had been blown from the parapet, nearly buried and much shaken.

JAMES, CHARLES KENNETH, Temporary Capt., Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led a party against the enemy with the greatest courage and skill, and put the enemy to flight. Later, he organized and led a bombing party, capturing a much greater position than he had set out to take. He has on many previous occasions done very fine work.

JAMES, ERIC GWYN, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He personally superintended, with great skill, all arrangements for two attacks on the enemy, and was dangerously wounded.

KIDD, GUY EGERTON, Major, Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He commanded his battery with great skill and determination. Later he carried out a most valuable reconnaissance; during this he passed two trenches held by the enemy and captured two prisoners.

LANGAN-BYRNE, PATRICK ANTHONY, Second Lieut., Royal Artillery and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous skill and gallantry. He has shown great pluck in attacking hostile machines, often against large odds. He has accounted for several. On one occasion, with two other machines, he attacked seventeen enemy machines, shot down one in flames and forced another to land.

LEE, JOHN HENRY, Temporary Second Lieut., King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Although wounded he assumed command and led his company with the greatest courage and determination. Later, again being wounded, he remained on duty, establishing connection with neighbouring units, and consolidating ground won.

LEESE, OLIVER WILLIAM HARGREAVES, Lieut., Coldstream Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led the assault against a strongly-held part of the enemy's line, which was stopping the whole attack. He personally accounted for many of the enemy and enabled the attack to proceed. He was wounded during the fight.

LEONARD, REV. MARTIN PATRICK GRANGE, Temporary Chaplain, 4th Class, Army Chaplain Department (Royal Lancashire Regt.). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during protracted operations. He was always moving about among the wounded giving them encouragement. He assisted the medical officer in tending the wounded under heavy shell fire, and on one occasion carried a wounded man himself on a stretcher. His gallantry and devotion to duty has been beyond praise.

LONGUEVILLE, FRANCIS, Capt., M.C., Coldstream Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He commanded his company with great determination throughout the fight. When the first objective was taken he collected men, and led the leading wave through an intense barrage to the second objective.

MACMILLAN, JAMES BONTHON, Temporary Capt., Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led the attacking force with the greatest courage and determination at all times, sending back most valuable information. Later, with both his flanks exposed, he held and consolidated the position against determined enemy bombing attacks.

MATHERS, DAVID, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his battalion throughout the operations with the greatest courage and initiative, gaining his objective, and capturing two machine guns, three officers, and over 100 other ranks.

MINCHIN, THOMAS WILLIAM, Second Lieut., Grenadier Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He cleared an orchard, killing many of the enemy, and sited and organized a new line of defence under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. He displayed the greatest coolness, and went back himself to report on the situation after four different runners had become casualties.

OAKLEY, RICHARD, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He gallantly led his regiment and assisted to defeat two enemy counter-attacks. He set a splendid example of coolness and courage to his men. He was wounded.

PATTERSON, JOHN WILSON, Temporary Lieut., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry. While proceeding with two men to his working party, he suddenly saw a party of the enemy coming out of a deep dug-out. He and his two men rushed at them, disarmed about ten who had rifles, and took the whole party, two officers and 34 men, prisoners.

PORTER, HENRY COLIN MANSEL, Major, King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He assumed command of his battalion, and also of another unit, displaying the greatest courage and initiative. In order to exercise his extended command he went about in the open under very heavy fire.

PRESCOTT-WESTCAR, WILLIAM VILLIERS LEONARD, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion with the greatest courage and initiative, carrying the first, third and fifth objectives. Later, he personally supervised the reorganization and consolidation, and sending back most valuable information. He was severely wounded.

REYNOLDS, LEWIS LESLIE CLAYTON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his battalion with great skill and determination. On two separate occasions his good leading has achieved important success.

RHODES, FREDERICK WILLIAM, Temporary Lieut., Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When his battalion was held up, he organized a party and rushed a battery of enemy guns, capturing four officers and 20 other ranks, as well as four field guns. He displayed the greatest courage and initiative throughout.

RIDLEY, CLAUDE ALWARD, Second Lieut., M.C., Royal Fusiliers and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and judgment in the execution of a special mission. When his machine was wrecked he showed great resource, and obtained valuable information.

SHAW, WILLIAM MAXWELL, Major, Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He went forward to ascertain the exact situation of our advanced infantry. Later, with another officer and two bombers, he carried out a daring reconnaissance of a trench thought to be occupied by the enemy, thereby obtaining most valuable information.

SHEPPARD, EDGAR, Capt., M.C., Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his men to their objective with the greatest courage and initiative. Later, his left flank being unprotected, he threw back a defensive flank and got into touch with the troops on his left.

STEYN, PIERRE, Temporary Capt., Bedfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. In three separate fights he displayed great coolness and determination, and by his fine example greatly encouraged all ranks.

TAMPLIN, ROBERT JAMES ABBOTT, Temporary Capt. (Temporary Major), Connaught Rangers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with the greatest courage and determination, and was instrumental in capturing the position. He was wounded.

THOMAS, GWYN, Major, Bengal Lancers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He went forward to ascertain the situation, passed through a heavy barrage, rallied and collected the troops, and led them forward with great skill and determination, displaying splendid personal courage.

TRAILL, HENRY EDWARD O'BRIEN, Major, Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his battery throughout with the greatest courage and determination. His fearless bearing was of the greatest value, not only to his own battery, but to the batteries on either side of him. On several occasions he excited wagons and teams from places of danger.

TROYE-BULLOCK, CECIL JOHN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Somerset Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion, which was in reserve, with great skill, and by his prompt reinforcement of the attacking line materially helped to beat off a counter-attack. Though wounded in the leg, he remained in command till the position was secured.

WATSON, SIDNEY TWELLS, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership in action. Under his direction and initiative the enemy attack was driven back, the position won, and many prisoners taken.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BIDDLE, FRED LESLIE, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry during three days of operations. As liaison officer he did fine work, and when his telephone lines were repeatedly cut, passed through the barrage to telephone stations of other units in order to get his information through. He was himself wounded on the last day.

BLACK, PERCY, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He led his company over "No Man's Land" against an enemy's strong point, which he captured and consolidated under very difficult circumstances, and under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire. On a subsequent occasion he did similar fine work.

BRETtingham-MOORE, HERBERT MANSEL, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He cleared his trench of the enemy with great determination, and, hearing that some of the enemy wanted to surrender, he went towards them and drove them out of the dug-outs with his revolver to the part of the trench held by us, where they were taken by our men. He was wounded at the time.

FORTESCUE, CHARLES, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He commanded his company with the greatest courage and skill. Later, although wounded, he greatly assisted in defeating several enemy counter-attacks. He showed a splendid example of coolness and initiative to his men.

HARWOOD, ROSS, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with the greatest gallantry against two enemy strong points. Although wounded, he secured his objective and captured 150 prisoners. He set a splendid example of coolness and initiative to his men.

JEFFRIES, LEWIS WIMBER, Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations. He tended the wounded and reorganized the stretcher-bearers in the front line at great personal risk. When only a few bearers were left, he himself assisted to carry back the wounded under heavy fire.

MURRAY, HENRY WILLIAM, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Although twice wounded, he commanded his company with the greatest courage and initiative, beating off four enemy counter-attacks. Later, when an enemy bullet started a man's equipment exploding, he tore the man's equipment off at great personal risk. He set a splendid example throughout.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BODWELL, HOWARD LIONEL, Major, Pioneers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He, with a small party, built a roadway under intense fire, displaying the greatest courage and initiative. He has on many previous occasions done very fine work.

BREDIN, CHARLES EDGAR ATHELING, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company in attack and captured an enemy strong point, which was holding up the attack, under intense artillery, rifle and machine-gun fire. Later he took over the companies of the whole line and consolidated the position with great skill and determination.

FAIRWEATHER, CHARLES EDWARD, Temporary Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. With his company he dug a trench 200 yards in front of the front line under intense fire, and thereby rendered the support necessary to ensure the safety of the ground gained by a flanking battalion. He displayed the greatest courage and initiative throughout.

HARDY, ETHELBERT BROWN, Lieut.-Colonel, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations. He controlled the evacuation of the sick and wounded, and by his energy and courage kept up the spirits of the stretcher-bearers when they were much exhausted.

HARSTONE, JOHN BRUNTON, Capt. (Temporary Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with great dash in the attack, and, when he had lost touch with his battalion commander, assumed command of all the troops round him, consolidated his position, and organized his defences. All this was under heavy fire.

HERON, LIONEL DALZIEL, Capt., M.C., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He made a most valuable reconnaissance. Later he organized a bombing party, capturing many prisoners. These services he performed with splendid courage and skill, and greatly assisted the advance.

JACQUES, HARRY MERVILLE, Lieut.-Colonel, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He supervised the clearing of the front and controlled the work of the advanced and main dressing stations with great skill and personal courage.

MACLEOD, GEORGE WALKERS, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He went forward into the fight and selected the ground to be consolidated, and, though severely wounded, made his way back under heavy fire, and rendered a complete report on the situation. He has always set a fine example of coolness and courage.

MCDONALD, HAROLD FRENCH, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He carried out a dangerous reconnaissance under heavy shell fire, and after a shell splinter had blown off his arm he reported the result of his reconnaissance before allowing the stretcher-bearers to remove him.

McELLIOTT, ARNOLD E., Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He took complete command of the front line of three companies, and with great skill and determination consolidated the line under intense fire and local attacks.

McKENZIE, JOHN ALLEN, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He commanded his company with great skill and determination during the capture of a position, and, by his accurate reports, enabled preparations to be made by which a heavy counter-attack was beaten off. He has done other fine work.

McLAUGHLIN, LARNE T., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his men forward with great dash under machine-gun and rifle fire, consolidated his position, and repulsed frequent counter-attacks. On one occasion he personally led bombers to repulse an attack on his flank.

STRONG, FREDERICK EDWARD KETELBY, Commander, R.N. For the successful manner in which he conducted H.M.S. Dwarf's actions with the armed yacht Herzogin Elizabeth, Joss Battery, and the armed vessel Nachtdigall on the 9th, 11th and 16th Sept. 1914, respectively, as well as other important duties, which on several occasions brought him into contact with the enemy during the Cameroons Campaign.

GRENFELL, FRANCIS HENRY, Commander, R.N.

CHEETHAM, HERBERT CHARLES VALENTINE BERESFORD, R.D., Commander, Royal Naval Reserve. As Chief Transport Officer with the Cameroons Expeditionary Force, Commander Cheetham performed exceptional service under a heavy fire during the attacks on Jabassi on the 8th Oct. 1914, and in the subsequent embarkation of troops and retirement down stream of the flotilla after dark. He commanded the advanced detachments of the Nyong flotilla on the Edea Expedition, driving out a hostile party from Dehane, and thereby enabling the French troops to land without opposition.

MELLIN, ARTHUR ALURED, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

JESSOP, JOHN DE BURGH, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. In recognition of the skill and determination which he showed in making a successful submarine attack on an enemy light cruiser on the 19th Oct. 1916.

WESTMORE, HENRY GEORGE GARDINER, R.D., Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Reserve.

PERCIVAL, JOHN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.R. Lieut.-Commander Percival was Acting Director of Nigeria Marine at the commencement of hostilities in the Cameroons, and was largely responsible for the efficient manner in which the Nigeria Marine vessels were fitted out for duty with the expedition. He also performed valuable service as King's Harbour Master at Duala from the 25th Sept. to the 14th Dec. 1914, when he was appointed Director of the Nigeria Marine at Lagos, in which position he invariably assisted the Senior Naval Officer in every way possible throughout the campaign.

The undermentioned Officer has been awarded a Bar to his Distinguished Service Order.

LAURENCE, NOEL FRANK, D.S.O., Commander, Royal Navy. In recognition of the skill and determination he showed in making a submarine attack on an enemy battle squadron on the 5th Nov. 1916.

(The appointment to the Distinguished Service Order was announced in London Gazette dated 24 Feb. 1916.)

London Gazette, 1 Jan. 1917.—"War Office, 1 Jan. 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for distinguished service in the field, dated 1 Jan. 1917. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

London Gazette, 10 Jan. 1917.—" War Office, 10 Jan. 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BREARLEY, NORMAN, M.C., Second Lieut., Liverpool Regt. and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. With another pilot he gallantly attacked seven hostile machines. Later, although severely wounded, he displayed great courage and determination in reaching our own lines.

CROFT, WILLIAM DENMAN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He showed great courage and initiative in organizing and supervising a successful attack. He established posts before dawn and joined them up the following night under heavy fire. He has previously done fine work. [The Distinguished Service Order was awarded London Gazette, 1 Jan. 1917. The award here should have been a first Bar (see London Gazette, 26 July, 1918, awarding second Bar)].

FOLLETT, GILBERT BURRELL SPENCER, M.V.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Coldstream Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Although wounded, he inspected the front-line trenches under heavy fire. Later, he remained with the battalion until they were relieved. He has on many previous occasions done fine work.

HARMAN, CHARLES, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Leinster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion throughout the action with great courage and initiative. He set a splendid example to his men, and materially assisted in the success of the operations.

HOTBLACK, FREDERICK ELLIOTT, M.C., Temporary Capt., Intelligence Corps, attached Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He guided a Tank into action by walking in front of it under very heavy fire. He displayed great courage and determination throughout.

NASMITH, ARTHUR PLATER, Temporary Capt., Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He displayed great courage and initiative in organizing and leading a successful attack. He set a splendid example throughout.

PARKER, GEORGE ALEC, M.C., Capt., Northampton Regt. and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He attacked hostile aeroplanes on three occasions during the same flight, killing an enemy observer. On another occasion he drove off three enemy machines, pursuing one of them down to 750 feet three miles behind the enemy's lines.

PENNINGTON, RICHARD, Temporary Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his men in the attack with great courage and initiative, himself killing at least seven of the enemy. He set a splendid example throughout, and materially assisted in the success of the operations.

ROBERTSON, JOSIAH JAMES, Capt. (Temporary Major), Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He reorganized several small parties under heavy fire, and drove off an enemy bombing attack. He formed with 20 men a strong post in the enemy's second line. Later, he led the men forward again and consolidated an advanced defensive line. He set a splendid example throughout.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

SCOTT, WILLIAM JOHN RENDALL, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He organized the troops in the vicinity and formed a strong point, and by the judicious use of machine guns kept off several threatened enemy attacks, thereby saving a critical situation.

PAGE, FRANK, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Hertfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his battalion in the attack with great courage and determination. Later, he showed marked ability and judgment in consolidating his final objective, thereby repelling any enemy attempts to counter-attack.

(The award of the Distinguished Service Order was published in London Gazette dated 23 June, 1915.)

" His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

CARTWRIGHT, FRANCIS JOHN WINSOR, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Marines. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the attack was held up by heavy machine-gun and rifle fire he went forward to the front line, where he reorganized and supervised mixed parties of men of different units and pushed forward to the objective.

EDWARDS, GEORGE ERIC, Second Lieut., Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Accompanied by a few men, he advanced through our barrage and held the entrance of a cave, thereby capturing 400 prisoners, but being unsupported he was forced to surrender by the enemy. Later, he was instrumental in the capture of many prisoners, and himself marched 12, including the Battalion Commander, back to Battalion Headquarters. He set a splendid example of courage and determination throughout.

HUTCHISON, ALEXANDER RICHARD HAMILTON, C.M.G., Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Marines. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the attack was temporarily held up by heavy machine-gun fire, he rallied and reorganized the front line of the attack, and ably supervised the consolidation of the final objective reached by his battalion.

JAMESON, JOHN HENRY, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Liverpool Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his company in the attack with the greatest courage and skill, himself remaining out with a few men in an exposed position. He has at all times set a splendid example of gallantry and good leadership.

McPHERSON, ANDREW, Temporary Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He showed great resource under the most trying circumstances, and, although he had been wounded in two places before reaching the point of assembly, he launched his company on the attack and advanced with them. He set a fine example and was again wounded.

O'SHAUGHNESSY, CUTHBERT LEO, Second Lieut., South Lancashire Regt., Special Reserve (surname corrected to O'Shaughnessy [London Gazette, 28 July, 1917]). For conspicuous gallantry in action. He took command of the three assaulting companies of his battalion after all the other officers had become casualties. He consolidated the captured position, and sent out bombing parties to assist the battalion on his right. He set a fine example of courage and coolness throughout.

PEASE-WATKIN, EDWARD HANDLEY PEASE, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He carried out several daring reconnaissances at great personal risk and obtained information of the greatest value. He has consistently shown the greatest gallantry and initiative when commanding his battery, and has previously been brought to notice for good work.

RAMSAY-FAIRFAX, WILLIAM GEORGE ASTEL, Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), Emergency List, Royal Navy (rank corrected from Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander) to Commander [London Gazette, 26 March, 1917]). For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the attack was temporarily held up, he reorganized the men and led a bombing attack, which cleared the enemy from a trench which threatened his flank. He afterwards organized an attack which was instrumental in capturing over 100 prisoners.

STOCKS, CHARLES SUMNER, Major, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He showed marked courage and skill in commanding the advanced guard under machine-gun and heavy rifle fire. He was severely wounded.

THORNTON, REV. STEPHEN AUGUSTIN LAWRENCE, Naval Chaplain's Department, attached Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great courage and determination in administering to the wounded under very heavy fire.

WARD, EDWARD FRANCIS, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He organized a counter-attack at a critical time, driving the enemy back and capturing 97 prisoners. He showed marked courage and initiative throughout.

WHITE, HENRY HERBERT RONALD, Temporary Major, Royal Fusiliers (late Capt., King's Royal Rifle Corps). For conspicuous gallantry in action. He displayed great courage and initiative in handling two companies under heavy fire. He has performed consistent good work throughout, and has at all times set a splendid example.

WHITTAKER, GORDON WILLIAM, Temporary Sub-Lieut., Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He dashed forward in broad daylight, and, single-handed, put a machine gun and its crew out of action, thereby greatly assisting in the success of the operations. He was severely wounded.

WHITWORTH, HARRY, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company in the attack with the greatest courage and initiative, and penetrated the enemy's second line. He was wounded. Previously he carried out several daring and successful reconnaissances.

WILKINSON, CHARLES WILLIAM, Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He displayed great courage and skill in handling a hastily improvised force under difficult conditions, and was largely instrumental in clearing parties of the enemy from the lines of communication.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

BRISCOE, JOHN EDWARD, Major, South African Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although himself wounded, he continued to tend wounded men under very heavy fire. He set a splendid example of courage and coolness throughout.

DOBSON, JOSEPH HENRY, Major, South African Pioneers. For conspicuous devotion to duty. He repaired a long stretch of railway, and converted motor lorries to run on rails, by means of which the difficult problem of rationing the force was much relieved. He has performed consistent good work throughout.

MONTGOMERY, JOHN WILLOUGHBY VERNER, Lieut.-Colonel, South African Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his battalion with great courage and skill against strong enemy positions, capturing the positions and causing the enemy to retire.

WOON, ERNEST W., Major, South African Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He repulsed a strong enemy attack, and saved the situation at a critical time. He displayed marked gallantry throughout, and materially assisted in the success of the operations.

ARMSTRONG, MATTHEW, Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve.

GOBLE, STANLEY JAMES, D.S.C., Flight-Lieut., Royal Naval Air Service. For conspicuous bravery and skill in attacking hostile aircraft on numerous occasions. On 7 Nov. 1916, he attacked an enemy scout and chased it down to 1,500 feet, when it was seen to land, crash into a fence, and turn over in a field. On 27 Nov. 1916, he attacked four hostile scouts, one of which he brought down in flames. On 4 Dec. 1916, on six different occasions during the same flight, he attacked and drove off hostile aircraft, which threatened the bombing machines which he was escorting, one of the hostile machines going completely out of control.

MAXWELL-SCOTT, MALCOLM RAPHAEL JOSEPH, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Navy.

SMYTH, HENRY HESKETH, Capt., Royal Navy.

London Gazette, 3 March, 1917.—"War Office, 3 March, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to"—

HUDDLESTON, HUBERT JERVOISE, D.S.O., M.C., Major, Dorsetshire Regt., attached Imperial Camel Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and the masterly manner in which he handled the final assault when light was failing, and a decision had become vitally necessary. He directed and led the final assault in the most gallant manner, and was directly responsible for its successful finish.

(The Distinguished Service Order was awarded in London Gazette dated 1 Jan. 1917.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BAILEY, GEORGE CYRIL, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Flying Corps (Special Reserve). For conspicuous gallantry in action. He co-operated in an infantry raid by flying over the enemy's trenches at a height of only 1,500 feet for more than an hour and a half in very adverse weather conditions. He attacked the enemy in the trenches with machine-gun fire, and located 16 active enemy batteries during the flight. He has repeatedly done fine work.

DONOVAN, CHARLES OWEN, M.B., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps, attached North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed courage of a very high order over a period of 48 hours in attending to a large number of wounded of his own and other units, in a shallow muddy trench, which was continually subjected to heavy fire. On another occasion he dressed several wounded officers in the open. He was severely wounded.

ELEY, DENNIS RAMSAY AKERS, Capt. (Acting Major), Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and brilliant leading of two companies during a night raid on the enemy lines. He broke through the opposing outpost line, inflicting severe losses on the enemy, and making 29 prisoners. The energy and skill of this officer largely contributed to the success of the raid.

GROUND, THOMAS LESLIE, Temporary Second Lieut., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He carried out a reconnaissance under most adverse conditions, established a few posts, and for 48 hours commanded the left-hand post within 50 yards of the enemy's lines. On a previous occasion he carried out a successful daylight raid on enemy trenches.

HERRING, JUSTIN HOWARD, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He displayed great courage and initiative in bombing an enemy gunboat which was towing a bridge upstream. He flew continuously for six hours under heavy rifle fire, and seriously harassed the enemy by preventing his bridging operations. On another occasion he carried out a successful raid and brought back most valuable information.

HIBBERT, CECIL BARCLAY, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), King's Royal Rifle Corps. Special Reserve, attached Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When practically all the infantry officers were casualties, he gave most valuable assistance in organizing the defence, sending excellent reports back to Battalion Headquarters. Later, he went out with a sergeant and rescued a wounded officer under very heavy fire. He undoubtedly saved a critical situation.

KEOGH, JAMES BLAIR, Major, Lancers, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Although his horse was shot under him and he himself wounded, he remained in command, and by his personal example and skilful handling of his detachment extricated it with slight loss, whilst inflicting considerable punishment on an enemy force ten times his strength.

LLOYD, GEORGE AMBROSE, Lieut., Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has rendered valuable service as Liaison Officer. His duties, which have been carried out with the utmost skill, have been such as to place him in constant danger of his life.

MOORE, WILLIAM AGNEW, Major, Royal Garrison Artillery, attached Imperial Camel Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his battery during the action with marked skill, thereby clearing a redoubt which was checking the infantry advance.

OWSTON, LEYCESTER VARLEY, Capt., Dragoon Guards, attached Motor Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has rendered valuable service in command of armoured cars, and his personal gallantry has been on more than one occasion brought to notice.

SALMOND, WILLIAM GEOFFREY HANSON, Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Royal Artillery and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous ability and devotion to duty when personally directing the work of the Royal Flying Corps during the action. The striking success attained was largely due to his magnificent personal example.

SEBASTIAN, ERROLL GRAHAM, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and skill during a night attack. Under heavy artillery and rifle fire he maintained an effective fire control, and subsequently led a charge against a strongly-held position. Being unable to cut the wire, the attackers tore it up bodily, capturing the trench with considerable loss to the enemy.

STOCKS, JOHN LEOPRIC, Temporary Capt., King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with great gallantry during the assault. Later, when the other three Company Commanders had become casualties, he did most valuable work in reorganizing the companies. He was subsequently wounded.

WELLS, RUSSELL PRIMROSE, Capt., Hussars, attached Motor Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has rendered valuable service in charge of armoured cars. The nature of his duties involve continued personal risk, and his personal gallantry has been several times brought to notice.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BIRKBECK, GILBERT, Major, Australian Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He displayed great initiative and excellent leadership in moving his squadron over most difficult country round the enemy's left flank, thereby materially assisting in the defeat of the enemy and preventing any escape.

BROOKS, JOSEPH JOHNSON, Major, Australian Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his men in a most capable manner during a frontal attack under intense fire. He set a splendid example of courage and determination throughout.

MARKWELL, WILLIAM ERNEST, Major, Australian Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He gallantly led the final assault against both the enemy trenches and a redoubt, thereby completing the defeat of the enemy. He set a magnificent example to his men.

MCKENZIE, KENNETH ALAN, Major, Australian Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his squadron in the attack with great gallantry, and was the first to reach the enemy's position. He has on many previous occasions done fine work.

CANADIAN CONTINGENT.

LAWS, BURNETT, Major, Canadian Mounted Rifle Battn. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Previous to the operation he personally carried out a successful reconnaissance in "No Man's Land." Later, he rendered most valuable service during the attack, and materially assisted in the success of the operations. He has previously done fine work.

London Gazette, 12 March, 1917.—" War Office, 12 March, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to :—

HAMILTON-BOWEN, ALFRED JOHN, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Monmouthshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He, with great personal gallantry, supervised the difficult task of consolidation throughout the whole night, and continually went round his working parties. He was mainly responsible for the excellent work carried out.

(The Distinguished Service Order was awarded in London Gazette dated 3 July, 1915.)

LEGGETT, ARCHIBALD HERBERT, D.S.O., Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, late Royal Scots Fusiliers, Royal Scots Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry, coolness and resource when in command of an infantry battalion. He showed exceptional powers of leadership when attacked by the enemy, upon whom he inflicted a severe defeat.

(The Distinguished Service Order was awarded in London Gazette dated 27 Sept. 1901.)

" His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BURGESS, ALFRED, Second Lieut., Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous courage and ability whilst commanding a raiding platoon which entered the enemy's trenches, and returned with two officers and 50 other ranks as prisoners. The success of the raid was largely due to the ability with which he conducted preparatory training, and also to his personal courage and example. He was severely wounded.

LONG, SELDEN HERBERT, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Durham Light Infantry and Royal Flying Corps. For great skill and daring in piloting his machine. He shot down an enemy machine, which fell in our lines, and the same day he forced another hostile machine to land in the enemy's lines. Later he shot down another enemy machine, which fell in our lines.

MASTERTON, THOMAS SAMUEL, Capt., General List. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out work of destruction. He passed through the rearguard of the retreating army and destroyed the remaining untouched works of value. He set a splendid example of courage and initiative throughout the operations.

MORRIS, FRANK GEORGE GRIER, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his battalion in the attack. He personally supervised the consolidation of the position, which he extended beyond the line specified in order to obtain better observation, and inspired his companies with his own determination and bravery.

MUTCH, GEORGE, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid on the enemy's trenches. He rallied his men and led them forward under heavy fire. Later, with a few men he rushed an enemy post from the flank and captured the garrison. He was a magnificent example to his men, and to him was largely due the success of the raid.

SCALE, JOHN DYMOKE, Capt., Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He rode out beyond the rearguard until nearly surrounded by the enemy in order to convince the retreating troops that further delay was dangerous. Then, later, although the rearguard had retired, he stuck to his post until his work was completed.

WEBSTER, WALTER HENRY, Second Lieut., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At great personal risk he picked up an unexploded enemy projectile, and threw it over the parapet, where it at once exploded. He undoubtedly saved many lives.

WILKINSON, WILLIAM DALE, M.C., Temporary Capt., Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On entering the captured position he sent back clear and concise information, superintended the consolidation and blocking of the flanks, and remained complete master of the situation. It was mainly owing to his gallant leadership that the enemy's trench was captured and two officers and 78 other ranks taken prisoners.

WILSON, HERBERT DUCKWORTH, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He maintained observation throughout the day under very heavy fire. He was wounded on three different occasions during the day, but remained at his observation post until the light failed and his work was accomplished. He has on many previous occasions done fine work.

CANADIAN CONTINGENT.

FOSTER, HAROLD WILLIAM ALEXANDER, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of one of the assaulting companies. Although wounded during the advance, he continued to direct his men throughout the whole operation, displaying great coolness and resource. When attacked by a party of the enemy, he personally accounted for two of them, and took a third prisoner.

London Gazette, 26 March, 1917.—“ War Office, 26 March, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field.”

ALGIE, WILLIAM, Temporary Second Lieut., Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid on the enemy's trenches. He led the assaulting party with great dash and inflicted many casualties on the enemy. He himself shot eight of the enemy with his revolver. Later, he skillfully withdrew his party under very heavy fire and assisted to bring in the wounded.

FORSYTH, MAXWELL HUNTER, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Gordon Highlanders, attached Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a strong raiding party. He trained the party, and carried out the raid successfully, personally controlling it from the enemy's front line. The party entered the enemy's third line, captured 43 prisoners, two machine guns and a trench mortar.

GAMMELL, JAMES ANDREW HARCOURT, M.C., Capt., Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when employed as Staff Officer to the Armoured Car Patrol. He displayed great coolness under heavy fire, and his energy and perseverance greatly assisted in the success of the operations.

PADWICK, HAROLD BOULTBEE, Temporary Surgeon, Royal Navy. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He remained in the open, and continued to tend the wounded under very heavy fire. Later, he proceeded to Headquarters, and at great personal risk brought in many wounded men. He displayed great courage and determination throughout the operations.

PARTRIDGE, LLEWELLYN, Major, Yeomanry, attached Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great judgment and skill in the leadership of his three light patrols, and showed inexhaustible resource in overcoming the most serious physical obstacles. Later, in action he proved himself a dashing and competent leader.

PEREIRA, ARTHUR BERESFORD PHILEMON, Capt. (Temporary Major), Army Service Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was untiring in his work, and kept the force supplied in its important requirements of petrol and water for the cars, as well as rations and water for personnel with conspicuous success. He displayed great coolness and resource in action.

PORCH, CECIL PORCH, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and able leading while in command of a raiding party. The success of the raid was largely due to his most careful work in preparing the details of the scheme and his own determined leading. Later, although wounded, he continued to direct operations, and personally superintended the removal of the wounded under heavy fire.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

CURRIE, JOHN, Second Lieut., South African Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He, with another officer, organized and led forward a party of infantry at a critical time, thereby enabling an enemy strong point to be carried and over 100 prisoners taken. Later, he again took charge of parties of four different regiments, and succeeded in repelling an enemy counter-attack. He set a splendid example of courage and determination throughout.

Distinguished Service Order Award :
MCKENZIE, WILLIAM SINCLAIR, Lieut. (rank corrected to Second Lieut. (London Gazette, 22 April, 1918)). Seaforth Highlanders.

The particulars of the act of gallantry in this case will be published next month in the London Gazette. This award was omitted from the Gazette dated 17 March, 1917, pending verification. (See London Gazette, 18 July, 1917.)

London Gazette, 11 April, 1917.—“ Admiralty, 11 April, 1917. In addition to the honours notified in the Supplements to the London Gazette dated 14 March, 15th May (3rd Supplement), and 31 May, 1916 (3rd Supplement), the King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointment to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officer, in recognition of his services in the Eastern Mediterranean up to the 30th June, 1916.”

CAMPBELL, ALEXANDER V., M.V.O., Capt., Royal Navy. Performed meritorious service whilst in command of H.M.S. Prince George, which took part in the actions of 25 Feb. and 18 March, 1915. Prince George supported the Army from inside the Straits between 25 April and 10 May, 1915, and also at Suvla for several weeks continuously under fire. Capt. Campbell also did good service during the evacuation.

London Gazette, 17 April, 1917.—“ War Office, 17 April, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to :—

CROFTON, MALBY RICHARD HENRY, D.S.O., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward under the most intense fire to a position 150 yards from the enemy's trenches, from where he controlled the fire of his battery with great skill.

(D.S.O. gazetted 22 Dec. 1916.)

HILL, GERALD VICTOR WILMOT, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Fusiliers, attached Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership when in command of his battalion. He formed up his battalion under very heavy fire and under the most difficult conditions. The successful start of his battalion and the accomplishment of its task in the attack was in a great measure due to his personal example and fine leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

BOSS, RONALD CAMPBELL, D.S.O., Major, Jats, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership when in command of his battalion. He gallantly led his battalion to the assault of the enemy's position, and the success of the operation was largely due to his fine example and able leadership. Later, while leading his men, he was severely wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

“ His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field.”

ASQUITH, ARTHUR MELLAND, Temporary Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He obtained leave to go up to the front when he heard a fight was imminent. Later, although wounded, he returned to Brigade Headquarters and gave a clear account of the situation and of the fighting, which had been going on during the night. He has previously done fine work.

BROWN, KENNETH ARROWSMITH, Temporary Major, Devonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during a raid. It was largely owing to his initiative and courage that the operations met with such success. Previous to the raid he carried out two reconnaissances close to the enemy's wire, and brought back most valuable information.

CUMBERLEGE, GEOFFREY FENWICK JOCELYN, Temporary Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He dashed along the line rallying his own battalion and men of other units. He succeeded in restoring order and in reorganizing the line at a most critical time. Throughout the day he inspired all ranks by his high example of courage and devotion to duty.

DEARDEN, JAMES FERRAND, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his company. By his splendid example of courage and fine leadership several strong enemy counter-attacks were repulsed. At a critical stage he jumped on to the parapet with a machine gun and accounted for many of the enemy.

GORDON, DOUGLAS HAMILTON, Lieut., Sikhs, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of two platoons. He led his men to reinforce the right flank, and commenced bombing along the enemy trench, thereby regaining much lost ground. Later, he handled a machine gun with great skill, and succeeded in establishing a block under very heavy fire. He set a splendid example throughout the day.

GWYNNE, ROLAND VAUGHAN, Temporary Major, Sussex Yeomanry, attached Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and judgment in commanding and carrying out a daylight raid with his battalion. His personal example of courage and coolness was of great value throughout the operation. He personally went over to the enemy lines and supervised. He was wounded.

HAMMOND, JOHN MAXIMILIAN, M.B., Temporary Lieut., Royal Army Medical Corps, attached Devonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in evacuating a large number of wounded under the most difficult conditions. He was himself subsequently wounded, and although both his feet were practically blown off he ordered his stretcher-bearers to carry away another wounded man first.

MILDREN, WILLIAM FREDERICK, C.M.G., Lieut.-Colonel, London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a strong raiding party. He made admirable arrangements both as regards the preparation and the execution of the raid, and inspired his battalion with his own fine example.

MONTAGU, THE HONOURABLE LIONEL SAMUEL, Temporary Capt., Royal Marines. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in the first attack and captured his objective. Later, under very heavy fire, he personally took out a covering party and kept his men consolidating the trenches for over 24 hours. On another occasion he single-handedly captured 50 prisoners, and later, although wounded, remained at duty.

OZANNE, HAROLD, Major, Royal Marine Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He directed the consolidation of the position with marked ability, and was largely responsible for holding the position against subsequent enemy counter-attacks. He displayed great courage and determination throughout the operations.

PRICE, THOMAS REGINALD, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), Northampton Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of his battalion and led it from the first to the second objective. He organized two successive defensive positions under very heavy fire, thereby saving a critical situation. He inspired all ranks by his high example of courage and devotion to duty.

SHELTON, ROBERT HOWARD, Temporary Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was repeatedly counter-attacked by the enemy, and some of his posts were driven in, and it was only by his personal bravery in placing himself at the head of his men and charging the enemy that the position was held.

WEST, CHARLES SKEFFINGTON, Temporary Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He rendered invaluable service by most ably guiding and placing companies of the battalion in their battle positions within 400 yards of the enemy. He worked continuously under heavy hostile shell-fire, and was largely responsible for the success of the operations.

WESTON, SPENCER VAUGHAN PERCY, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in forming up the brigade in their assembly positions previous to an attack. He worked continuously under very heavy fire, and rendered invaluable assistance throughout.

WYLIE, JOHN PRICE, Capt. (Acting Major), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raiding party. He handled his party with great skill, and carried out the task allotted to him with conspicuous success. He has on many previous occasions done fine work.

CANADIAN CONTINGENT.

DAVIES, REGINALD DANBURY, Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a strong raiding party. He personally superintended the assembly of all parties prior to the attack, and carried out the task allotted to him with conspicuous success. He has previously rendered excellent service on many occasions.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

ROSE, JOHN GEORGE, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Service Corps. For conspicuous devotion to duty and the able manner in which he organized and maintained the Motor Tractor Service. It was largely due to his energy and resource that the forces in the field were able to receive supplies, without which the success of the operations would have been impossible.

(The names marked with an asterisk appeared in the London Gazette dated 17 March, 1917, without deeds.)

London Gazette, 21 April, 1917.—“ Admiralty, S.W., 21 April, 1917. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services in the Patrol Cruisers, under the command of Vice-Admiral Reginald G. O. Tupper, C.B., C.V.O., during the period 1 July–31 Dec. 1916.”

SMITH, HUMPHREY HUGH, Capt., R.N.

JORDAN, WALTER, Engineer Commander, R.N.R.

Honours for Royal Naval Air Service.

“ The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officer to be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order.”

BELL, BERTRAM CHARLES, Flight-Lieut. (Acting Flight-Commander), Royal Naval Air Service. For conspicuous bravery and skill in attacking hostile aircraft. Since 1 Feb. 1917, he has taken part in fourteen aerial combats, notably : On 17 March, 1917, on two different occasions during the same offensive patrol he attacked and drove down hostile machines, one completely out of control and the other in flames. On 24 March, 1917, he attacked a hostile machine which was diving on one of our machines. After he had fired about 30 rounds at a range of about 50 yards the hostile pilot fell back and his machine went down spinning and side-slipping completely out of control.

Honours for Miscellaneous Services.

"The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

HANAN, FRANCIS WILLIAM, Commander, R.N.

PARKER, JAMES SANDBACH, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

FRANK, FREDERICK AUGUSTUS, Lieut. (now Acting Lieut.-Commander), R.N.R.

London Gazette, 26 April, 1917.—"War Office, 26 April, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

*BAKER, ROBERT GEOFFREY, Major, Punjab, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed a quick grasp of the situation, and with great ability secured his left flank at a critical time, rendering it possible to organize further attacks elsewhere. His fearless, personal example contributed largely to the success of a difficult operation.

*FARRER, AUBREY DAVID MAPLETON, Temporary Capt., Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward alone a distance of 1,000 yards under very heavy fire to take command of an advanced post. Although wounded, he succeeded in reaching the post, and held it with marked skill and determination against great odds. Later in the day he was severely wounded.

GRIFFITHS, ALEXANDER HARCOURT, Capt., Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, attached King's African Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his column in a most gallant manner against a strongly-entrenched position and captured a field gun. He has consistently shown great coolness and ability.

HITCHIN, HAROLD EVERETT, Temporary Second Lieut., Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a bombing party. He made three most gallant attempts to force his way into the enemy's position and himself shot four of the enemy with his revolver. Later, he voluntarily joined in another company's attack, and rendered invaluable assistance. He was largely responsible for the final success of the operations.

KING, MARK, Second Lieut., Coldstream Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his platoon through an intense hostile barrage, displaying the greatest bravery. Later, on reaching the first objective and finding his left flank exposed, he got his men out of the enemy's front line, formed front to the left, advanced 400 yards, and captured an enemy second-line trench, thereby saving a critical situation.

MURRAY, RONALD ERNEST, Lieut.-Colonel, British South Africa Police. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his column. He set a splendid example of gallantry and able leadership during a successful assault on very superior forces of the enemy.

*MYLES, EDGAR KINGHORN, V.C., Second Lieut., Welsh Regt., attached Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When all the officers except two had become casualties, he, for five hours, inspired confidence in the defence against two counter-attacks, and sent back most accurate and valuable reports of the situation. His courage and fine example were largely responsible for the steadiness of all ranks with him.

*WATSON, ALLAN, M.B., Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward under very heavy fire, before his own unit was ordered to advance, and commenced to dress the wounded of another battalion. He worked untiringly under fire both day and night, never resting until all the wounded had been brought in.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

CROWTHER, HENRY ARNOLD, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading the front line of his battalion during a reconnaissance in force on the enemy position. He repeatedly traversed the front line under heavy fire to superintend the action of the companies. Later in the day he personally directed the necessary movements to break off the action, showing marked ability and initiative.

(The names marked with an asterisk appeared in the London Gazette dated 7 March, 1917, without deeds.)

London Gazette, 4 May, 1917.—"War Office, 4 May, 1917. GUEST, THE HONOURABLE FREDERICK EDWARD, Capt., Reserve of Officers, late Life Guards.

PATTERSON, JOHN, Temporary Major, East African Pay Corps.

RIGBY, WALTER, Capt., Reserve of Officers, late Royal Irish Rifles and East African Police.

ANDERSON, ROY DUNLOP, Capt., Carrier Section, E. A. Transport Corps, was gazetted on this date as M.C. for the above-mentioned services, but this was cancelled and the D.S.O. substituted. (See London Gazette, 22 June, 1918.)

London Gazette, 10 May, 1917.—"Admiralty, S.W., 10 May, 1917." Honours for Service in the Action between H.M. Ships Swift and Broke and German Destroyers, on the Night of the 20th to 21st April, 1917.

"The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their services in command of H.M.S. Swift and H.M.S. Broke respectively, on the night of the 20th to 21st April, 1917, when they successfully engaged a flotilla of five or six German destroyers, of which two were sunk."

PECK, AMBROSE MAYNARD, Commander (now Capt.), R.N.

EVANS, EDWARD RATCLIFFE GARTH RUSSELL, C.B., Commander (now Capt.), Royal Navy.

London Gazette, 11 May, 1917.—"War Office, 11 May, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to"—

LUMSDEN, FREDERICK WILLIAM, D.S.O., Major, Royal Marine Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a strong reconnaissance party. He carried out the task allotted to him with conspicuous success, and skilfully withdrew his party at a critical time. His conduct, rapid decision and good judgment saved many casualties.

(Distinguished Service Order gazetted 1 Jan. 1917. First Bar awarded in this Gazette.) (See next entry.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to"—

LUMSDEN, FREDERICK WILLIAM, D.S.O., Major, Royal Marine Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He made a reconnaissance of the enemy's position, moving over open ground under very heavy fire and bringing back most valuable information. He rendered invaluable services throughout the operations.

(Distinguished Service Order gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

MEIKLEJOHN, JAMES ROSS CONRAD, D.S.O., Major, Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when he kept well in touch with battalions, moving about regardless of fire until severely wounded. After having his skull fractured by a shell splinter he continued at work until he had rendered a clear report on the situation.

(Distinguished Service Order gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BUCKLE, CHRISTOPHER GALBRAITH, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northampton Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. He visited the captured trenches during the action and gave orders regarding dispositions and consolidation. The dash of his battalion in the attack and their tenacity in holding the position won, were to a considerable extent due to his influence.

DUGUID, CHARLES FREDERICK, M.C., Temporary Capt., Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With 20 men of his company he fought his way through uncut enemy wire and established a strong point in a small length of hostile trench. He maintained his position there for 36 hours in spite of several strong enemy counter-attacks.

GROGAN, GEORGE WILLIAM ST. GEORGE, C.M.G., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. He visited the captured trenches during the action and gave instructions regarding dispositions and consolidation. He kept the brigade informed of the situation, and his reports were of great value. The spirit of his battalion owes much to his personal courage and cheerfulness.

*GUNNING, ORLANDO GEORGE, C.M.G., Lieut.-Colonel and Brevet Colonel, Indian Army. For conspicuous coolness and gallant leadership. He led his battalion through heavy enfilade rifle and machine-gun fire, and continued to command although twice wounded. By his example he retained the cohesion of his regiment and kept up their fighting spirit under very adverse circumstances.

*HARRISON, WILLIAM RALPH ELLIOT, Capt., Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He moved his observation ladder to within 700 yards of the enemy's trenches, and remained up it throughout the day under very heavy fire. His accurate information was of the greatest value, and his initiative and utter disregard of personal safety beyond all praise.

STOREY, CHARLES ERNEST, Temporary Lieut., Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative when in command of a Tank. He took his car up and down the enemy trenches, working until all his petrol was exhausted and only two of the crew were unwounded. He is reported as having been responsible for the taking of between 200 and 300 prisoners.

BYL, JOHN VANDER, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of an advanced squadron. Under very heavy fire he effected an entrance to the village, and shortly after assumed command of another squadron. He cleared the village of the enemy and seized the tactical points in advance. He held all the positions gained until relieved by the Infantry.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

PYE, JOHN VANDER BYL, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative when in charge of the whole of the front line held by his battalion. He organized a successful attack and exhibited great energy and determination when meeting a counter-attack made by the enemy. He set a splendid example to those under him.

CANADIAN CONTINGENT.

BROWN, JOHN HECTOR INNES, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during a raid on the enemy's trenches. He took charge of the assembly of the left assaulting wave and of three large offensive patrols. He carried out these duties with marked skill, and throughout set a magnificent example to his men. Later, he reorganized the dispositions of the companies in the front line and personally supervised the collection of a number of the wounded.

RORKE, HERBERT VICTOR, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raiding party. By his untiring energy and carefully thought-out preparation he contributed in a very large degree to the splendid success of the operation. He personally superintended the assembly of all parties before the attack, and his arrangements were perfect and worked without a hitch.

WILSON, ALEXANDER DOUGLAS, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. Owing to his fearless leading and sound preliminary training his battalion carried out the task allotted to it with conspicuous success.

(The names marked with an asterisk appeared in the London Gazette dated 17 March, 1917, without deeds.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned Reward for distinguished service in the field. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

BROWN, JAMES HENRY (Christian name corrected to James Hardy), Temporary Sub-Lieut., Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

(The act of gallantry will be announced in a later Gazette.) (See London Gazette, 18 July, 1917.)

London Gazette, 12 May, 1917.—"Admiralty, 12 May, 1917."

Honours for Royal Naval Air Service.

"The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

LAMBE, CHARLES LAVEROCK, Capt., R.N. For his valuable services in command of the R.N.A.S. units on the Belgian Coast; he is very largely responsible for the good service in the varied duties carried out by them against the enemy.

BROMET, GEOFFREY RHODES, Squadron-Commander, R.N. This officer commanded a squadron of the R.N.A.S., attached to the Flying Corps, with conspicuous ability and success. Under his command the squadron developed into a most efficient and formidable fighting force, which has brought great credit to the Royal Naval Air Service.

NEWTON-CLARE, EDWARD THOMAS, Squadron-Commander, R.N.A.S. During the past year he has led his squadron with conspicuous success in numerous bomb attacks, and on many occasions has engaged and driven down hostile machines.

Honours for Miscellaneous Services.

"The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

HALLWRIGHT, WILLIAM WYBROW, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. (since killed).

FORBES, ARTHUR WALTER, Lieut., R.N.
BOLSTER, THOMAS CHARLES CARPENTER, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. In recognition of conspicuously gallant conduct on the 15th of April, 1917, when he took his destroyer into a mined area to rescue survivors from a hospital ship, which had been sunk by a mine, and from a patrol boat, which had struck a mine in proceeding to the assistance of the hospital ship. His handling of his destroyer in heavy weather and taking her alongside the wreck of the patrol boat was a splendid piece of seamanship.

Honours for Royal Naval Air Service.

"The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order."

MALONE, JOHN JOSEPH, Flight Sub-Lieut., Royal Naval Air Service. For successfully attacking and bringing down hostile aircraft on numerous occasions. At about 6.30 a.m. on 23 April, 1917, while on patrol, he attacked a hostile scout and drove it down under control. He then attacked a second scout, which, after the pilot had been hit, turned over on its back and went down through the clouds. A third scout, attacked by him from a distance of about 20 yards, descended completely out of control. While engaging a fourth machine he ran out of ammunition, so returned to the advanced landing ground, replenished his supply, and at once returned and attacked another hostile formation, one of which he forced down out of control. On the afternoon of 24 April, 1917, he engaged a hostile two-seater machine and, after badly wounding the observer, forced it to land on our side of the lines.

London Gazette, 26 May, 1917.—"War Office, 26 May, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to:"

WILKINSON, ALLAN MACHIN, D.S.O., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Hampshire Regt. and Royal Flying Corps. For great skill and gallantry. He came down to a low altitude and destroyed a hostile scout which was attacking one of our machines, the pilot of which had been wounded, thereby saving it. In one day he shot down and destroyed six hostile machines. He has destroyed eight hostile machines during the past ten days and has displayed exceptional skill and gallantry in leading offensive patrols.

(Distinguished Service Order gazetted 20 Oct. 1916.)

SCOTT, HENRY ST. GEORGE STEWART, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Major), Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and determination when with 250 men he captured 373 of the enemy. He was twice held up by strong entrenched pickets, who were covering parties attempting to cross the river in pontoons, but he pushed on under heavy fire, inflicting great loss on those crossing and prevented any further attempt at escape.

(Distinguished Service Order gazetted 29 Oct. 1915.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BEALE, CLIVE OLIVER BERTRAM, Temporary Second Lieut., General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He made two most gallant attempts to carry out a special mission, which involved a night flight of about 50 miles, in very adverse weather. Although unsuccessful, he showed throughout the greatest courage and determination to achieve his mission.

BIRD, AUGUSTUS WIELAND, Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions. When on artillery patrol he succeeded in reporting 13 active batteries, observing fire on and silencing several of them. On another occasion he attacked and scattered with machine-gun fire two parties of the enemy which were seen forming up. This operation was carried out for a period of 2½ hours in very adverse weather conditions.

CURRY, WILLIAM HORACE, Second Lieut., South Staffordshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He collected men from three different companies and led them forward as far as it was possible to advance. Later, although nearly surrounded by the enemy, he succeeded in consolidating and maintaining his position. On another occasion he took command of two companies and handled them in a most able manner.

DAVIS, HAROLD JAMES NORMAN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Connaught Rangers, attached Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. He took charge of a critical situation in the most able manner, and under very heavy fire personally directed the movements of his battalion. He successfully occupied and consolidated his objective.

DE HAVILLAND, HERWARD, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Flying Corps. Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and skill. He attacked and drove down a hostile machine. This is the second enemy machine he has destroyed. He has rendered invaluable service throughout the operations, and has at all times set a magnificent example.

HEMPSON, CLAUDE DAWSON, Temporary Capt., Suffolk Regt., attached Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although his right flank was exposed, he held and consolidated the captured trenches for 16 hours against determined enemy bombing attacks. It was mainly owing to his untiring energy and organizing powers that the position was maintained and the enemy finally driven back.

JOHNSTON, WALTER MOWBRAY PERCIVAL, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battery. He established himself, before dawn, on the remains of a tree, a short distance from our front trenches, and, in full view of the enemy, remained there for several hours directing the fire of his battery by telephone until the whole of the enemy's wire had been effectively destroyed.

O'CONNOR, CORNELIUS BERNARD, Temporary Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His company was exposed to heavy rifle and enfilade machine-gun fire. By his skilful handling he managed to consolidate the position, despite heavy casualties and several determined efforts on the part of the enemy to drive him out. He eventually captured 90 prisoners.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

ROBINSON, JAMES ALEXANDER, Major, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He supervised the assembly of the battalion previous to the attack. After the attack had been launched he went forward and sent back most valuable reports on the situation. He showed great bravery and coolness throughout, and his presence in the front line had a most cheering and marked effect on all present.

London Gazette, 14 June, 1917.—" War Office, 14 June, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned Rewards for gallantry and meritorious service on the occasion of the mining of a Hospital Ship. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

MEADOWS, ROBERT THORNTON, Major, Royal Army Medical Corps.

London Gazette, 15 June, 1917.—" Admiralty, 15 June, 1917. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services in the operations described in the Commander-in-Chief's Despatch." (Despatch of Rear-Admiral E. Charlton, dated 28 Jan. 1917, describing the later coastal operations by His Majesty's Ships against German East Africa.)

WATSON, REGINALD JAMES NEWALL, Commander, R.N. Was in charge of landing party at Bagamoyo on 15 Aug. 1916, and displayed great dash and energy in the face of unexpectedly superior forces.

BOSKRUGE, FRANCIS JOHN, Engineer-Commander, R.N. Kept the squadron and H.M.S. Hyacinth in a state of continuous efficiency for over two years with the smallest possible allowance for necessary repairs.

MOON, EDWIN ROWLAND, Flight Lieut., R.N.A.S. (now prisoner of war). Since April, 1916, has carried out constant flights over the enemy's coast, including reconnaissances, bomb-dropping and spotting for gun fire in all weathers. Has shown great coolness and resource on all occasions.

" The King has further approved of the following appointment to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officer, in recognition of his services with the East African Military Forces."

THORNLEY, GEORGE STANLEY, Commander, R.N., Senior Naval Officer, Lake Victoria Nyanza. Rendered most efficient assistance to the Military throughout the campaign.

London Gazette, 18 June, 1917.—" War Office, 18 June, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to :—

GIRDWOOD, AUSTIN CLAUDE, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers, attached Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when he made a daring and invaluable reconnaissance under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. He concentrated his battalion in daylight, and organized a most successful attack over 200 yards of open ground. (D.S.O. gazetted 27 Sept. 1901.)

HAIG, ROLAND, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade, attached Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion during an attack on the enemy's position. The success of this attack was due to the ability and energy with which he trained his battalion, made his preparations and handled the troops under his command during the battle. (D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1915.)

HALL, JOHN HAMILTON, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. His initiative and good leading and the determined way in which he pressed the attack of his battalion home greatly contributed to the success of the operations. The high moral of his battalion and its fine spirit in attacking qualities are greatly due to his personal efforts. (D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1916.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

ELLIOTT, CHARLES HAZEL, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry (Christian name corrected to Charles Hazell [London Gazette, 28 July, 1917]). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. Although the enemy had penetrated our line and were within 500 yards of Battalion Headquarters, he took up a position with batmen, cooks and signallers, and checked the enemy's advance, thus enabling the counter-attacking force to come forward and drive the enemy back. His action at a most critical time turned what might have been a defeat into a victory. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

GELLIBRAND, JOHN, D.S.O., Temporary Brigadier-General, Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His brigade reached its third objective, but was ordered back owing to the division on the right being held up at the first objective. His brigade repelled several counter-attacks and held on when the brigade on the right was in difficulties. It was largely owing to his influence and presence in this advanced position that the operations were successful. (D.S.O. gazetted 2 May, 1916.)

LOUIT, NOEL MEDWAY, D.S.O., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in laying out the jumping-off tape under heavy shell and rifle fire. Later, he took forward a machine gun and platoon, and opened a surprise burst of fire into the enemy, thus relieving the pressure at a critical time. He did not leave the line until the whole front was secure. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

MACKAY, IVEN GIFFARD, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While acting as Brigadier, when the brigade on the right was broken into by the enemy, the battalion under his orders counter-attacked and assisted to drive out the enemy and restore the position. His action in repelling the counter-attack was of the utmost value, and his prompt action and extreme resolution showed leadership of a high order. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

MURRAY, HENRY WILLIAM, V.C., D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He gallantly led his company over 1,200 yards of fire-swept ground. Later, he went along the whole frontage, organizing the defence, encouraging the men of all units by his cheerfulness and bravery, and always moving to the points of danger. He is not only brave and daring, but a skilful soldier, possessing tactical instinct of the highest order. (D.S.O. gazetted 14 Nov. 1916.)

SMITH, ROBERT, D.S.O., Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative. By his skilful dispositions he met and held a powerful enemy attack, and personally conducting operations under heavy rifle fire, he counter-attacked, retook the lost ground, and pushed the enemy back for two miles at the point of the bayonet. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

" His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

AMBROSE, CHARLES FREDERICK NELSON, Temporary Second Lieut., Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After his tank had been badly damaged by shell fire, and all his gunners had become casualties, he continued to keep a brisk fire on the enemy, who were surrounding his tank and attacking it with bombs. His conduct throughout the action displayed the greatest courage.

BARRY, JOHN REDMOND, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He maintained his position at a very advanced observation post throughout the day, in order to cut wire preparatory to the Infantry advancing. Later, he made a reconnaissance and handed in a report which was of the utmost value.

BERTIE, THE HONOURABLE ARTHUR MICHAEL, Temporary Capt., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his company. When the attacking company was held up by intense machine-gun fire and the situation was becoming critical, he, taking a machine gun with him, advanced to a position where he could engage the enemy machine gun. He subsequently went back alone under the most intense fire and brought up ammunition for his gun. He set a magnificent example to his men.

BISHOP, WILLIAM AVERY, Capt., Canadian Cavalry and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While in a single-seater he attacked three hostile machines, two of which he brought down, although in the meantime he was himself attacked by four other hostile machines. His courage and determination have set a fine example to others.

BURT, ALFRED, Lieut.-Colonel, Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His regiment was ordered forward when the situation was most obscure, and by his skilful leading he was able to seize an important position and thus prevent the enemy from counter-attacking. His personal bravery was a fine example to all.

CAMPBELL, HUGH, Major, London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The ammunition lorries were being heavily shelled when he personally drove two of them which were in flames out of the danger zone. He then organized a party to get the fire under and remove ammunition from the vicinity of the flames. This task was carried out under continuous shell fire, and by his prompt action and gallantry undoubtedly saved many lives and averted a disaster.

DURNFORD, ROBERT CHICHESTER, Second Lieut., Hampshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although severely wounded he continued to struggle on, encouraging his men for over a mile, when he was again hit, but he would not allow his wounds to be dressed until the position gained had been consolidated.

FITZGIBBON, FRANCIS, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He moved his battery up by daylight over exposed ground under shell fire, and came into action with the most successful results.

FORBES-ROBERTSON, JAMES, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion during an enemy attack. He collected all the men he could find, and, taking up a position on the outskirts of the village, brought the hostile advance to an end by his fire. He undoubtedly saved a very critical situation by his promptness, bravery and example.

GREEN, GILBERT WARE M., M.C., Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has set a magnificent example by his gallant conduct in attacking the enemy's aeroplanes when in superior numbers. He brought down three enemy machines within 24 hours.

HORNOR, BASSETT FARDELL, Second Lieut., Norfolk Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in action. He was the first of his regiment to land on the left bank of the river, and displayed great courage and resource in promptly putting out of action single-handed an enemy machine gun which was about to open fire. Later, he gallantly led his company forward in the face of heavy fire and was responsible for the capture of three more machine guns.

JACK, JAMES LOCHHEAD, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Scottish Rifles, attached West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He conducted the attack of his battalion with marked skill and foresight, and attained all his objectives in the minimum time and with very small loss. He has set a most inspiring example of gallantry to all.

LEY, EDWARD MARLBOROUGH, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. He handled his battalion with the greatest dash and judgment throughout and was largely responsible for the success of the operations. He showed great qualities as a leader.

OATES, JOHN SHERBROOKE COAFE, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed the greatest skill and gallantry while commanding the battalion at a critical period. During the day he repeatedly crossed the open a distance of 500 yards under continual sniping in order to superintend operations, and by his courage and determination succeeded in obtaining complete ascendancy over the enemy.

PARRY, DULAS BENTLEY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He inspired all ranks with the greatest confidence, and thus materially assisted the battalion under his command to carry through a most difficult operation. He displayed great skill and untiring energy in training the battalion beforehand.

PITMAN, CHARLES ROBERT SENHOUSE, M.C., Capt., Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raiding party. In spite of the most difficult conditions he succeeded in landing and reorganizing his party. He inflicted much damage on the enemy and brought back a trench mortar. It was owing to his coolness and good leading that the object of the raid was achieved and the whole party withdrawn with but few casualties.

PRIAULX, GEORGE KENDALL, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. With the utmost confidence and determination he fought his battalion through the village, overcoming all obstacles and gaining his objectives. He set a magnificent example throughout.

PRYOR, WALTER MARLBOROUGH, Capt. (Temporary Major), Hertfordshire Regt., attached Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He rendered most valuable service in collecting parties of men who were lost and putting them on to the work of consolidating the position gained. It was largely due to his efforts that a strong position was created, thereby facilitating the dispersing of enemy counter-attacks. This task was accomplished at great personal risk from enemy machine-gun fire.

RICHMOND, GEORGE WILLIAM, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Engineers, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and determination while forcing a passage of the river. His coolness and resource were mainly responsible for the successful launching of the pontoons which effected the crossing, and his attitude was an inspiring example to all under his command. He has previously done fine work.

RODOCANACHI, THEODORE EMMANUEL, M.C., Capt., Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry (Lieut., Hampshire Regt., Special Reserve). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded he led his company with great gallantry and pressed on to his objective in the face of heavy fire. Although again wounded during the advance he continued to lead on into the hostile position, where he immediately organized the consolidation and continued to command his company until finally incapacitated by a third wound.

RUSSELL, ROBERT TOR, Second Lieut., Indian Army Reserve of Officers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in charging the enemy's trench, which was strongly held. He then led a bombing attack and cleared 200 yards of the trench. Later, he maintained his position for four hours, when reinforcements arrived.

SHEPHERD, CLAUDE INNES, Capt., Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy counter-attack. He rallied men who were without leaders, and by his personal example and leading saved a difficult situation. He was wounded in three places.

STORK, ERNEST STANLEY, Capt., M.B., Royal Army Medical Corps, attached Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed untiring energy and devotion to duty in evacuating a large number of wounded under heavy fire. He set a magnificent example of courage and determination.

TOOGOOD, CYRIL GEORGE, Temporary Second Lieut., Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the first batch of pontoons to cross the river. On landing he so disposed his men and cleared the banks of the enemy that he was able to establish a foothold. In spite of heavy casualties, he held on for over six hours, thereby enabling a bridge to be built.

TURNER, ALFRED CHARLES FOSTER, M.B., Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attended wounded under heavy fire day and night without rest. He was ever present along the line from the A.D.S. to the most advanced trenches, and on several occasions faced enemy artillery batteries in order that reserves of stretcher-bearers might reach their objectives.

WHITE, WILLIAM LAMBERT, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battery. He reconnoitred by daylight in front of our infantry outposts, and established an O.P. in a shell-hole 200 yards in front of our outposts, whence he controlled the wire-cutting operations all day. In addition to cutting wire, his battery carried out important bombardment tasks.

WOOD, WILLIAM FERGUSON, M.B., Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps, Special Reserve, attached Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under most trying circumstances and heavy fire he collected and tended the wounded without rest or food. He frequently made dangerous tours looking for wounded men.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

SOMERVILLE, ROBERT SMITH, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his company. He showed great skill in the handling of a delicate situation, and his cheerful courage under most trying circumstances inspired his men to the magnificent efforts which they undoubtedly made. He was severely wounded.

WOODMAN, HAROLD EUSTACE, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He prepared strong defences in carefully-chosen positions, and not only he, but all his officers and men, knew the ground thoroughly as the result of well-organized reconnaissances. At an early stage of the action he counter-attacked a large force of the enemy, and succeeded in holding up their advance until reinforcements arrived. He was largely responsible for saving a critical situation.

"The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officer to be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of his services in the prosecution of the war."

CUMING, ROBERT STEVENSON DALTON, Admiral (Temporary Capt., R.N.R.).

London Gazette, 13 July, 1917.—"War Office, 13 July, 1917. Despatch on military operations of the Rhodesian Forces from the High Commissioner for South Africa to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated 10 March, 1917, states that the Distinguished Service Order and Special Promotion to Commander were awarded to"—

SPICER SIMSON, G. B., Commander, R.N. (for the Tanganyika Naval Expedition).

London Gazette, 18 July, 1917.—"War Office, 18 July, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to"—

McLEAN, CHARLES WESLEY WELDON, D.S.O., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On two occasions in the same day he went forward at great personal risk into heavy barrage, machine-gun and rifle fire to reconnoitre and report upon the position of our infantry. The following day he led a party of officers and men under heavy shell fire to extinguish a fire which was threatening to cause grave casualties in his battery, he himself taking the chief part in saving the guns and ammunition. His fearlessness and disregard for personal safety was at all times most marked.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 Nov. 1915; First Bar gazetted in this Gazette.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to"—

ASQUITH, ARTHUR MELLAND, D.S.O., Temporary Acting Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and determination in the attack and clearance of a village, when he personally captured ten of the enemy, and later organized its defence, and, by his contempt of danger under heavy fire, contributed greatly to the success of the operations and to the steadiness of all ranks with him.

(D.S.O. gazetted 17 April, 1917.)

BORRETT, OSWALD CUTHBERT, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Lancaster Regt., attached Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great initiative throughout the operations in handling his battalion. His personal bravery and energy under heavy fire were very great factors in the success of the advance. His grasp of the situation enabled this brigade to advance its line in the face of heavy opposition.

(D.S.O. gazetted 23 June, 1915.)

BRYANT, CHARLES EDGAR, D.S.O., Capt., Lancers and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has displayed the utmost gallantry and skill in leading photographic reconnaissances. In spite of overwhelming opposition by hostile aircraft, he has never failed to carry out his difficult task.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1915.)

DAWSON, WILLIAM ROBERT AUFRERE, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the situation was somewhat critical he displayed conspicuous bravery in organizing the defence. Although his troops were exhausted from prolonged exposure, he completely reorganized the line under heavy shell fire. His total disregard for personal danger was most marked.

(D.S.O. gazetted 15 April, 1916.)

GEPP, ERNEST CYRIL, D.S.O., Major, Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He several times visited the assaulting battalions and brought back valuable information. He had on each occasion to pass through heavy barrage and machine-gun fire. His splendid example of coolness and courage were of the greatest value.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

GRIFFIN, CHRISTOPHER JOSEPH, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great ability and determination. When the left brigade was out of touch he was mainly responsible for communication being re-established at a critical moment when conditions were most trying. The successful issue was largely due to his splendid example.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1915.)

HAMILTON, SACKVILLE WILLIAM SACKVILLE, D.S.O., Major, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in sitting first and support line trenches during an attack under heavy fire. His initiative enabled a situation which was confused owing to darkness to be cleared up, and after making a personal reconnaissance he returned with his information through heavy barrage and machine-gun fire. He subsequently made a further successful report on the whole situation under the same conditions, and displayed consummate ability and fearlessness.

(D.S.O. gazetted 15 April, 1916.)

HOLMES, WILLIAM GEORGE, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the final stages of the fighting he was the soul of both defence and offence. He was placed in command of the remnants of all battalions in the vicinity, and it was mainly due to his gallantry and dash that the enemy counter-attack was defeated.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

INNES, SYDNEY ARMITAGE, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout the advance he commanded his battalion with the greatest skill and courage. His personal example and presence in the firing line, when the battalion had suffered heavy casualties, was of the utmost value and assistance to the men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

JACKSON, ARNOLD NUGENT STRODE, D.S.O. (name changed to Arnold Nugent Strode Strobe-Jackson), Capt. (Temporary Major), Loyal North Lancashire Regt., attached Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry during lengthy operations, when he assumed command of the battalion and, although wounded on two separate occasions, was able to carry out most valuable work. By his skill and courage he offered a splendid example to all ranks with him.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

McLEAN, CHARLES WESLEY WELDON, D.S.O., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has commanded his battery with great skill and courage. He has observed fire and commanded the battery from an observation post under heavy fire with great coolness and accuracy.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 Nov. 1915.)

PENNYCUICK, JAMES ALEXANDER CHARLES, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion during lengthy operations, when he was largely responsible for consolidating positions gained, constructing strong points and trenches in most exposed positions, and, notwithstanding heavy casualties, by his courage and skill he enabled the work to be successfully performed and the positions rendered secure.

(D.S.O. gazetted 9 Dec. 1914.)

POLLITT, GEORGE PATON, D.S.O., Temporary Major, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He made constant and dangerous personal reconnaissances in connection with gas attacks. His close supervision and fearlessness in the front line contributed very largely to successful operations, and the men under his command owed their spirit and determination in no small degree to his magnificent example.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

PORCH, CECIL PORCH, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, East Surrey Regt., attached Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with the greatest gallantry and determination. He personally superintended the cutting of the enemy wire under continuous machine-gun and rifle fire. He set a very fine example of coolness and courage throughout.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 March, 1917.)

RICE, CECIL EDWARD, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his battalion over ground that was under very heavy fire and in full view of the enemy. His splendid personal example inspired all ranks with confidence. Though severely wounded, he insisted on making his way to the dressing station unaided.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

SHANNON, WILLIAM JOHN, D.S.O., Major, Lancers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was commanding a dismounted party working on a cavalry track. By his skill in disposing his men and his personal energy under heavy fire, he succeeded in completing the track before the arrival of the Division, thereby performing most valuable service.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

SMYTH, GERALD BRICE FERGUSON, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Engineers, attached King's Own Scottish Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although seriously wounded, he remained at the telephone in an ill-protected trench for many hours during a critical time to report the course of events to Brigade Headquarters. He realized that there was no officer of experience to replace him, and his sense of duty may cost him his remaining arm, the other having been amputated as the result of a previous wound. He was five times wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 11 Nov. 1914.)

STERDALE-BENNETT, WALTER, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On discovering the wire uncut except in a few places he went forward himself and led his battalion through the partially cut gaps. He finally gained his objective, and held on against very strong resistance. The success of the operation was almost entirely due to his personal example.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Jan. 1917.)

TOMKINSON, FRANCIS MARTIN, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability in the handling of his battalion. He commanded in three attacks during the month, and on each occasion, after gaining his objective, was counter-attacked by considerable enemy forces. His determination and complete control of his unit enabled him in every instance to defeat the enemy.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

PLANT, ERIC CLIVE PEGUS, D.S.O., Major, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion. When acting as Brigade Major he remained on duty continuously for over 48 hours, and his gallant work in reorganizing broken infantry, and later in rallying stragglers under heavy artillery fire, was invaluable.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

ALBAN, CLIFTON EDWARD RAWDON GRANT, Capt. (Acting Major), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When assembly trenches were ordered to be dug he reconnoitred the position, placed the tape, and superintended the digging of the trench. On a later date he carried out a daring reconnaissance of the enemy wire, and rendered most valuable reports.

ANDREWS, RICHARD JOHN, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut. (Acting Major), Devon Regt. (attached Welsh Regt.). For conspicuous gallantry and resource when in command of a brigade. Early in the operations he was wounded in the foot by a shell, but, with great courage and skill, he took effective measures to carry out an original plan, and subsequently directed a successful withdrawal. He personally supervised the retirement of the last supporting platoon in order to ensure, so far as possible, the safety of the wounded. He has been previously noted for gallantry and skill when in command of a battalion.

ARMITAGE, FRANCIS ARTHUR WILLIAM, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Yorkshire Regt., attached Hampshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with the utmost skill and determination. Subjected to heavy shell fire throughout, he remained in close touch with the enemy, gaining his objective the first day. He successfully beat off an enemy counter-attack, and held on until relieved.

BARRY, JAMES HARDING, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps, attached London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in attending to the wounded under exceptionally trying conditions. Under very heavy shell fire he dug out five men who were buried, and amputated two men's legs on the spot. He showed utter disregard of any personal risk, and his example was splendid.

BERESFORD, PERCY WILLIAM, Lieut.-Colonel, London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability in command of his battalion during heavy enemy counter-attacks. The skill with which he handled his reserves was of the utmost assistance to the division on his right, and his determination enabled us to hold on to an almost impossible position. He repulsed three counter-attacks, and lost heavily in doing so.

BRIDGES, JOHN VICTOR, Capt. (Temporary Major), Worcestershire Regt., attached Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His display of untiring energy and devotion to duty was magnificent. He led his battalion with great skill and courage, and it was largely due to his initiative that the battalion gained its objectives.

BROWN, JAMES HARDY, Temporary Sub-Lieut., Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout the campaign. He has navigated his ship at high speed, night and day, in all weathers, with marked zeal and determination. He has at all times set a magnificent example of courage and initiative.

(The award of the D.S.O. was announced in the Gazette of 11 May, 1917, without details of service. The second Christian name was incorrectly published therein.)

BURKE, THOMAS FRANCIS, Second Lieut., Scottish Rifles and Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of machine guns during an attack upon enemy trenches. With great dash he personally captured an enemy machine gun and its team, and brought fire to bear on the retreating enemy with deadly effect. His promptness and courage were admirable.

CHILD-VILLIERS, THE HONOURABLE ARTHUR GEORGE, Capt. (Temporary Major), Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in making his way alone, through heavy shell fire, to a post that had been cut off by hostile fire. He at once reorganized the position, and remained in command, successfully conducting the defence, and by his courage and energy setting a splendid example to his men.

COLLINGS-WELLS, JOHN STANHOPE, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Bedfordshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry in command of a battalion which had gained its objective, holding it in spite of frequent and heavy counter-attacks. Later, in command of a composite battalion, it was owing to his powers of leadership and bravery that the battalion was formed up in darkness, on strange ground and under heavy shell fire, and subsequently achieved its object.

COMPTON-SMITH, GEOFFREY LEE, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with the greatest skill and determination. Immediately the objective was gained he moved forward to supervise consolidation and cover the advance of another brigade. Although wounded, he remained in the position, and his personal example was of the utmost value to all.

DANN, WILLIAM ROWLAND HARRIS, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Bedfordshire Regt., attached London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding a battalion. His personality and bravery enabled his battalion to carry out a most difficult relief at night, under very heavy shell fire. He was heavily counter-attacked on three successive occasions, but repulsed the enemy in spite of his own very severe losses.

ELLIOTT-COOPER, NEVILLE BOWES, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment, when his battalion had suffered heavily and was temporarily disorganized, he showed the greatest promptness and bravery in rallying the men and in clearing up and restoring the situation. He personally led forward a patrol of 20 men, under very heavy fire, and returned to his brigadier with 12 prisoners and very valuable information.

FELLOWES, RONALD TOWNSEND, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great initiative and skill, capturing an important position and holding it against repeated counter-attacks. The fine spirit shown by the battalion under most trying conditions was largely due to his personal example.

FLETCHER, JAMES HENRY, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed the utmost bravery and coolness when commanding the bearers. He worked continuously under artillery and machine-gun fire. It was largely due to his gallant conduct that so many wounded were safely evacuated.

FOLETT, FRANCIS BERE, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Warwickshire Regt., attached London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with the utmost gallantry and skill. By his energy and grasp of the situation the brigade was enabled to reach its objective, having been previously held up by uncut wire and machine guns.

GOLD, CHARLES RENÉ, Second Lieut., Yeomanry, attached Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed the greatest gallantry and initiative in attacking an enemy strong point which had been a severe hindrance. He, with only a handful of men, rushed it from a flank, inflicting many casualties and capturing 20 prisoners and two machine guns.

HORSFALL, ALFRED GARNETT, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of his battalion he displayed the greatest courage and determination. It was largely due to his personal example that the operations of his battalion were so successfully carried out.

HUTCHISON, HENRY OLIPHANT, M.C., Major, Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. A battery was subjected to heavy shell fire, which set fire to the position and an ammunition dump close by. He at once dashed to where the fire was burning and, assisted by a gunner, succeeded in extinguishing the flames under continuous shell fire. By his prompt action the ammunition dump and gun were saved.

JERVIS, ERNEST CHARLES SCOTT, Capt. (Temporary Major), Reserve of Officers and Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He rendered most valuable service by his promptness in bringing machine guns into action. He invariably carried out personal reconnaissances of the situation.

KEMP, CHARLES MATTHEW, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry when in command of his battalion. After an enemy attack, when some disorganization had set in, he rendered invaluable aid in collecting stragglers and leading them forward, under heavy fire, in a counter-attack. His coolness and bravery enabled him to successfully reorganize the troops at his disposal.

LEARMOUNT, LEONARD WRIGHT, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Major), General List and Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has shown great skill and determination when on photographic reconnaissances. Despite continuous fire from the ground and attack from hostile aircraft, he has repeatedly effected a safe landing after completing his task.

MACCALLUM, HUGH, Temporary Capt., Royal Indian Marines. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout the campaign. He has navigated his ship at high speed, night and day, in all weathers, with marked zeal and determination. He has at all times set a magnificent example of courage and initiative.

MAJENDIE, VIVIAN HENRY BRUCE, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Somersetshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with the greatest skill and determination. His battalion was continuously in touch with the enemy and under heavy shell and machine-gun fire, and its grit and determination reflect the spirit of its commanding officer.

MILLER, LEONARD CHALLINOR, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion in maintaining his newly-formed battery in action, under heavy and accurate fire, until very serious casualties had been suffered and all the guns had been put out of action.

MCCRAOKEN, WILLIAM JAMES, M.C., Temporary Surgeon, R.N. For conspicuous gallantry and resource during operations, when, after attending wounded in captured dug-outs, he pushed forward into a village which was being heavily shelled, compelled a captured enemy M.O. to show the best enemy R.A.P., and then kept him, with 12 enemy Red Cross men, busy all day bringing in and dressing over 150 of our wounded, who otherwise could not have been treated, and then sending them down. He also searched the front line under a heavy fire for wounded.

MCKENZIE, WILLIAM SINOLAIR, Lieut., Seaforth Highlanders, Special Reserve (employed Indian Army Reserve of Officers). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical period during a strong enemy attack, when the left flank of his battalion was exposed, he, on his own initiative, collected a few men and rushed to the point of attack, encouraging those who had been temporarily dislodged to resume the offensive. It was due to his personal influence and courage that a critical situation was averted.

(D.S.O. gazetted without deed 26 March, 1917.)

NEEVES, HORACE HUNTER, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his company during an attack of the enemy position. His skilful leading and determined courage enabled him, in spite of enemy flanking and reverse fire, to get his men to within a few yards of the enemy's rear position. Owing to many casualties, however, he was compelled to withdraw. On his return he gave his battalion commander a full and lucid report on the situation—the only accurate one received. It was subsequently found that he had been wounded in the lungs early in the attack and had remained with his men under fire 23 hours after being wounded.

OSMOND, CHARLES FORTESCUE, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Honourable Artillery Company. For conspicuous gallantry in command of a battalion during operations. Owing to his coolness and courage under fire, and to his power of leadership, the enemy were held in check, and finally pushed back a considerable distance.

PORTAL, CHARLES FREDERICK ALGERNON, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Special Reserve, Royal Engineers and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. For many months he has done magnificent work in co-operation with the artillery. During an attack he succeeded in silencing nine active hostile batteries, ranging our artillery. His splendid example has been of the greatest value.

POTTS, JOHN, Temporary Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a company. He himself rushed a machine gun, killed the team, and turned the gun on to the enemy. He held on in a very exposed position for some time, absolutely regardless of danger, and when his flanks were turned, and it became necessary to fight his way back, he personally covered the retirement of his men, leaving none behind.

PRIDEAUX-BRUNE, DENYS EDWARD, Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to the weather and exhausted condition of the men it was not possible to carry out a prearranged plan. He took steps at once to meet the altered situation and repel a possible counter-attack. He finally returned through a heavy barrage and personally explained the situation to the Brigade Commander.

SHAW, RALPH, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), Royal Warwickshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and ability in action. When all the senior officers of the brigade had become casualties he assumed charge of the whole line, and showed great courage and judgment under very heavy fire in organizing the consolidation.

SHIEL, FRANCIS ROBERT ARCHIBALD, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great gallantry and initiative in organizing a party which succeeded in extinguishing a serious fire in the battery position. At the same time an ammunition dump close by caught fire. He alone rushed over, and assisted by the detachment succeeded in saving a large quantity of ammunition, thus preventing a disaster.

SPRING, FREDERICK GORDON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Lincolnshire Regt., attached Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has consistently shown a magnificent example under heavy fire. On occasions when his companies were counter-attacked he frequently went to the front and reorganized his men. His personal courage and coolness has been of the greatest value to all.

STANLEY, JOSEPH LOFTHOUSE, Temporary Second Lieut., West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and determination during an enemy counter-attack. By his fearlessness in leading a bombing attack under very heavy fire he completely frustrated the enemy's attack upon our trenches, cut off their line of retreat, and captured 18 prisoners with the aid of two of his bombers.

STEARNS, JOHN HOLDEN, Temporary Lieut., Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men with great skill and determination, personally putting an enemy machine gun out of action. Later he commanded his company, and, although wounded himself, carried on for 16 hours in an exposed position.

TAYLOR, STUART CAMPBELL, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel) (Retired Pay, Reserve of Officers), Yorkshire Light Infantry, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry when in command of the right of an infantry attack. The attacking troops having been compelled to fall back, he collected the remnants of his battalion and about 100 men of other units, and, regardless of a heavy fire, he organized these in defence of a position, and by his fine example of courage and skill he successfully resisted three counter-attacks, and thus saved a critical situation.

THOM, JOHN GIBB, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded one of the leading battalions, and throughout the operations he was with the leading companies, and personally led two attacks. He displayed a total disregard of personal safety, and by his fine example inspired his men to repeated efforts under most trying conditions.

TURNER, JAMES ALEXANDER, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst in charge of two companies under heavy machine-gun fire. With great skill and judgment he organized an assault on the machine-gun emplacement, and carried it through with such vigour that he captured the guns and teams. This happened at a very critical moment, and his coolness and skill were the direct means of averting very serious casualties. He was severely wounded two days later, after repeated acts of gallantry.

VIGNOLES, WALTER ADOLPH, Temporary Major, Lincolnshire Regt (rank and regiment corrected to Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Northumberland Fusiliers). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile counter-attack upon the battalion, of which he was in temporary command. His prompt initiative and coolness at a most critical moment enabled him to rally his men, and to bring a heavy fire upon the advancing enemy, and subsequently to organize and carry out a counter-attack with complete success.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BOND, LIONEL WILFRED, Major, Australian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty. When in charge of advanced collecting and forwarding posts, his total disregard of danger under a terrific hail of gas shells, H.E., and shrapnel fire, gained him the confidence of all ranks, and greatly assisted the evacuation of the wounded. Later, although wounded and partly gassed, he refused to leave his post, and his bravery and devotion saved a very critical situation.

BROWN, ARNOLD, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in organizing and leading bombing attacks. His sound judgment and determination were mainly instrumental in bringing about the success of these attacks, whilst his utter disregard of danger throughout set a splendid example to officers and men.

BROWNELL, HERBERT PERCIVAL, Major, Australian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst attending to the wounded under heavy fire. His coolness in organizing matters amidst the greatest confusion enabled the wounded to be expeditiously treated, and he personally treated some hundreds of cases under heavy shell fire.

CONRICK, HORATIO VICTOR PATRICK, Major, Australian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in attending to the wounded. He proceeded to the scene of an explosion under very heavy shell fire, and personally directed the removal of the wounded. His fearlessness and disregard for his personal safety has been marked on all occasions.

DENEHY, CHARLES ALOYSIUS, Lieut.-Colonel, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. When in command of a defence which was ceaselessly bombarded he was able, by his courage and fine example, to maintain the spirit of his men in spite of heavy losses, and later he organized and successfully carried through an attack, capturing 187 prisoners, and securing many machine guns and trench-mortars.

ELLIOTT, HAROLD EDWARD, C.M.G., Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General). For conspicuous gallantry when in command of the advanced guards of the division during an advance. The successes during a long period of almost continuous fighting, the capture of several villages, which were held against frequent and violent counter-attacks, and the slightness of our losses compared to those of the enemy were largely due to his able leadership, energy and courage.

LEOKY, CHARLES STUART, Major, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and resource during an attack when in charge of the front line held by his battalion. Despite the heavy barrage and artillery bombardment, he handled the situation with great skill and courage, and his fine example greatly contributed to the steadiness of all ranks. Although wounded, he refused to leave the line until the attack had been repulsed and the position secured.

RAY, JOHN, Major, Australian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great skill and initiative when the enemy obtained a footing to the rear of his battery. He pulled his guns out of their pits, reversed them, and opened fire on the enemy, inflicting heavy casualties, thus rendering valuable assistance at a critical moment.

TREW, WILLIAM MERRIMAN, Major, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in temporary command of his battalion. He organized the defence of a captured position in such a way that all counter-attacks were repulsed and heavy losses inflicted on the enemy. Though severely wounded, he remained on duty until the situation had cleared up.

YATES, WILLIAM THOMAS, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded a successful attack on an enemy strong point, and personally conducted the consolidation of the captured post. Later, under intense shell fire, he displayed the utmost gallantry and coolness in encouraging his men, and showing a fine disregard for personal safety.

CANADIAN FORCE.

ARCHAMBAULT, JOSEPH PIERRE URGEL, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great ability in organizing his company for the attack. During the advance he led his company with great courage and initiative until wounded. His personal courage was a splendid example to his men.

BLOIS, ARTHUR OSBORNE, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded, he took command of the battalion, and superintended and continued to advance until relieved by another officer late at night. He showed the greatest gallantry throughout.

COLEMAN, THOMAS ROY, M.C., Temporary Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry when commanding a company in an attack. When nearing the final objective a portion of the line was held up by enemy machine guns, whereupon he pushed forward and bombed the gun emplacement, continuing to clear the enemy trenches until wounded in the arm.

FEARMAN, HERBERT DOUGLAS, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As Adjutant, he worked with untiring zeal and energy in organizing the details for the attack. After the operation, and during the consolidation of the position, he carried out a most difficult reconnaissance of the whole line, obtaining most valuable information.

LEONARD, CHARLES FRANKLIN, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company 2,500 yards across the open and dug in in daylight. He was most energetic in sending out patrols, and although his flank was exposed for several hours, took all possible steps to protect it. Throughout the advance he set a splendid example to his men.

MCCRIMMON, KENNETH HOWARD, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under heavy artillery fire he superintended the laying out and the pumping of the trenches, and made a final reconnaissance in daylight of the position. Throughout he showed the greatest energy in organizing supplies, which proved of the utmost value to the men under severe weather conditions.

McMILLAN, ALEXANDER, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great skill and determination. By his personal example and disregard for his own safety, he gained his objective in the face of heavy shell and machine-gun fire. His bearing under heavy fire was most gallant.

MEREDITH, ALAN PICTON OSLER, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As Brigade Major he personally, at great risk, reconnoitred ground along our front, thereby rendering invaluable assistance to his brigade commander in the attack which followed. He displayed the utmost fearlessness in personally superintending the work of patrols when it became necessary to push them forward.

MILLS, ARTHUR LENNOX STANLEY, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He found a gap between his own and the next company which was strongly held by the enemy. At great personal risk he collected five men and, demoralizing the enemy, he assisted to capture 200 prisoners. Throughout he was most courageous and daring in handling the entire line of the battalion front.

PHILPOT, DAVID, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The careful and painstaking manner in which he organized every detail contributed very largely to the remarkable success achieved by his battalion in an attack upon an enemy position. His reports were frequent and accurate, and proved invaluable as a means of appreciating the general situation.

RILEY, HAROLD JAMES, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company to the attack and consolidated his position under heavy shell fire. When the position was threatened by intense fire he advanced in front and encouraged his men and held on for 40 hours, suffering heavy casualties.

ROGERS, JOSEPH BARTLETT, M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion in the attack with great tactical skill, and showed great promptness and sound judgment in dealing with the difficult situation which had arisen in consequence of the troops on his flank having failed to reach their objective.

ROSS, ALEXANDER, Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His preparation for the attack was perfected to a very high standard. During the advance he handled his battalion with the greatest skill and determination. The success of the operation was largely due to his fine leadership and example.

TAYLOR, FAWCETT GOWLER, Major, Canadian Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry. During an attack upon the enemy position he was the first man to reach the final objective, and his coolness and initiative in consolidating the position and reorganizing his unit were of the greatest assistance to his commanding officer.

TAUNTON, ARTHUR JOHN SHOWELL, Capt. (Acting Major), Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in the face of very heavy fire at short range. By his coolness and courage the position was taken and three guns captured. The work of consolidation was carried out and the position maintained.

TUDOR, LORN PAULET OWEN, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The magnificent success with which his battalion carried out its objective and consolidated the captured position was mainly due to his personal example of coolness and disregard of safety, and to the thoroughness with which all details had been prepared by him.

URQUHART, HUGH MACINTYRE, M.C., Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed remarkable tactical skill in preparing instructions for an attack, and when the attack had proved successful he displayed great coolness and bravery in selecting positions to be held and indicating action to be taken, the whole time under very heavy fire. He rendered a full and complete report of the situation on his return to brigade headquarters.

London Gazette, 20 July, 1917.—"Admiralty, 20 July, 1917.—Honours for Miscellaneous Services. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

"Honours for the Royal Naval Air Service.—The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order."

MAITLAND, EDWARD MAITLAND, Wing Capt., Royal Naval Air Service. In recognition of valuable and gallant work in connection with airships and parachutes. He has carried out experiments at his own personal risk, and has made some descents under enemy fire.

BUTLER, CHARLES HENRY, D.S.C., Squadron Commander, Royal Naval Air Service. In recognition of his gallantry on the 5th June, 1917, when he fought single-handed two engagements with a number of powerful hostile machines. He attacked six hostile aeroplanes together over the Thames Estuary, and later attacked two off Ostend. On each occasion the machine selected for attack was compelled to dive.

HOBBS, BASIL DEACON, D.S.C., Flight Lieut., Royal Naval Air Service.

London Gazette, 26 July, 1917.—"War Office, 26 July, 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to:—"

BARKEE, RANDLE BARNETT, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an assault his battalion was compelled to withdraw from its objective owing to heavy casualties and to its flank being unsupported. At this most critical moment he reorganized and rallied all the men of his brigade who were within reach, and by his promptitude and fine leadership won back most of the objective, and maintained it until relieved. (D.S.O. gazetted 20 Oct. 1916.)

BROWN, HENRY ROBERT, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Cameron Highlanders, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great skill and precision in the attack. It was due to his skilful handling of the battalion under most trying conditions that the operations were carried through with complete success. (D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

BUTTERWORTH, REGINALD FRANCIS AMHURST, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when a fire occurred in an ammunition dump. He took charge of the arrangements and himself assisted in extinguishing the fire. His personal courage, example and work were of the greatest value.
(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

CAMPBELL, ROBERT, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Cameron Highlanders, attached Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment, when the enemy had pierced our line and were consolidating a position to our rear, he skilfully and energetically counter-attacked, forcing the enemy to surrender with heavy loss. He subsequently rendered valuable assistance to another unit by bringing enfilade fire to bear upon the enemy. His promptness and energy saved a very awkward situation.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

HOPWOOD, ALFRED HENRY, D.S.O., Major, Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward to the front under the most intense fire and brought back invaluable information. He displayed great gallantry throughout the operations, and had a most inspiring effect on all ranks.
(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

HORN, ROBERT, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Seaford Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great ability and courage. It was largely due to his personal reconnaissance that many difficulties were overcome, and the objectives gained with complete success.
(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

HOWARD, THOMAS NAIRNE SCOTT MONCRIEFF, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion through a heavy barrage, and was himself wounded. He established himself in the objective, and was a splendid example to the men.
(D.S.O. gazetted 24 July, 1917.)

IRWIN, ALFRED PERCY BULTEEL, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Major and Acting Lieut.-Colonel), East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to heavy casualties amongst officers, he personally took command of his own battalion and men of other units at a critical moment during an attack, and captured and held the final objective under very heavy fire. When compelled to withdraw after five hours, he did so with great skill, showing at all times a fine example of personal gallantry and coolness.
(D.S.O. gazetted 20 Oct. 1916.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

DYER, HUGH MARSHAL, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His fine leadership and foresight of possible contingencies enabled his battalion to assault and capture its objectives in spite of almost impassable obstacles. At all times he showed a spirit of indomitable courage which communicated itself in marked degree to his officers and men. He assisted personally to dress the wounded under heavy shell fire, setting a splendid example to all ranks.
(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

MACKENZIE, JOHN PERCIVAL, D.S.O., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed very fine judgment and ability in handling his battalion during an attack, the success of which was very largely due to his quick grasp of every situation. He later made three personal reconnaissances of our advanced positions under intense hostile fire in order to obtain information for our artillery, and his reports were accurate and of great value.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

WINTER, ORMONDE DE L'EPÉE, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Field Artillery (amendment [London Gazette, 26 Sept. 1917], incorrectly shown under the heading "Canadian Force"). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in extinguishing a burning ammunition dump, aided by another officer, at great personal risk, thereby saving a large number of rounds and considerable loss of life.
(D.S.O. gazetted 8 Nov. 1915.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

ABERCROMBY, SIR GEORGE WILLIAM, Bart., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion and gained his first two objectives, after considerable opposition, at the scheduled time. The success of the operation was largely due to his careful and continuous reconnaissances beforehand and to his skilful training and teaching of the battalion.

ANDREWS, JOHN OLIVER, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Scots and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading offensive patrols with great dash and success on over 30 occasions, and taking part in over 22 combats. His skill and courage in attacking and destroying hostile aircraft have at all times been magnificent.

BARNES, DAVID THOMAS, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As commander of the leading waves in our attacks he personally superintended the passing of the companies through the gaps in enemy wire to their forward objective. This having been reached, he organized the whole of the defence with the utmost skill. His reports to headquarters were accurate and frequent, and throughout the operations his coolness, bravery, and initiative were most marked.

BAYNE-JARDINE, CHRISTIAN WEST, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack, in establishing and maintaining an observation post whence he was able to supply headquarters with constant and accurate information concerning our own advanced troops and the enemy. He was constantly exposed to fire, and his coolness and determination were most marked.

BRASH, JAMES, Second Lieut., Seaford Highlanders, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his platoon was consolidating their position he took six men to the assistance of a party on his flank and captured 40 prisoners. He then entered a hostile strong point and, killing the team, captured a machine gun.

BULLER, JAMES HENRY GEORGE, Capt. (Acting Major), Rifles, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He gallantly led his men against superior forces of the enemy and captured a machine gun. He succeeded in penetrating to the enemy's second line, where he was wounded.

CAMPBELL, SIR JOHN BRUCE STEWART, Bart., Temporary Major, Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He brought his battalion into action under very difficult circumstances and commanded it with conspicuous courage. He succeeded in evacuating all his wounded during the night, and only withdrew his battalion when this was complete.

COLEMAN, PERCY GEORGE, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), North Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He reached his objective with his platoon and was almost immediately severely wounded. Although isolated and hemmed in by the enemy he maintained his position and repulsed heavy attacks with great loss to the enemy.

COOPER, ARKWRIGHT RICHARD, Temporary Capt., Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He passed through the barrage several times when reorganizing his company and was severely wounded in doing so. He remained in command and personally led the assault and did not leave his men until the objective was gained.

D'ARCY, SAMUEL HOLLIS ALFRED, Second Lieut., Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, in continually attacking and dispersing hostile infantry and transport from a very low altitude. Whilst engaged in this he was wounded, but refused to return until he was almost unconscious. He also showed great courage and determination on several occasions in attacking hostile aircraft, destroying some and forcing others to descend.

DENE, ARTHUR POLLARD, Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He assumed command of an attacking force which captured its objective under difficult circumstances. Though himself wounded at the start he remained in command, and throughout acted with great coolness and courage.

FISHER, DONALD RUTHERFURD DACRE, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battery with exceptional energy and skill. He advanced his battery with great steadiness under heavy shelling and reopened fire. Throughout he has performed his duties with the utmost courage and ability.

GREENSHIELDS, DAVID MACKENZIE, Second Lieut., Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After all company commanders had become casualties he took command of and reorganized his battalion, remaining in charge of the front line for two days. It was entirely due to his energy and cheerfulness that the position was so well maintained. He set a splendid example to all under him.

HAY, GEORGE HAROLD, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Commanding the battalion he led his men with great skill and courage. At each successive phase of the attack he reformed and led the men on again with such ability that all objectives were gained with comparatively small casualties.

KOEBEL, FRANK OSCAR, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), North Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He inspired his men to repeated efforts, and when most of his officers were casualties he collected the remainder of the men and was himself wounded in leading them to the final effort to capture the position.

LAYTON, EDWARD, Temporary Major, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When all his officers had become casualties he reinforced his front line, and, by his courage and determination, carried the enemy second line, when he was severely wounded.

LEAKE, GEORGE ERNEST ARTHUR, Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his company. He showed a splendid example of coolness, disregard of danger, and cheerfulness, and, although wounded, he remained at duty. It was largely owing to his influence that all ranks showed such a splendid spirit under the most intense hostile barrage, which lasted for 14 hours.

LEWIS, NORMAN ALLEN, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He acted with the greatest promptitude during an attack when direction had been lost, successfully organizing a bombing party to restore the situation, and re-establishing touch with another unit. He subsequently formed and held a strong point all day against enemy counter-attacks, working throughout with the greatest skill and gallantry and imparting his spirit to his men.

LOCK, JOHN MATTHEW BOYS, Second Lieut., Middlesex Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took charge of a bombing attack, and showed the utmost fearlessness and determination against strong opposition. His splendid leadership and courage under most difficult conditions rendered valuable assistance at a critical time.

MICKLE, KENNETH AUBREY, Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Garrison Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded a number of trench mortars with great ability and courage. He carried out all the wire cutting, organized supplies of ammunition, and carried out his duties under a continual hostile bombardment with great courage and coolness.

PIPON, ROBERT HENRY, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his battalion with great ability and sound judgment during an advance for the purpose of maintaining touch with the enemy. His personal courage and resource were invaluable to his battalion.

RASHLEIGH, REGINALD NICHOLAS, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward to within 500 yards of the enemy's position, and for two hours, under very heavy fire, sent back invaluable reports on the situation. He has at all times set a fine example of courage, energy and devotion to duty.

RIGG, GEORGE SOUTHERTON, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), York and Lancaster Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At an extremely critical moment, when the enemy had broken through on our flanks and were surrounding our line, he rallied the infantry and re-organized the line with such success that the enemy were repulsed on all sides and finally cut off in their attempt to retreat. His gallantry and initiative saved a very dangerous situation.

SPILLER, DUNCAN WILFRED LAMBERT, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in conducting most valuable reconnaissances of enemy wire, with a view to its being cut. He was heavily shelled, but carried on, and gained most valuable information. He has performed similar good work for his whole division on several occasions.

SUGARS, HAROLD SAUNDERSON, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed magnificent disregard of personal safety in attending to the wounded under heavy fire for five days. On the fifth day his leg was broken, but this did not prevent him from going through heavy shell fire to save the life of a corporal whose main artery had been cut, and who required immediate attention. His fearlessness in crossing the open under continuous and heavy fire to save life or to alleviate suffering was most marked.

THORNTON-SMITH, ARTHUR DONALD, Temporary Second Lieut., King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out a daring reconnaissance of a village still occupied by the enemy. He went over a distance of 1,000 yards, and exposed to the enemy the whole way. His valuable information enabled the village to be captured with very light casualties.

TREASE, REGINALD ERNEST, M.C., Second Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He acted as artillery liaison officer during the attack. He was continuously in the front line, sending back most valuable information. When communications were cut he repeatedly brought back the information himself, having to go through a very heavy barrage on each occasion.

TREMLETT, ELIAS, Temporary Lieut., Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He organized a bombing attack, and succeeded in working his way down 500 yards of the enemy's trench. Throughout the attack he showed admirable coolness and resource, and greatly stimulated the men under his command.

WALSH, ROBERT HENRY, M.C., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was observing from the front line, which was being heavily shelled, and, owing to casualties, the men were becoming disorganized. He collected and rallied these men, organizing a strong resistance against the enemy counter-attack. He then returned to R.A. headquarters and organized a concentrated fire upon the enemy.

WATSON, OSCAR CYRIL SPENCER, Major (Reserve of Officers), Yorkshire Light Infantry (Christian name corrected to Oliver Cyril Spencer). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He reorganized men of all units, inspired them with his own coolness and confidence, and personally led them forward to a second attack. He was severely wounded.

WHEELER, CORDY, Temporary Major, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded, he assumed command of the battalion, which had no officer available, and organized an attack on the enemy's second line. By his energy and courage he inspired confidence in all ranks, and remained in command for four hours until relieved.

CANADIAN FORCE.

CRITCHLEY, WALTER RAMSAY, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took charge of the attack on the second objective, and displayed great skill and courage in capturing and consolidating the position, personally dealing with several of the enemy who offered resistance.

FERGUSON, HUGH CAMERON, Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When leading his company to the attack he was wounded, but continued on, handling his men with great skill and determination. He was wounded a second time, but carried on until the objective was captured. He remained with his company until the third and fourth waves had passed through the position.

FRENCH, JOHN POYNITZ, Capt. (Acting Major), Mounted Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In spite of the most difficult conditions, he succeeded in gaining his objective, displaying a splendid example of courage and initiative. Later, he went forward under heavy fire, and made a most valuable report on the situation.

HUTCHISON, HARRY, Lieut. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of two companies he led them with great dash to the final objective, capturing a large number of the enemy, machine guns and mortars. He showed great initiative and resource in so disposing his forces, under heavy fire and with inadequate support, as to obtain and retain possession of high ground which was essential to the success of the attack. His coolness at a critical juncture was directly responsible for the safety of three battalions. His fearlessness in personally supervising the work of digging in under heavy barrage was most conspicuous, and his work throughout the engagement was splendid as an example to all ranks.

MAHAFFY, KENNETH A., M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry (Christian name corrected to Kenneth Arnold). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After capturing his own objective, he took command of the second wave, which was without leaders, and led them to their objective, forming a defensive line 150 yards in front of it. Throughout his coolness and bravery were a striking example to all.

NORSWORTHY, STANLEY COUNTER, M.C., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. He went forward under very heavy fire and established a firm defensive flank. He continued in personal command for 36 hours, his example and forethought being an inspiration to his battalion and ensuring the success of operations at a critical time.

PEASE, EDSON RAYMOND, Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his company. He consolidated the final objective with great skill, and maintained his position under the most difficult conditions. He has on many previous occasions rendered invaluable service.

BEID, GEORGE ERIC, Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great skill and energy. He finally led them to the successful assault of the guns, capturing four field guns, one machine gun, and over 50 prisoners. Throughout the advance he showed the utmost gallantry and good leadership, and set a splendid example to all.

BOSS, MALCOLM NUGENT, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great zeal and initiative in moving his battery forward and coming into action with the minimum loss of time. He also displayed great enterprise in repairing two captured howitzers and bringing them into action again.

SPARLING, ALBERT WALKER, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Upon leaving the first objective he was the only officer of the two companies, and directed the capture and consolidation of the second objective. He was a most splendid example to all ranks under his command.

THORNLEY, JOSEPH HARRY, Major, Engineers (regiment corrected to Canadian Railway Troops). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in personally supervising repairs to a light railway upon which the supply of artillery ammunition entirely depended. It had been broken in twenty places by shell fire. He had previously shown great ability and courage whilst engaged in similar work under very trying circumstances.

WILLETS, CHARLES RICHARD EDWARD, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward to the front line under very heavy fire and organized the defence of the position with great skill. He has at all times displayed the greatest courage and initiative.

London Gazette, 8 Aug. 1917.—" War Office, 8 Aug. 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned Rewards for distinguished service in the field, dated 3 June, 1917. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

ROSS, ARTHUR JUSTIN, D.S.O., Major, Royal Engineers and Royal Flying Corps.

To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order :

BAZLEY-WHITE, RICHARD BOOTH LESLIE, Capt., Royal West Kent Regt. Lancers, Commanding Battn., Yorkshire Light Infantry.

CORNWALLIS, KINAHAN, Temporary Major, Special List.

HASTINGS, JOHN HENRY, Lieut.-Colonel, West Yorkshire Regt.

HOWARD, THOMAS NAIRNE SCOTT MONCRIEFF, Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), West Yorkshire Regt. (Commanding Battn., Devonshire Regt.).

McCLINTOCK, ARTHUR GEORGE, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Lancers, Commanding Battn., Yorkshire Light Infantry.

NUTTALL, CHARLES MONTAGUE, Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Garrison Artillery.

WILSON, CYRIL EDWARD, Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel) (Retired Pay), Reserve of Officers, late East Lancashire Regt.

London Gazette, 11 Aug. 1917.—" Admiralty, 11 Aug. 1917. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

TANDY, HENRY GEORGE HAMILTON, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. In recognition of the promptitude, courage and resource which he displayed when one of H.M. ships was torpedoed. Lieut.-Commander Tandy was in his bunk at the time of the explosion, but by the prompt and resourceful steps which he took on arriving on deck, succeeded in bringing his ship safely into harbour.

SCOTT, GILBERT BODLEY, Staff Surgeon, R.N. In recognition of his services with a Naval Armoured Car Squadron in France, Russia, Turkey and Roumania. On active service he has shown a devotion to duty and a forgetfulness of self which cannot be too highly praised.

KING, WILLIAM, Lieut., R.N.V.R.

SZULEZEWSKI, OSWALD, Lieut., R.N.V.R.

For gallant and devoted services with Inland Water Transport throughout the operations in Mesopotamia. They have navigated their ships at high speed, night and day, in all weathers with marked zeal and determination, and have often been under fire.

SMILES, WALTER DORLING, Lieut., R.N.V.R. In recognition of his services with a Naval Armoured Car Squadron in France, Belgium, Persia and Roumania. He was wounded on the 28th Nov. 1916, in the Dobrudja. On coming out of hospital he volunteered to lead a flying squadron for special duty round Braila, and his gallantry on this occasion was the chief factor of success. On one occasion, when in action with a light armoured car, he got out twice to start it up under heavy fire. Being struck by a bullet he rolled into a ditch and remained there all day under fire, having sent back a message to the Russian Colonel in command asking him to allow none of his soldiers in any circumstances to risk their lives to save his car. He did not escape until night.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order :

WOODS, ALEXANDER RIALI WADHAM, D.S.O., Commander, R.N. In recognition of his services in command of the landing party at the capture of Salif on the 12th June, 1917. The place was attacked at dawn and captured after a three hours' resistance at the cost of only two casualties to the attacking force. This was largely due to the skilful manner in which Commander Woods conducted the advance.

" Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to Officers for services in action with enemy submarines. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

LAWRIE, JOHN, D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve.

" Honours for the Royal Naval Air Service.—The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointments of the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

LITTLE, ROBERT ALEXANDER, D.S.C., Flight Lieut., Royal Naval Air Service. For gallantry in action and for exceptional skill and daring in aerial combats. Since the 9th May, 1917, besides having driven off numerous artillery aeroplanes and damaged six hostile machines, he has destroyed six others. On the 28th June, 1917, an Aviatik being seen from the aerodrome he went up to attack it. He engaged it and fired a burst at close range, and the enemy machine stalled and went down in flames.

COLLISHAW, RAYMOND, D.S.C., Flight Lieut., Royal Naval Air Service. For conspicuous bravery and skill in successfully leading attacks against hostile aircraft. Since the 10th June, 1917, Flight Lieut. Collishaw has himself brought down four machines completely out of control and driven down two others with their planes shot away. Whilst on an offensive patrol on the morning of the 15th June, 1917, he forced down a hostile scout in a nose dive. Later, on the same day, he drove down one hostile two-seater machine completely out of control, one hostile scout in a spin, and a third machine with two of its planes shot away. On the 24th June, 1917, he engaged four enemy scouts, driving one down in a spin and another with two of its planes shot away; the latter machine was seen to crash.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order :

BUTLER, CHARLES HENRY, D.S.O., D.S.C., Squadron Commander, Royal Naval Air Service. For the skill and gallantry with which he attacked a formation of 15 hostile machines returning from a raid on England. Closing on one machine, he engaged it at close quarters. Presently he saw this machine nose dive, crash into the sea and sink. Meanwhile he had engaged a second machine, but broke off the engagement to follow down the first machine. Afterwards he lost sight of the enemy formation and returned to his aerodrome.

London Gazette, 16 Aug. 1917.—" War Office, 16 Aug. 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to :—

CHESTER-MASTER, RICHARD CHESTER, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, late King's Royal Rifle Corps, Commanding Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During operations for six days he displayed great courage and ability. His battalion was very short of officers, and he had no rest during that period. His splendid example and total disregard for safety inspired his men with great confidence. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

COLLEY, FRANK, D.S.O., Temporary Capt., York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He personally led a bombing party and successfully attacked and captured a hostile machine gun and its team

Although wounded, he remained at duty for 36 hours, reorganizing his men and commanding his battalion, his Commanding Officer having been killed. He set a magnificent example, remaining in command until he fainted from loss of blood. (D.S.O. gazetted 22 Sept. 1916.)

EVANS, WILFRID KEITH, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Manchester Regt., Commanding Battn., Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great dash and initiative to their objective, capturing many guns and prisoners. He also repulsed strong hostile counter-attacks, and showed great coolness and promptitude in rallying and reorganizing troops who had been driven back through his line. His fine personal example saved a critical situation. (D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1915.)

GAIRDNER, ERIC DALRYMPLE, D.S.O., M.B., Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward under very heavy fire to attend to a wounded N.C.O., and was himself shot down. He has consistently displayed high courage and devotion to duty, and his example has been an inspiration to all ranks. (D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

CLARK, JOHN ARTHUR, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His preparations for the attack were most thorough, and successfully carried out. During the assault he displayed the utmost courage and ability, and personally carried out several important reconnaissances. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

WANSBROUGH, CUTHBERT COLE, D.S.O., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the attack his company was twice held up. He promptly organized flanking parties under heavy fire, and captured the trench. He was severely wounded, but remained in action until the final objective had been gained. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BARLOW, JOSEPH EDWARD, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Yorkshire Regt., Special Reserve, attached York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack he led his battalion with great skill and courage, restoring the direction which had been lost, and being the first to enter the objective. It was entirely due to him that a heavy hostile counter-attack was repulsed, and the following night he went through our own and the hostile barrage to re-establish communications. Although his men were badly shaken, he restored their confidence during a very critical situation, and his conduct was magnificent throughout.

BEACH, LIONEL HADWEN FLETCHER, Second Lieut. (Acting Major) Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company forward to cover the withdrawal of the advanced troops, remaining under heavy rifle and shell fire for two hours, until the operation had been successfully carried out. He was severely wounded during the action.

CHURCH, DUDLEY ROSS, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Northamptonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great dash and determination through a heavy hostile barrage to a position within 500 yards of the enemy's trench. He organized and held this position until dusk, in spite of having been twice wounded himself and his company having suffered heavy casualties.

HALKETT, HUGH MARJORIBANKS CRAIGIE, Major (Temporary Lieut. Colonel), Highland Light Infantry, attached North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great skill and determination to the final objective. The spirits and dash of his men in spite of very heavy casualties were largely due to his personality and the care with which he had previously trained them.

DRYNAN, WILLIAM BLAIR, Temporary Major, York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the advance his company came under heavy machine-gun fire and suffered severe casualties. He alone went forward and made a daring reconnaissance under heavy machine-gun fire. The information obtained enabled him to resume the advance and skillfully lead his men to their objective.

EARLE, FRANCIS WILLIAM, Major, Hampshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the assault he was in temporary command of the battalion, and handled it with marked ability and determination. He succeeded in capturing and consolidating an enemy strong point containing four machine guns. His battalion captured 150 prisoners.

EWER, GEORGE GUY, Major, Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great ability and resource under fire, organizing the ammunition and water supply of his brigade and supervising the collection of wounded and the disposal of prisoners. He performed invaluable services, and the success of the operations was largely due to his efforts.

FEW, ROBERT JEBB, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed fine judgment and great coolness in assisting to organize the withdrawal of an advanced section of our line under heavy shell fire.

FOULIS, DOUGLAS AINSLIE, Temporary Capt., Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the advance, regardless of heavy shell fire, he went about reorganizing and collecting men who had gone astray. By his coolness and example he inspired confidence in the men and largely contributed to the final success of the operations.

GATTIE, KENNETH FRANCIS DRAKE, M.C., Capt., Monmouthshire Regt. (Brigade Major). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With great coolness he went through hostile barrage to consolidate communication between Brigade and Battalion Headquarters at a critical moment. His disregard of personal safety had a most reassuring effect on the men. He had previously rendered the greatest assistance in making preparations for the attack.

GREATWOOD, FRANCIS WILLIAM, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with the utmost skill and courage throughout the operations, finally consolidating his position. This position was maintained throughout the day and following night under heavy shell fire. He was constantly rallying and encouraging his men under these trying conditions until he was seriously wounded.

GREEN, ARTHUR LLEWELLYN BALDWIN, Capt. (Temporary Major), Herefordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men with great dash and determination in an attack, and although wounded, refused to leave them until he received a further severe wound, which fractured his thigh.

HALLIDAY, WILLIAM JOHN FREDERICK, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He ran across to the battery next to his own when it was under heavy shell fire, and the men had been ordered away, and extinguished a serious fire which was involving the ammunition, guns and camouflage along the whole position. His gallantry and initiative saved serious disaster.

HOBLER, ARTHUR PRESTON, Capt. (Temporary Major), Middlesex Regt. (name and rank corrected to Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel) Arthur Preston Hobler [London Gazette, 25 Aug. 1917]). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After all company commanders had become casualties, he displayed the greatest courage and ability in collecting and reorganizing detachments of other units during our attack, in organizing the advance and in sending excellent reports to Headquarters.

HOWELL, JOHN ALDERNEY, M.C., Temporary Major, Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great powers of leadership and resource in commanding his battalion during an attack, and afterwards consolidated his position with great skill.

HUGGELL, GEORGE, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Yeomanry, attached Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After his Commanding Officer and second in command were wounded, he assumed command, although severely wounded himself, and kept his men going. He set a splendid example of courage and endurance, and although in considerable pain, remained in command until he was sent away.

HUDSON, CHARLES EDWARD, M.C., Temporary Major, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack and before the objective was gained, he showed great promptitude and disregard for his own safety in reorganizing his battalion and leading it forward to the objective, which was secured and consolidated through his successful efforts. He has on many occasions showed capacity of the highest military value, notably in repulsing hostile counter-attacks upon his battalion at a critical moment.

KIRKWOOD, JOHN HENDLEY MORRISON, Temporary Major, Household Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The battalion under his command suffered heavy casualties, and was subjected to severe shell fire. Despite this he led them forward and gained his objective and consolidated the line. The success of the operation was largely due to his fine example and the able manner in which he handled his men.

KOEBEL, FREDERICK ERNEST, Major, Sikhs, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and resource. He rallied his men when the left flank was seriously threatened, and by his energy and fine example saved the situation. He subsequently commanded his battalion with great ability. He has displayed marked gallantry in every action in which he has taken part.

LAURIE, RONALD MACDONALD, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel) (now Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his brigade with marked ability and success, giving much needed assistance to the infantry brigades in their attack on the enemy's position.

LINTON, FREDERICK HENRY, Capt., Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack he showed great courage and initiative in being one of the first to enter the enemy's lines, disarm prisoners and establish communication. He displayed the greatest gallantry and good leadership throughout.

MANN, WILLIAM EDGAR, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battery with great skill and courage throughout three days of heavy fighting, during which his position was under intense shell fire, and, although wounded early in the attack, he continued at duty, setting an excellent example to all ranks by his good spirits and cheerfulness.

MILLS, FRANK, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed the greatest coolness and skill when in charge of the firing line of his battalion during an attack, directing operations and sending back accurate messages under heavy fire. The success of the assault was due to his fine example.

NAUNTON, HUGH PARKER, Temporary Capt., East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company forward with great dash and courage, and with about 50 men successfully stormed an enemy strong point, capturing ten prisoners. Later, at a critical period he took command of the battalion, and carried through until the objective was gained.

NELSON, GEORGE ELLISS, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment, when our advance was held up, he collected sufficient men to move forward and straighten the line. By his fine example and disregard of danger under heavy fire he eventually led this line, which was composed of seven different units, into the enemy's position.

O'CONNOR, RICHARD NUGENT, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major, Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and resource. In consequence of a change in the situation a revision of plans became necessary, but, owing to darkness and heavy shelling, confusion arose. By his courage and promptness he quickly restored order, and organized a successful attack.

PARRY, THOMAS HENRY, Major, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great courage and skill whilst leading his company in an attack, and it was largely owing to his example that the attack made such good progress. Although twice wounded, he continued to command until put out of action by a third wound.

PYE-SMITH, CHARLES DERWENT, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of an advanced dressing station his Serjt.-Major and the whole of his staff were killed. He reorganized the work with the assistance of a Lance-Corporal, and, in consequence of his energy and presence of mind, the work was not delayed. He led his bearers continually into the front line, rescuing wounded under heavy shell fire, and working with great heroism for 60 hours, setting a splendid example to all.

RICHARDS, DARCY JOHN RIGBY, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The battery was under heavy shell fire, and an ammunition dump close to one of the gun pits was set on fire. In answer to a call he brought his battery into action and fought his guns, knowing the dump was likely to explode, which it did, while the guns were in action.

ROUND, HAROLD CECIL, M.C., Second Lieut., Rifle Brigade, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When our troops were forced to withdraw he collected a few men and made a strong point within 70 yards of the enemy trench. This position he held for two days without supplies of any kind. He was finally able to get a valuable report through, before being ordered to withdraw.

STABLE, ROBERT HENRY, Lieut., Infantry, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He assumed command of his battalion early in the action, and displayed great coolness and courage under heavy fire. He set a magnificent example to his men throughout.

STOKES, JAMES GORDON, M.C., Capt., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great skill and gallantry when in command of the forward defences under heavy shell fire, during which his dug-out was practically destroyed. By his courage and coolness he set a fine example to all ranks, and continued to supply battalion headquarters with very valuable information.

STOUT, PERCY WYFOLD, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Motor Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment, when a number of armoured cars were in danger of being cut off, he led the attack to their relief, and after two hours' heavy fighting gained the objective, after inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy.

TATTERSALL, PHILIP CHARLES PAUL, Capt., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When senior officer of his battalion, he led the front line forward to within 400 yards of the enemy's position. Although badly wounded in both legs, he continued to direct the fire until dusk. He refused to retire until all his men had been withdrawn.

THOMPSON, THOMAS JOHN CHICHESTER CONYNHAM, Capt., Royal Irish Fusiliers, Special Reserve, attached Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great dash and success to their objective, afterwards by his initiative rendering valuable assistance to another unit by co-operating on their flank. The spirit and dash of his company were largely due to his personality and gallantry on this, as on all other occasions.

VON TREUNFELS, CARL OTTO, Lieut. (Temporary Capt. and Acting Major), Honourable Artillery Company, attached Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed the greatest disregard of danger in saving material and ammunition from burning buildings in which his battery was being heavily shelled. By his coolness and magnificent example the guns of his battery were saved, and heavy casualties of men and material were averted.

WALKER, EDWARD WILLIAM, Capt., Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company forward and, assisted by an officer and a few men of another unit, captured an important point and held out against sharp counter-attacks until the remainder of the enemy position was won. He personally captured a machine gun and a large number of prisoners.

WALTON, LESLIE ARTHUR, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut., Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed a marked contempt for danger, and when the company was held up he was seriously wounded whilst engaging an enemy sniper. In spite of this he dashed forward at the head of his men, and was responsible for capturing 11 prisoners who had been holding up the advance.

WESTROP, SIDNEY ALBERT, M.C., Temporary Major, Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his company with marked ability and success. He carried out a reconnaissance of the captured ground, and it was due to his information that enemy machine guns were located and captured.

WILLIAMS, ALFRED ERNEST, Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Warwickshire Regt., Special Reserve, Commanding Bttn., Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion during an attack with skill and decision, showing great resourcefulness under difficult circumstances.

WILSON, WILLIAM ERIC, Capt. (Temporary Major), Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After leading his company with great gallantry in an assault, he took command of his battalion, his senior officers having become casualties, and carried out his duties with great ability, defeating a strong hostile counter-attack.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BOLINGBROKE, ARCHDALE GEORGE, Major, Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great dash and initiative in leading troops forward to the capture of a hostile artillery observation post, afterwards taking an active part in a bayonet charge against enemy trenches.

CAMERON, DONALD CHARLES, Major, Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an advance over difficult ground, he showed great skill in keeping touch with the brigade on his left, afterwards leading his squadron in a bayonet charge against the enemy trenches, thus enabling two captured enemy guns to be removed.

DEAN, EDWIN THEYER, Major, Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed the greatest fearlessness and gallantry in personally extinguishing three serious fires amongst his gun-pits and ammunition, working at the imminent risk of his own life. The following night he returned to a building which had just been wrecked by shell fire to search for missing men amongst the debris, thereby displaying a spirit of devotion towards his unit which has always been noticeable.

MACNEIL, ALEXANDER, Lieut., L.T.M. Battery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his mortar with great courage and determination against an overwhelming attack. He held off the enemy with his revolver until his men had got the mortar away to safety. He then took part in the counter-attack, and did great execution with a machine gun.

WILLIAMS, RICHARD, Capt., Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Flying at a low altitude under intense anti-aircraft fire, he attacked and dispersed enemy troops who were concentrating on our flank. On another occasion, whilst on a reconnaissance, he landed in the enemy's lines, and rescued a pilot of a machine which had been brought down by hostile fire.

CANADIAN FORCE.

CAREY, ALFRED BLAKE, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion in an attack, when he commanded the battalion with the greatest bravery and skill, secured all his objectives, and consolidated his position. Later, to clear up the situation, he made a valuable reconnaissance.

FRANCIS, MILTON JOHN, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has repeatedly shown fine qualities of leadership. In establishing an outpost line, the skill with which he took all possible advantage of the defeated enemy was most marked, and his personal courage at all times has been an inspiring example to his unit.

LINNELL, HENRY RUPERT, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion. After gaining his objective he took charge of a very critical situation, acting with the greatest bravery and skill, organized the defence with scattered forces, and under intense shell fire, held the position for five days. He was the only officer of his battalion who was not killed or wounded.

STANLEY, HAROLD POOLE, Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in operations. He led his company with the greatest courage and skill, being the first into the enemy line, and he organized and led the party, which repulsed a counter-attack. Although wounded in two places he continued his work for several hours, displaying a courage and devotion of the highest order.

VICARS, DESMOND ODLUM, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion in operations. On reaching the objective only two of his platoon remained, but with the greatest coolness he attacked about 50 of the enemy, bayonetting several himself, causing numerous casualties, and taking eight prisoners, driving the rest away. His conduct throughout was magnificent.

WOOD, WILLIAM STEWART, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. He co-operated with another battalion in an attack with great courage and skill, materially assisting in the capture and subsequent consolidation of important positions.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

ALLEN, ROBERT CANDLISH, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a very critical moment and at great personal risk he rallied a number of men of another unit who were withdrawing under hostile barrage and prevented their further retirement. Although severely wounded he continued giving instructions for the continuance of the fight. He has at all times shown a very fine example of coolness and gallantry in action.

DIGBY-SMITH, ALFRED, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although severely wounded and suffering from gas, he successfully led his company to its objective, and remained until consolidation was well under way and the situation secure. He displayed great keenness and determination.

HARDIE, ROBERT DAVIES, Major, Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded in the eye during an advance he led his men through a heavy barrage into their positions, and continued with great skill and courage to direct the fire of his guns, remaining with them throughout the action, although he had every reason to suppose he had lost an eye. By his devotion to duty he set a splendid example to his men.

McGAVIN, DONALD JOHNSTONE, Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Colonel), Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While acting as A.D.M.S. to his division the successful evacuation of the wounded during our heavy offensive was due to the thoroughness of his preparations and his personal attention to the smallest details. He went into the advanced area at great personal risk to encourage the stretcher-bearers and superintend the removal of casualties, setting a splendid example to all ranks.

SOMMERVILLE, JOHN ADAM, Capt. (Temporary Major) (now Major), Mounted Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed fine leadership in the attack and capture of two enemy field guns.

WINTER-EVANS, ALFRED, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack and the subsequent consolidation of the captured position he showed the greatest coolness and energy, inspiring all ranks by his magnificent personal example and never sparing himself to make the operation of his battalion the success which it was. His work at all times has been of the same high standard.

CARY-BARNARD, CYRIL DARCY VIVIEN, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion with conspicuous success and ability on numerous occasions, inspiring all ranks with confidence by his fearless example. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1915.)

HOWARD, HENRY CECIL LLOYD, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major, Lancers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Brigade Liaison Officer. He went into the midst of a very heavy hostile barrage and remained there with the leading troops of the brigade until consolidation commenced and touch was established on the flanks. By his total disregard of danger he contributed largely to the success of the attack. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

BIRT, CHARLES WILLIAM HOWARD, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He made a dash and successful reconnaissance of the ground in front of his outpost line, which enabled his battalion to make a successful attack on the following day. During this reconnaissance he encountered and wiped out a hostile picket which endeavoured to intercept his patrol, and, although wounded and very severely shaken by heavy shell fire, he displayed great personal courage and gallantry during the attack, as he had previously done on two other occasions.

CLARK, WILLIAM CHARLES, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his battalion with great coolness and ability under heavy fire. He has on all occasions proved himself a courageous and capable officer.

COLLAS, WILLIAM JOHN JERVOISE, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when the enemy had gained possession of our assembly trenches by means of a counter-attack. He led his battalion against them under heavy fire, and recaptured the line, which he held later on, in spite of numerous bombing attacks, with great coolness and determination.

FLEMING, JAMES GEORGE GRANT, Temporary Second Lieut., Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a night attack he successfully established his company in an important position at a critical moment after the right of his battalion had been driven back. He also displayed the greatest disregard of personal safety during a hostile counter-attack by running up and down a trench some 400 yards in length and rallying his men under very heavy shell and rifle fire. The following day he performed a similar act, largely compensating for the absence of any other officers in what was a very critical situation.

HILL, MURRAY VICTOR BURROW, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a time when our advance was delayed by a "pocket" of the enemy, he skillfully enveloped them with his support company, thereby enabling the leading line to advance and reach their objective with only slight loss. His personal reconnoissances under fire and his arrangements for consolidation and protection have set a very fine example of both coolness and ability, and thoroughly gained the confidence of all under his command.

HOLLIDAY, FRED PARKINSON, Temporary Lieut., General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his initiative and skilful manœuvring he led six hostile machines to an encounter with our own formation, during which five out of the six hostile machines were destroyed and driven down. He had been equally successful the day before in misleading hostile aircraft, and his originality and fearless example were of the greatest value to his squadron.

The Distinguished Service Order

MARTYN, ANTHONY WOOD, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his battalion to the assault, which was completely successful. He superintended consolidation throughout the day, setting a very fine example of personal courage and good leadership.

MURPHY, ALFRED DURHAM, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Col.), Leinster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With great presence of mind he moved up troops to fill a gap, which he had discovered by means of a personal reconnaissance, between his unit and the next division, afterwards handling his battalion with exceptional skill and personally selecting the best positions under heavy fire. His reports were invaluable and accurate, clearing up an obscure situation, and he has on all other occasions set a splendid example of fearlessness and ability.

PEARSON, BERTRAM LAMB, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company to their objective with great skill over difficult ground. He personally killed four of the enemy with his revolver, and, after being wounded for the second time, he lay in a shell hole giving all necessary orders until he fainted from loss of blood. He set a fine example of pluck and skilful leadership.

PHILIP, GEORGE MORRISON, M.C., Temporary Lieut., Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In spite of continued heavy shelling and machine-gun fire he spent the night in "No Man's Land," working right up to the enemy's wire, searching for and bringing in wounded. They had been lying out since dawn, and his gallantry and devotion enabled him to get at least 40 men back into our lines.

POTTER, KENNETH MITCHELL, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment he restored order amongst transport that had been disorganized by shell fire, although it entailed removing his respirator under heavy gas-shell fire in order to make himself heard. After clearing the traffic he completely collapsed from the effect of the gas, and his gallant action was the means of saving the lives of many men and horses.

RICHARDSON, ARCHIBALD READ, Lieut.-Colonel, London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in organizing bombing parties for an unprotected flank. With these he beat off repeated enemy counter-attacks which were launched under heavy barrage, and it was owing to his skill and energy under most trying conditions that the troops on his right were able to hold on and consolidate their position. His fine personal example greatly encouraged all ranks in an extremely critical situation.

UMFREVILLE, RALPH BRUNTON, Temporary Major, Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in organizing and successfully leading a difficult attack. He personally supervised and rallied his men under heavy shell fire. On the following day he was continuously in the front line, which was held at a critical period through his personal courage and example.

WARDELL, HENRY, Temporary Major, Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his battalion in an attack. Although severely wounded in the leg, he bandaged it and continued with his battalion until stopped by a shell, which removed one eye and partially, if not completely, destroyed the other. The success of his battalion was in a very large degree due to his fine leadership.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

ALLEN, ARTHUR SAMUEL, Capt. Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great dash and determination against enemy trenches, through heavy artillery and machine-gun barrage, and against a stubborn resistance of the garrison, of whom he captured 100 prisoners. He continued to rally and lead his men to the attack, gaining further ground by his aggressive spirit and setting a fine example of initiative and organizing ability.

BREMNER, NORMAN FREDERICK, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He made his way through an intense enemy artillery barrage to a company which had become isolated and cut off from all communications, extricated it, and enabled it to capture the objective and 80 prisoners. He carried a wounded officer back under heavy fire of every description, during which he was attacked by five of the enemy, of whom he killed four and captured the fifth. His great gallantry saved the company and imbued fresh spirit into the men.

FURBER, RUPERT IGGULDEN, Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He had charge of an advanced dressing station for five days, during which it was under heavy shell fire most of the time. He displayed the greatest ability and devotion to duty in organizing the dressing and evacuation of a large number of the wounded, on several occasions helping to bring them in himself.

HERON, ALEXANDER ROBERT, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company to the relief of a battalion through extremely heavy shell fire, with great success and very few casualties. Throughout the operations, although under heavy barrage, he kept in touch and sent back information to his battalion headquarters. His skill and devotion contributed largely to the successful holding of our line, and throughout the whole period in the trenches his work has been consistently thorough.

HODGENS, SYDNEY FRANCIS, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In spite of difficulties occasioned by destroyed roads, shell-torn ground and heavy shell fire, he kept his guns continually in action with an ample supply of ammunition, thereby giving most effective support to our infantry attack. He also did valuable service as forward observation officer, displaying great energy and resource in keeping up communication.

MAXWELL, ARTHUR MAINWARING, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He made a valuable reconnaissance at a critical moment to restore touch between two brigades, taking great risks under heavy shell fire, and leading his men with great skill and courage. Throughout the whole engagement his actions were marked by sound judgment and promptitude, especially when the command of his battalion had devolved upon himself.

MILNE, JOHN ALEXANDER, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great capacity and initiative in commanding his battalion when on carrying party duty. He kept the front line well supplied with stores, ammunition and water, and arranged for the relief of the parties in a most efficient manner, although constantly depleted by casualties and exhaustion.

PURDY, JOHN SMITH, Lieut.-Colonel, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although continually under shell fire for seven days, he exercised close personal supervision over the evacuation of the wounded, and by his own example of courage and disregard of danger he animated all ranks with a similar attitude of mind. His work during preliminary preparations displayed the same untiring energy and devotion to duty.

RIDDELL, CONSETT CARRE, Major, Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although knocked down and stunned by shell fire, he continued to make most valuable and daring reconnaissances in advance of our front line. He has been wounded three times, but in spite of this his work has been consistently gallant throughout.

WHITE, HAROLD FLETCHER, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company to the attack with exceptional dash over difficult ground and under heavy gas shell bombardment. By his great cheerfulness and disregard of personal danger, he kept the morale of his men at its highest, under incessant artillery fire, repulsed a counter-attack and successfully organized the consolidation.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

THOMS, NATHANIEL WILLIAM BENJAMIN BUTLER, M.C., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in frequently moving forward under exceptionally heavy shell fire, personally reconnoitring the line and bringing back most valuable reports. He displayed exceptional courage and keenness throughout.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

KNAPP, ERLING, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At very short notice he organized and carried out a successful raid upon the enemy, and his fine example and disregard of danger in commanding his battalion and supervising the consolidation of his captured objective, greatly inspired the men.

London Gazette, 25 Aug. 1917.—"War Office, 25 Aug. 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned Rewards for Distinguished Service in the field in Mesopotamia, dated 3 June, 1917. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

London Gazette, 29 Aug. 1917.—"Admiralty, 29 Aug. 1917. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services in the action in the Straits of Otranto on the 15th May, 1917."

TODD, GEORGE JAMES, Capt., R.N. For his services in command of H.M.S. Bristol during the action.

GOODWIN, FRANK RHEUBEN, Engineer Commander, R.N. For exceptional work under very trying conditions in bringing H.M.S. Dartmouth to port after she was torpedoed.

"Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours for services in action with enemy submarines. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

SIMPSON, SALISBURY HAMILTON, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

HALLETT, JOHN IGNATIUS, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

NAYLOR, CEDRIC, D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve.

"Honours for the Royal Naval Air Service.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officer."

SAVORY, KENNETH STEVENS, D.S.O., Squadron-Commander, Royal Naval Air Service. In recognition of his services on the night of the 9th July, 1917, when a successful attack was carried out against the Turkish-German fleet lying off Constantinople. When the Goeben, surrounded by warships (including submarines), had been located, the attack was made from a height of 800 feet. Direct hits were obtained on the Goeben and on the other enemy ships near her. Big explosions took place on board them, followed by a heavy conflagration. The War Office at Constantinople was also attacked, and a direct hit obtained.

London Gazette, 14 Sept. 1917.—"Admiralty, 14 Sept. 1917.—Honours for Miscellaneous Services. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order."

DE BURGH, HUBERT HENRY, Commander, R.N. For his services in command of a destroyer in the action with enemy destroyers off the Belgian coast on the 5th June, 1917, when one of the enemy's destroyers, S. 20, was sunk. Commander de Burgh succeeded in saving seven men of S. 20's crew while under heavy fire from the shore batteries and with three German seaplanes hovering overhead.

BODDAM-WHETHAM, EDYD KINGTON, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. For his services in command of a destroyer in the action with enemy destroyers off the Belgian coast on the 5th June, 1917. He handled his ship well in the face of superior forces and under the fire of the shore batteries.

BROMLEY, FREDERICK WILLIAM, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

SHARP, MAURICE JAMES ROGERS, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

HUXHAM, HAROLD HUGH, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

For their services in vessels of the Harwich Force during the war.

"Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour for services in action with enemy submarines. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

SANDERS, WILLIAM EDWARD, V.C., Lieut.-Commander, R.N.R. (since killed).

"Honours for the Royal Naval Air Service.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officer."

LITTLE, ROBERT ALEXANDER, D.S.O., D.S.C., Flight Lieut. (Acting Flight Commander), Royal Naval Air Service. For exceptional gallantry and skill in aerial fighting. On 16 July, 1917, he observed two Aviatiks flying low over the lines. He dived on the nearest one, firing a long burst at very close range. The enemy machine dived straight away, and Flight Lieut. Little followed him closely down to 500 feet, the enemy machine falling out of control. On 20 July, 1917, he attacked a D.F.W. After a short fight, the enemy machine dived vertically. Its tail plane seemed to crumple up, and it was completely wrecked. On 22 July, 1917, he attacked a D.F.W. Aviatik, and brought it down completely out of control. On 27 July, 1917, in company with another pilot, he attacked an Aviatik. After each had fired about 20 rounds, the enemy machine began to spin downwards. Flight Lieut. Little got close to it, and observed both the occupants lying back in the cock-pits, as if dead. The machine fell behind the enemy's lines, and was wrecked. Flight Lieut. Little has shown remarkable courage and boldness in attacking enemy machines.

London Gazette, 17 Sept. 1917.—"War Office, 17 Sept. 1917. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to"—

BURNETT, JAMES LAUDERDALE GILBERT, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion during the attack and capture of a position. The success of the attack was greatly due to his leadership and the confidence with which he inspired his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1917.) (This date corrected to 18 Feb. 1915.)

GATER, GEORGE HENRY, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with brilliant skill and resolution during an attack, minimizing their casualties during three days' intense shelling by his able dispositions and good eye for ground. He directed the consolidation, and remained in command for three days, although severely wounded in the face early in the action.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

MATHERS, DAVID, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion during an attack; remaining for two days at his post, although badly wounded and shaken by a shell. His example of fine leadership greatly inspired his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Nov. 1916.)

STUBBS, GUY CLIFFORD, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in holding captured trenches with his battalion for three days against hostile counter-attacks. He proceeded at a critical moment to the captured line, under heavy enemy barrage, to encourage his men and reorganize the defence, and shot several of the enemy who were in shell-holes. His gallant example and untiring energy inspired all ranks with the greatest enthusiasm.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field."

ANDERSON, LEWIS, M.B., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out his duties for 48 hours without relief, attending to over 100 cases and working under the most adverse conditions. He was exposed throughout to intense and heavy fire of shell and gas shells, which rendered it necessary for him to work in a mask. The following night, after his battalion had been withdrawn, he returned to search for wounded in the front line, which was still in close contact with the enemy, and, after working for several hours under heavy shell fire, he collected and evacuated all his wounded, having displayed magnificent devotion and the utmost contempt for danger throughout.

BATCHELOR, VIVIAN ALLAN, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at all times. During an intense bombardment of his battery, with H.E. by day and gas by night, he continually moved about, with an utter disregard of danger, extinguishing dumps that had been set on fire and warning his men at the outset of gas attacks. He brought his battery up in exceptionally quick time, and kept them in action by his magnificent example, and, although badly gassed and wounded, refused to leave them. He has also made daring and valuable personal reconnaissances on several occasions.

BEATTIE, MAURICE ALEXANDER, Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding and fighting his battery splendidly for four days and nights under intense concentrated heavy fire. When three guns were rendered useless, he continued to fire with the fourth, until that was also hit. He displayed very great courage and endurance under most trying conditions.

BURNETT-STUART, GILBERT ROBERTSON, Major, Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under fire. He commanded his battery with great skill and success, overcoming difficulties of observation for wire-cutting, and on one occasion going along the whole of the front line in his zone under heavy hostile fire to ascertain the position of our most advanced infantry. He successfully accomplished this, showing exceptional coolness and an utter disregard of personal safety.

CAMPBELL, WILLIAM CHARLES, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions whilst on offensive patrols. He has displayed the greatest courage and skill in attacking enemy aircraft at close range, destroying some and driving others down out of control. He has proved himself to be a scout leader of the highest class, and has destroyed 12 hostile machines and two balloons, besides taking part in many other combats during the last three months. By his fearlessness and offensive spirit he has set a splendid example to all ranks.

CLAUDET, GEOFFREY FRANCIS, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in taking over and commanding his battery under exceptionally difficult and trying conditions. Though his Battery Commander and two subalterns had been killed, and the battery had suffered heavily, two guns being damaged, as well as many of his men, he succeeded in bringing the remaining guns into action very shortly after assuming command. By his gallant conduct and great devotion to duty he set a splendid example to his men.

COCKBURN, GILBERT ERIC GRAHAM, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Irish Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a most critical and obscure period of an attack he was sent out with orders to clear up the situation, if possible, and to assume control of his battalion if he could reach his front line. This he eventually succeeded in doing, under heavy fire, during which he was shot through the right eye. Undeterred by this he stuck most gallantly to his mission, and although wounded again in the shoulder by a sniper, he displayed the most magnificent fearlessness and determination in reorganizing and leading his men against the enemy's position. Though under intense fire he sent in valuable and accurate reports on the situation, and remained directing operations until nightfall. His great gallantry and initiative and the example of devotion to duty which he set to all ranks were beyond all praise.

DEANE-DRUMMOND, JOHN DRUMMOND, M.C., Temporary Major, Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of divisional machine guns his personal example and fearlessness had a splendid effect on all ranks during an attack. He successfully took his machine guns through our barrage and prevented the escape of two hostile field guns.

FRIEND, REGINALD STEWART IRVINE, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), East Kent Regt., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in personally supervising the consolidation of a captured position and pushing out important advanced posts. Although frequently under heavy shell fire he kept his men in splendid spirits by his personal example and energy.

GOODMAN, HARRY RUSSELL, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion. The spirit and drive of his battalion during an attack and the splendid way in which they captured their own objective and then went to the assistance of another battalion that was temporarily in difficulties, are to be entirely attributed to the personal influence and initiative of this officer. By excellent training he has improved the fighting efficiency of his battalion beyond all recognition, and prior to the attack his patrols penetrated the enemy's lines on several occasions, inflicting heavy casualties and gaining much valuable information.

KENNEDY-COCHRAN-PATRICK, WILLIAM JOHN CHARLES, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Rifle Brigade and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions in destroying and driving down hostile machines, frequently engaging the enemy with great dash and a fine offensive spirit when encountered in superior numbers. By his cool judgment and splendid fearlessness he has instilled confidence in all around him, his brilliant leadership being chiefly responsible for his numerous successes.

MANN, HEATHCOTE UPFIELD, M.C., Capt., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy shelling and gas for a considerable period. The success of administrative preparations of the divisional front, carried out under considerable danger and difficulty, reflects great credit upon this officer.

MARK, ALAN WILLIAM DOBSON, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut., Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in holding an extremely important point on the left of our line for 24 hours with his platoon, repeatedly beating off determined counter-attacks. After his party had been relieved the position was recaptured by the enemy, whereupon he moved up again on his own initiative and drove them out a second time, regaining the whole of the lost ground. He led his men with the utmost dash and fearlessness through heavy hostile barrage, setting a magnificent example by his own personal gallantry.

McKEE, JAMES, Temporary Capt., Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company in an attack. Although wounded he continued to advance until severely wounded for a second time, his leg being so badly shattered that it has since been amputated. He has at all times led his men with complete disregard of personal danger, and the splendid training which he had instilled into them beforehand proved its worth in enabling them to gain and hold their objective under trying circumstances.

PROBYN, HAROLD MELSOME, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Warwickshire Regt. and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical time when hostile infantry had penetrated our trenches, he went up in unfavourable weather and under heavy machine-gun and anti-aircraft fire from guns of heavy calibre, and managed to locate and report with complete accuracy the position and progress of the enemy. To do this he had to fly at a very low altitude, during which his machine was seriously damaged by enemy fire. The following day he carried out another daring and successful reconnaissance of the enemy's line, bringing back information of the greatest value. He has already experienced a whole year's strenuous service flying, a fact which speaks for his gallantry and endurance on both of these particular occasions.

ROCHE-KELLY, EDMUND, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion through an attack, in which he displayed great fearlessness and exceptional skill. He moved up through very heavy enemy barrage, personally reconnoitred two advanced positions, and supervised all details of consolidation, all the while exposed to very heavy shell fire. His splendid personal example and disregard of danger imbued all ranks with a spirit that swept away all opposition.

RUTHERFORD, NORMAN CECIL, M.B., F.R.C.S., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an advanced dressing station. He worked continuously under heavy shell fire, evacuating the wounded from the forward area, and it was owing to his splendid example of devotion that the work was efficiently carried out.

SCOTT, WILLIAM DISHINGTON, M.C., Temporary Major, Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under an intense bombardment, by which our communication and support trenches had been practically obliterated. He went forward to the front line and reorganized the defence of his sub-sector three times. It was entirely due to his magnificent example of pluck and total disregard of danger that the garrison showed such determination.

SHEPHERD, ALFRED SEYMOUR, M.C., Second Lieut., Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on numerous occasions when engaged in combat with hostile aircraft. Though surrounded by enemy machines, he continued to fight for nearly an hour with the utmost gallantry and determination against two hostile formations, finally bringing down one of the enemy out of control. Within a month he brought down seven hostile machines completely out of control.

SMITH, HERBERT FREDERICK EDGAR, Capt., King's Royal Rifle Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy attack upon our trenches, he found himself blocked in a tunnel with 20 men. The only entrance that was not blown up was bombed by the enemy. With great coolness and control, however, he kept his men together, and at nightfall brought them through trenches held by the enemy and across a river. The escape of his party was entirely due to his initiative and resource.

STANNUS, THOMAS ROBERT ALEXANDER, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel) (Reserve of Officers, Leinster Regt., Special Reserve). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion. Although severely wounded, and thereby unluckily precluded from leading them to the attack, his careful supervision and preliminary preparations undoubtedly ensured the success which his men attained. His adjutant was wounded at the same moment, but Lieut.-Colonel Stannus declined all aid until the other officer had been attended to. He had previously done splendid work when acting as O.C., on one occasion frustrating a raid with great loss to the enemy, entirely through his personal foresight and grasp of the situation.

WHEELDON, FREDERICK LAWRENCE, Temporary Second Lieut., East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon to the attack under very heavy fire. He was the first to reach and to push into the enemy's trench, where he was opposed by four of the enemy, all of whom he killed single-handed, although severely wounded in both arms and legs by a bomb which one of them threw at him. He continued on until eight men were left out of his platoon. This alone shows what a splendid example of leadership he displayed during the operation.

WOODHOUSE, JOHN WHITAKER, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out special missions by night, during which he has frequently been compelled to face very bad weather. In the course of numerous bombing expeditions by night he invariably descended to very low altitudes in order to use his machine gun against hostile troops on the roads. He has consistently set a very fine example.

CANADIAN FORCE.

CONNOLLY, CHARLES EDWARD, Capt., Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding a raid upon four lines of enemy defences, in which heavy losses were inflicted upon the enemy and many prisoners captured, as well as a great number of dug-outs destroyed. He was wounded before reaching the enemy's wire, but he continued to direct the party with the greatest courage and skill, and after withdrawal he returned to the raided area with a Serjt.-Major to make sure that none of his wounded or dead were left behind.

LISTER, FRED, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion for ten days in the trenches, during which they took part in five successful attacks on the enemy's lines, and resisted three vigorous counter-attacks. The success of the whole of this operation was due to his tireless supervision and the personal example which he set his men in preparing for the attacks, and consolidating the ground when it had been captured. He contributed largely to the capture of ground of the greatest tactical value, which had previously been unsuccessfully attacked.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

EVANS, CHARLES HELLIER DAVIS, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a party which had to prepare a cavalry track. He reorganized his men when scattered by heavy shell fire, and continued to supervise the work, which by his fine personal example was rapidly completed under heavy fire, and proved subsequently invaluable to the success of our operations.

London Gazette, 17 Sept. 1917.—"War Office, 17 Sept. 1917. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following rewards for distinguished service in the field. Distinguished Service Order."

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

HILLARY, MICHAEL JAMES, Lieut., Engineers.

London Gazette, 21 Sept. 1917.—"Admiralty, 21 Sept. 1917.—Extracts from a Despatch of Vice-Admiral Sir Rosslyn E. Wemyss, K.C.B., C.M.G., M.V.O., late Commander-in-Chief, East Indies Station, covering a report by Capt. Wilfrid Nunn, C.M.G., D.S.O., R.N., on the operations of H.M. Gunboats in Mesopotamia from Dec. 1916, to March, 1917."

From Capt. Wilfrid Nunn's Report.—"I have the honour to submit the following for special mention, promotion, honours or awards":—

H.M.S. Tarantula.

SHERBROOKE, HENRY G., Commander, R.N. For skilful handling of his ship, and especially on 26 Feb., when he contributed largely to the success of the operations.

H.M.S. Mantis.

BUXTON, BERNARD, Commander, R.N. For good work done on all occasions. His prompt action under heavy fire on 26 March saved H.M.S. Mantis from running aground in a critical position.

H.M.S. Moth.

HILL, FREDERICK G. E., Surgeon, R.N. Who, finding a man wounded on the battery deck, gallantly, under heavy fire, carried him into the sick bay to dress his wounds. Whilst doing this, the man received another wound through his throat, and Surgeon Hill himself received a nasty wound in his forearm. Nevertheless, although in considerable pain, and until his arm became too stiff to use it, he proceeded to dress and attend to all the wounded on board.

H.M.S. Gaddy.

ARBUTHNOT, ERNEST K., Commander, R.N. During the recent advance to Baghdad I have found this officer's knowledge and experience of great benefit, and he has shown great coolness under fire on all occasions.

London Gazette, 21 Sept. 1917.—"Admiralty, 21 Sept. 1917. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the following appointments to the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services as mentioned in the foregoing Despatch."

“Honours to the Royal Naval Air Service.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to Officers of the Royal Naval Air Service. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order.”

GRAHAM, RONALD, D.S.C., Acting Flight Commander, Royal Naval Air Service. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in air fights and bombing raids. Since the award of a Bar to the Distinguished Service Cross, Acting Flight Commander Graham has carried out five night bombing raids, and attacked and brought down three enemy seaplanes. On one occasion he ascended at night for the purpose of attacking hostile machines, notwithstanding the fact that he had only returned a few hours previously from a successful action with hostile aircraft in superior numbers. He has always displayed remarkable skill and courage.

FISHER, PHILIP SIDNEY, D.S.C., Acting Flight Commander, Royal Naval Air Service. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in air fights and bombing raids. On one occasion, when very heavy fighting took place between eight machines of his squadron and about 20 Albatross scouts, he fought at least six combats single-handed, shooting down one of his opponents out of control. On another occasion, when he was acting as leader of a flight of five machines detailed for an offensive patrol, a general action took place with a number of Albatross scouts, in the course of which Acting Flight Commander Fisher was wounded whilst fighting with great gallantry. He has shown himself to be a most efficient and plucky flight leader, and has also taken part in numerous night bombing raids in addition to his day fighting.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

MARSHALL, WILLIAM, D.S.O., R.D., Commander (Acting Capt.), Royal Naval Reserve.

London Gazette, 9 Jan. 1918.—"War Office, 9 Jan. 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette, dated 26 Sept. 1917, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

HILL, GERALD VICTOR WILMOT, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in support. Seeing that the troops in front were held up, he at once decided to attack the enemy, in co-operation with another battalion, in order to gain high ground that was of great tactical importance. It was mainly owing to his personal gallantry and leadership that the attack of his battalion, which had to be conducted without the help of artillery, was successful, and the position gained.

(1st Bar gazetted 17 April, 1917.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

BISHOP, WILLIAM AVERY, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Canadian Cavalry and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when engaging hostile aircraft. His consistent dash and great fearlessness have set a magnificent example to the pilots of his squadron. He has destroyed no less than 45 hostile machines within the past five months, frequently attacking enemy formations single-handed, and on all occasions displaying a fighting spirit and determination to get to close quarters with his opponents which have earned the admiration of all in contact with him.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 June, 1917.)

BRAND, THE HONOURABLE ROGER, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Finding that most of his Officers and N.C.O.'s had become casualties he went to the front line, and by his personal example and resolute bearing held his battalion together throughout the day in spite of shortage of ammunition and strong hostile counter-attacks. Although slightly wounded early in the day, he kept his grip on the fighting with tireless energy, and inspired all ranks by his courage and disregard of danger.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

CLAY, BERTIE GORDON, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his battalion in support of an attack. Seeing that the leading troops were held up, and had not gained the important position which was their objective, he at once decided to co-operate with another battalion and attack the enemy. By this prompt and decisive action at a critical moment high ground of the greatest tactical importance was won, and the success of the attack (which had to be conducted without the aid of artillery) was mainly due to the personal gallantry and ability with which Lieut.-Colonel Clay led his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 20 Oct. 1916.)

CORTE, ARTHUR CECIL, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), South African Defence Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. By the prompt and skilful measures which he took on encountering serious opposition, he was able to attain his objective, and by his personal example and cheerfulness the moral of his men was maintained during a very trying period and under most adverse weather conditions.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

DAUBENY, GILES BULTELL, D.S.O., Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an extremely critical period when the situation was by no means clear, he kept up continual fire with his battery and rendered invaluable support to the infantry, although his brigade was exposed to constant and heavy fire and suffering many casualties for two days. His behaviour during this period was beyond praise, and it was in a great measure due to his coolness, courage and personality that fire was kept up.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Nov. 1916.)

DENNIS, MICHAEL FREDERICK BEAUCHAMP, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Own Scottish Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded in the back by shrapnel, he refused to leave the battlefield, but continued to lead his battalion with the utmost gallantry and disregard of danger, rallying men who had been driven back by hostile counter-attacks and setting a personal example which enabled his battalion to hold their line.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 Nov. 1915.)

FINCH, LIONEL HUGH KNIGHTLEY, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Prior to an assault his battalion sustained considerable casualties. Undeterred by these losses, however, he drew up and rehearsed his plans for assembly with the greatest care. During the assault the battalion sustained further heavy casualties, but this officer led the survivors with brilliant initiative and the utmost gallantry in an attack upon an enemy strong point, which he captured, killing or taking prisoners all the garrison. He then pushed his outpost line out and got into touch with the battalions on his flank, making complete dispositions for his advance. He was badly wounded at the end of the day, having set a personal example of fearlessness and fine leadership to which the excellent performance of his battalion was largely due.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

GORT, VISCOUNT, JOHN STANDISH SURTEES PRENDERGAST, M.V.O., D.S.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although hit in two places in the shoulder by the bursting of a shell early in the day and in great pain, he refused to leave his battalion, and personally superintended the consolidation subsequent to a successful attack. He remained with them until five p.m. on the following day, when he was ordered to come out and have his wounds dressed. His conduct set a very fine example of self-sacrifice, and was of great value in maintaining the high morale and offensive spirit of his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

HANBURY-SPARROW, ARTHUR ALAN HANBURY, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an action. When the objective was reached he personally superintended the consolidation of the front line. He continued to hold his line with a force of mixed units until his flank became exposed and he was compelled to withdraw. He rallied his men, organized a new defensive line, and held on until relieved. Throughout the day he set a splendid example to all ranks of self-sacrifice and resolute determination, and by his soldier-like bearing encouraged everyone. He exposed himself fearlessly, and it was due to his magnificent courage that the enemy counter-attacks were driven off.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Dec. 1914.)

HINDLE, RALPH, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst commanding his battalion during an advance. He showed the finest leadership throughout, and under his direction his battalion captured all its objectives and inflicted heavy loss on the enemy. His men were greatly inspired by his coolness and personal example.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

INGPEN, PERCY LEIGH, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an action his battalion headquarters were demolished by shell fire, and he was only extricated with great difficulty. Though ordered to hand over his command, he went to the front-line trenches on hearing that the enemy was counter-attacking. He remained there until dangerously wounded, restoring confidence by his example at a most critical period.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

MACDONALD, CHARLES LESLIE, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a moment when a party of his own battalion and other units were held up by an enemy strong point. He pushed forward and organized a bombing attack, but the officer leading it was killed and it failed. Seeing a tank approach, he ran out under fire and got into it, directing the tank towards the strong point. As soon as he had given instructions, he got out again and rejoined his party in the trench under a storm of machine-gun fire. He has on all occasions set a fine example of coolness and contempt of danger.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

MORIARTY, OLIVER NASH, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Garrison Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a prolonged and very accurate bombardment of his battery by the enemy he organized a party to put out a fire which had broken out amongst his ammunition. He afterwards showed great promptness in taking his party from the heavily shelled area to the B.C. post, where he remained until he was shelled out of it. Subsequently, when the line between the battery and headquarters was broken, he and another officer went out under heavy fire and restored communication. His presence of mind and fearlessness under very trying conditions were beyond all praise.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Aug. 1916.)

PEIRS, HUGH JOHN CHEVALLIER, D.S.O., Temporary Major, Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst in command of his battalion. It was entirely due to his energy and splendid personal example that his part of the line was consolidated when the officers of the leading companies had suffered heavy casualties. He continually passed through a heavy barrage with utter disregard of personal danger in order to visit his advanced posts, and in spite of unforeseen difficulties which arose during the attack, it was carried out without a hitch owing to his remarkable foresight and fine leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

PETERSON, ARTHUR JAMES, D.S.O., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst withdrawing his guns from a badly shelled position. Having completed his work he was skirting a heavily shelled corner when the gun of another battery was overturned by a shell which killed a horse and threw the team into confusion. Although shells were dropping six a minute on the corner, he and another officer rushed up and cut the team free, saving three drivers and five horses. At least eight heavy shells dropped within a few yards of them whilst so engaged. He performed this gallant act after a particularly trying three weeks, during which he had only been away 24 hours from his post.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Aug. 1916.)

REYNOLDS, LEWIS LESLIE CLAYTON, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to heavy officer casualties three of his companies became disorganized in an attack. He moved forward at once to the front line, and by his personal gallantry and determination rapidly organized his men and drove off the enemy's counter-attack, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. The situation was most critical and had it not been for his splendid example the enemy's counter-attack would have succeeded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Nov. 1916.)

RIDDELL, EDWARD PIUS ARTHUR, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion in reserve during an attack. He threw in a counter-attack at a counter stroke by the enemy, and held on to an eminence of the highest tactical importance throughout the afternoon. His dispositions not only allowed the brigade to fall back in order before superior numbers, but materially reduced the enemy's strength, as he held off three counter-attacks and inflicted crushing casualties on the enemy. He eventually assumed command and reorganized two other units of the brigade, and passed four times through a heavy hostile barrage to his brigade headquarters to report on the situation. He handled a most difficult situation with consummate skill, and his utter disregard of danger not only encouraged the men to further effort but was a magnificent example of courage and determination.

(D.S.O. gazetted 11 Dec. 1916.)

ROGERS, JAMES SAMUEL YEAMAN, D.S.O., Major, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout several days' operations he attended to the wounded in the open under continuous heavy fire. Though all his stretcher-bearers were casualties, with utter disregard of danger he bound up the wounded and superintended their removal. His gallantry was most marked.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

SAMUEL, FREDERICK DUDLEY, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He organized and personally carried out the re-establishment of some posts which had been lost. The ground was quite strange to his men, and it was entirely due to his efforts that the posts were re-established. Later, when all communications except by runner were broken during the operations, it was mainly due to his energy and fearlessness that information was forwarded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

WIENHOLT, WILLIAM HUMPHREY MEYRICK, D.S.O., Temporary Major, North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in temporary command of his battalion. In spite of heavy casualties previous to the attack he made careful assembly arrangements, thereby ensuring the complete success of his battalion. They killed a great number of the enemy and dug themselves in with such rapidity that when enemy counter-attacks commenced they were able to deal with every hostile effort and maintain all their positions until relieved. This officer remained cool and collected throughout, in spite of having to frequently change his battalion headquarters, and his conduct throughout was marked by common sense, gallantry and great initiative.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

WOOD, EDWARD ALLAN, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His personal example and leading were largely responsible for the dash and grit shown by his battalion during two days' severe fighting. He personally supervised the forming up of his battalion under heavy hostile barrage; leading them to the line of deployment, he deployed them punctually and without confusion four hundred yards from the final objective. During the ensuing three days his personal influence and skill kept his battalion secure against frequent counter-attacks, although his flanks were in a precarious situation owing to the neighbouring troops having been driven back.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ALEXANDER, THE HONOURABLE WILLIAM SIGISMUND PATRICK, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Irish Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Whilst leading his company in an attack he came under heavy machine-gun fire from a concrete emplacement. He immediately led a successful attack through a gap in our barrage, and outflanked three gun positions, capturing three machine guns and 14 men. He then continued the attack, and seized his objective within the scheduled time, in spite of having to pass through our own barrage as well as that of the enemy. He set a splendid example of fearlessness and resource.

ALLEN, LIONEL RAYMOND, Lieut., Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as Battalion Intelligence Officer. He behaved with the utmost fearlessness under an intense bombardment, continually making journeys through very heavy barrage in order to obtain information of the tactical situation. His reports were invaluable. The following evening he made a most gallant and successful reconnaissance of the new enemy line, in the course of which he swam a river and remained half an hour in the water; during this time he was subjected to artillery, rifle and machine-gun fire, but, in spite of this, he returned with very valuable information, having displayed throughout a splendid example of coolness and fearless devotion to duty.

ARCHER, HARRY, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Devonshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After his Commanding Officer had been killed he handled the battalion with marked skill and determination during two days of the attack, and it was due to his fearless example and fine leadership that his battalion succeeded in reaching all the objectives, and holding them in the face of repeated and determined counter-attacks.

BELLEW, FROUDE DILLON, M.C., Major, Somersetshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of his battalion during several days of intense fighting. He continually visited the front line when movement was very difficult owing to hostile fire, and inspired all ranks by his courage and contempt of danger. Later, he commanded all the troops in the right section of the brigade front, and by his skill and enterprise organized a defence that withstood repeated hostile counter-attacks. He displayed fine leadership and great power of command.

BENNETT, THOMAS EDWIN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Army Service Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He rendered invaluable assistance at a very critical time to brigade transport, which was taking up ammunition, food and material to the front line, and suffering heavy casualties in doing so. He personally reconnoitred the ground and led the mules over the most dangerous and difficult parts of the track, at times wading thigh deep in water, and removing pack saddles from mules which had fallen into shell holes. He set a splendid example of coolness and devotion to duty.

BETHELL, HUGH KEPPEL, Capt. and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst commanding an attack upon a hostile position. It was a very hard fight, and it was due to his fine leadership that the attack was a complete success. By his energy and personal example he very greatly inspired all ranks of his brigade.

BOWELL, ROBERT HENRY, Second Lieut., Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of two platoons in the outpost line. Owing to the death of his Company Commander and the Company Sergeant-Major, he was not relieved for four days, during which he remained on his line of posts without food or water and unable to get into touch with any other troops. He successfully repelled several raids by the enemy, and finally, when nearly surrounded, and with all his men completely exhausted, he decided to withdraw, and accomplished this successfully without any casualties. His courage and endurance during this exceptionally trying time were beyond all praise.

BOWIE, JOHN DARLING, M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He worked continuously for 36 hours under heavy shell fire, supervising the removal of the wounded from the front line, and by his energetic example and personal assistance all casualties were cleared within a short time after the operations were completed. His disregard of danger and untiring devotion to duty had a splendid effect upon his men.

BRADSHAW, WILLIAM PAT. ARTHUR, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Scots Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack upon an enemy position. Hearing that the officers of the company on his left had suffered severely, he went over and reorganized it, so as to make sure that its attack would succeed. He then returned to his own company and took command of the whole battalion frontage and consolidated the position when the objective was reached. He set a splendid example to the two companies under him by his own personal courage and cheerfulness under extremely heavy fire.

BRYCE, EDWARD DANIEL, Capt. (Temporary Major), Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His company on the way to the position of deployment came under heavy hostile barrage, by which a number of tank officers and others were wounded and gassed. Major Bryce, although gassed and twice knocked over by shells which burst alongside him, continued to take charge, and walking in front guided his tanks to their positions. Two days afterwards, although still suffering from the effects of gas and partially blinded, he commanded his company in action, and at great personal risk went forward to collect information. His pluck and devotion to duty cannot be too highly praised.

BUCKLEY, ALBERT, Capt. (Temporary Major), North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion in action, and captured all his objectives as well as several points beyond those allotted to him, and during the three days following he continually visited the positions, encouraging the men and organizing the defence under very heavy shell fire. His personal example was of the highest value in maintaining the spirits of officers and men during the very trying time which followed the capture of the position.

CADE, ARTHUR GORDON, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. Hearing that the left flank of his battalion was held up, he at once went forward with as many men and machine guns as he could collect, and throughout the whole day, under intense hostile fire, reorganized his battalion with the utmost disregard of personal safety in full view of the enemy. He strengthened an exposed flank, and held on in the face of determined counter-attacks. His courage and coolness were beyond all praise, and it was solely due to his personal efforts that he kept his battalion in good morale throughout the day.

COKE, THE HONOURABLE EDWARD, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the attack and during the five following days while holding the captured position, by his personality, absolute fearlessness, and cheerful example, he kept up the spirits of his battalion under very adverse conditions and continuous heavy shelling. The success of the battalion was mainly due to his able leadership.

CONINGHAM, ARTHUR, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With three other pilots he attacked an enemy machine which was protected by ten others, shot it down, and destroyed another one the same evening. Shortly afterwards he and two others attacked five of the enemy, and although wounded and rendered unconscious for the moment, he succeeded in driving down two of the enemy. In spite of being much exhausted by loss of blood he continued his patrol until he was sure that no more enemy machines were in the vicinity, setting a splendid example of pluck and determination.

DAVENPORT, FRED, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under an intensely concentrated and accurate hostile bombardment of his battery position he superintended the withdrawal of his men to their dug-outs, but on his way back was buried by a shell which destroyed the mess in which he had been compelled to take refuge. The instant he was extricated he reorganized his battery and answered two S.O.S. calls before taking part in an offensive barrage. He conducted the latter with complete success under very difficult conditions, the original orders having been destroyed. It was entirely due to his gallantry and invariable cheerfulness under fire that the fire of his battery was available during the whole of this critical and important period.

DAVIDGE, GUY MORTIMER COLERIDGE, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the right flank of his brigade had become exposed he was ordered to form a defensive flank with his battalion. This he did with the utmost skill and success, thereby enabling the troops on his left to maintain the ground they had gained. He visited the position taken by the battalion under very heavy machine-gun and shell fire, displaying splendid coolness and disregard of personal safety.

EATON, THE HONOURABLE FRANCIS ORMOND HENRY, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a very critical moment during an attack he deployed his company and went to the assistance of another unit which had suffered such heavy casualties that they were unable to occupy their frontage. It was entirely due to his initiative and leadership that the objective was captured and consolidated up to scheduled time.

EDWARDS, CHRISTOPHER VAUGHAN, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in going forward under shell and rifle fire and making a daring personal reconnaissance in order to clear up an obscure situation. By his action he not only managed to ascertain the actual situation and to take the necessary measures, but also set a fine example of coolness, and greatly encouraged both officers and men. He has previously displayed great judgment and gallantry under fire.

EDWARDS, CYRIL GEORGE, Second Lieut., West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having gone out with a N.C.O. to reconnoitre the enemy's wire, they were attacked by bombs. The first one he seized before it exploded and threw it back, and when the second fell, realizing that they could not both escape unharmed, he threw his legs over it to smother the explosion, and thus protected the N.C.O. By this splendid act of gallantry and self-sacrifice he saved the life of his comrade at the risk of his own. The N.C.O. was able to drag him back to our lines, where he showed great pluck in reporting the information which he had gained by his daring reconnaissance.

FORSTER, HAROLD THOMAS, M.C., Lieut., Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took over command of his battalion when his colonel had become a casualty, and led them with great skill to their objective, twice changing direction in order to avoid hostile barrage. He then made a personal reconnaissance and ascertained the position of the enemy, after which he formed a defensive flank, and was able to re-establish his line when it had been driven back by determined hostile counter-attacks. He remained perfectly cheerful throughout, showing a fine example of fearlessness and contempt for danger.

FOULKES, JOHN SIMPSON, Temporary Major, Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack on the enemy trenches he personally closed with a party of the enemy and inflicted severe losses on them, and although wounded in the back by a bomb, continued to control the operation until its conclusion. He set a magnificent example to his men.

FURNESS, CHARLES CLIFFORD, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his daring and exceptionally fearless personal reconnaissances of the positions which his brigade were about to occupy, he gained and brought back information which was invaluable to the operations, and, although under heavy shell fire and machine-gun fire, displayed a coolness and determination to report accurately upon the situations which were of inestimable value to the subsequent moves and action of his brigade.

GEDDES, GODFREY POWER, Temporary Lieut., Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although dazed and much shaken by the explosion of a shell, he, as Adjutant, took command of the front line when all the other officers had become casualties, and coolly and energetically directed the work of consolidation and organization. He also repulsed an enemy counter-attack by his able handling of the battalion's Lewis guns. On the following day, when very heavily counter-attacked, he directed a short retirement to a stronger defence line, from which he held up the enemy, and eventually drove them back when reinforced, personally leading the attack. Although wounded in the hand, he behaved for three days with the utmost courage and ability, filling a responsible position under very trying conditions and practically unaided, by his fine personal example inspiring all ranks to most untiring efforts in attack and defence.

GLOVER, WILLIAM REID, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great ability and fearlessness under very heavy fire. His example tended to maintain the morale of his men under the most adverse conditions, and it was mainly due to his personal efforts that his battalion was reorganized after being compelled to fall back, and the system of defence re-established.

GORDON, LORD DUDLEY GLADSTONE, Temporary Major, Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in personally supervising the construction of two artillery tracks over newly-captured ground. Throughout the day he set a splendid example of gallantry and coolness, personally carrying out reconnaissances under heavy fire from rifles and machine guns, and it was due to his fearlessness and disregard of danger that the track was successfully completed.

GOUGH, HORACE FREDERICK, Second Lieut., North Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He rallied part of a neighbouring battalion that had lost all its officers and had been forced back from a most important position. He personally led a counter-attack, and retook the position at the point of the bayonet, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. He then consolidated the captured position, and remained in command until relieved. By his gallantry, individuality and resource he undoubtedly enabled the troops on his flank to regain a highly important position.

GUINNESS, THE HONOURABLE WALTER EDWARD, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as Brigade Major. Previous to an attack his reconnaissance and arrangements for the assault were excellent, and during the action itself he went forward and made a complete and thorough personal reconnaissance regardless of enemy shelling and rifle fire. He remained on an exposed position for two days, keeping in close touch with the situation under continuous shell fire, and by his prompt action on his own initiative staved off at least one counter-attack.

HAMMILL, LONSDALE, M.C., Capt., South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a reconnaissance he saw the enemy advancing to attack an important advanced post. He got to the post under heavy rifle fire, organized the defence, and drove off the enemy. He then saw that the enemy were working round the flank of a company of another battalion which was likely to become surrounded. He immediately organized a counter-attack, formed a defensive flank, and saved what might have been a disastrous situation. Later he captured an enemy sniper. Throughout the operations he displayed great initiative and good leadership, and set a magnificent example to all ranks.

HANNAY, GEORGE MARTIN, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, late King's Own Scottish Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment when the battalion in his front was driven in by counter-attacks, he stopped all rearward movement by his personal courage and example, and organized defensive measures which checked the counter-attack. On the following day he again set a splendid example whilst commanding his battalion, and under severe fire stopped a gap in the line with his headquarters details and machine gun and beat off another counter-attack.

HARVEY, ALBERT, Second Lieut., Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having led his company to their objective, he noticed that a farm, some 500 yards ahead, was holding up the attack on the left. He at once organized a small party, with which he worked round the flank and rushed the farm, capturing three machine guns and killing and capturing a number of the enemy. By this prompt and plucky action he saved the brigade many casualties. His initiative and enterprise in action are at all times admirable.

HENDERSON-ROE, CHRISTOPHER GORDON, Capt., Royal West Kent Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack upon an enemy trench. He continued to lead and direct his men until he was blown down and almost completely buried. He remained in this position for ten hours, eventually extricating himself. On his way back to our lines he bandaged some of our wounded, collected and placed them into shell holes. He then crawled back to the post held by his battalion, and remained there throughout the action, after which he led the stretcher-bearers to the wounded whom he had collected, and personally carried a badly wounded corporal back to our lines. His gallantry throughout the operation was most marked.

HORSFIELD, RICHARD MARSHALL, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Amidst intense hostile shelling and exploding ammunition, he went to his battery and cut away the camouflage which had been set on fire by enemy shell fire. But for his gallantry and determination to stay the progress of the fire, the whole battery would undoubtedly have been put out of action.

HUNKIN, SAMUEL LLEWELLYN, Temporary Major, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion with skill and judgment during an attack. Having reached his objective, his fine example had a decided effect on his men, keeping them cheerful under trying circumstances, and enabling them to carry out the duties assigned to them.

HUTCHESON, JOHN, M.C., Capt., Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having led his company to its objective, he commenced to consolidate under observation, at a very low altitude, from enemy aeroplanes. When these had departed, he immediately moved his front line forward about 100 yards, and his support line back about the same distance. Shortly afterwards the enemy commenced to shell his original position heavily, but, thanks to his skilful leadership and admirable foresight, the consolidation was completed on the new line with very few casualties. The absolute confidence with which he inspired his men on this and all other occasions is a guarantee of success in any operation which he is ordered to undertake.

IRWIN, NORMAN LESLIE CROZIER, Temporary Capt., Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was informed that a company of the attacking battalion to whom he was in support was in danger of being surrounded by the enemy. He immediately reconnoitred the position, organized a skilful attack, and drove out the enemy. His gallantry and grasp of the situation undoubtedly saved the company from being cut off, and probably saved the whole situation at a critical moment.

JEFFERIES, HUGH ST. JOHN, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion in an exceedingly able manner, securing all the objectives. He made an exceedingly valuable reconnaissance of the situation in the most advanced posts, freely exposing himself to severe machine-gun and shell fire. Later, when both flanks of his battalion became exposed and a withdrawal was necessary, he very skilfully supervised the movement. The counter-attacks of the enemy were checked and heavy losses were inflicted on them. He maintained a high moral standard throughout the operations.

JONES, REGINALD REES, Second Lieut., Welsh Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an advance. When the leading waves were temporarily held up by fire from a blockhouse he pushed up to the obstacle and fired his rifle through the slits, regardless of the danger which confronted him. He then entered the blockhouse himself, dealt with the occupants, and enabled the advance to be continued. He was later badly wounded in the head, having acted throughout the operation with great gallantry and initiative.

KEWLEY, EDWARD RIGBY, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under intense shell and machine-gun fire he made a personal reconnaissance of the forward position held by his battalion, and returned to Brigade Headquarters to report the situation. He again went out to his forward posts and personally superintended the consolidation under heavy shell and machine-gun fire, behaving with the utmost coolness and gallantry through continual heavy fighting.

LANCE, EDWIN CHRISTOPHER, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Somersetshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was the only officer left of his battalion when the final objective was reached. Both flanks of his battalion were exposed, and they were almost surrounded by the enemy. Thereupon he skilfully withdrew his men from a difficult position to a strong one 200 yards in rear, checked the advance of the enemy, and held on under intense artillery fire until relieved two days later. The sound tactics, cool judgment, and the daring example which he set his men undoubtedly secured a very important position.

LEECH, WILLIAM FREDERICK, Temporary Second Lieut., General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out a number of valuable reconnaissances under difficult conditions, bringing back information which was invariably correct. When the situation was very obscure during an attack he correctly reported on it during the morning, and in doing so was wounded in the arm. In spite of this he went out again in the afternoon and was severely wounded.

LEES, DAVID, M.B., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He passed through an intense barrage in order to attend to the wounded who were lying exposed to heavy fire of every description. Single-handed and under heavy shelling, he dressed the wounds of an officer, a sergeant, and a private, and carried each of them in turn to a place of comparative safety. To do this he had to pass through the enemy's barrage no less than four times, but with complete disregard for his personal safety he went forward a fifth time to attend to others, inspiring all ranks by his own splendid example of fearlessness and devotion.

LE PREVOST, ALFRED PAUL HARRISON, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack and during the five following days, while holding his line under very adverse conditions and continuous shelling, by his own personality, fearlessness and cheerful example he kept up the spirits of his battalion. His battalion captured its objectives, reformed quickly, and carried stores of all kinds to the forward dumps, and then without any rest held the line until relieved. The success of the battalion was mainly due to his able leadership.

LEVVEY, JOSEPH HENRY, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In the assembly for the attack by good judgment he almost entirely avoided casualties. He launched his battalion into the attack with ability, and commanded it throughout the action with judgment, coolness and gallantry. He gained all his objectives, and personally supervised the consolidation of the captured position. Whilst holding the captured position during the following days under continuous heavy artillery fire he displayed coolness, courage and determination, and by his cheerfulness he kept those under him in good heart. His personal example was an incentive to all, and he organized and trained his battalion for the attack with great ability.

LLOYD, ERNEST GUY RICHARDS, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When commanding a supporting company during an attack he was suddenly ordered to take over command of the two assaulting companies—an extremely difficult task owing to the extension and uncertainty of our line, which ran through a wood. By his personal example and exceptional ability he succeeded in thoroughly organizing the two front lines and establishing a continuous line of posts through the wood. Throughout the action he maintained connection with his front and flanks, and, in spite of the very heavy casualties in the two companies under his command, carried out a successful operation, with only two young officers (one of them wounded) to assist him. His coolness and masterly dealing with a difficult situation deserve the greatest praise.

LOWCOCK, REGINALD JOHN, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out artillery observation with great skill and success, in spite of very unfavourable weather and strong hostile opposition. On one occasion, although attacked by five hostile machines, he carried on with his work until his machine was riddled with bullets and he was wounded in the leg. He then succeeded in landing in safety, having destroyed one of the hostile machines. He has also done some exceptionally fine contact patrol work.

LYCETT, TIMOTHY, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While advancing to its point of deployment for an attack on the final objective his battalion suffered such severe casualties from machine-gun fire that he found himself in command. He at once led them forward, captured the final objective, and by his promptness and skill in handling his reserve was able to stop a determined hostile counter-attack which had forced back his left flank. Throughout the ensuing three days his cheerful and vigorous personality inspired all under his command with confidence.

MACLEAN, IVAN CLARKSON, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in clearing the wounded. He took his stretcher-bearers well in advance of our forward positions and behaved with the most exemplary courage and devotion throughout, sparing no efforts to collect the wounded men. After his battalion was relieved he continued to work under the heaviest fire for another twenty-four hours, and was severely wounded on his way back after all the cases had been cleared. He set a splendid example of energy and contempt of danger.

MACROBERTS, NOEL DE PUTRON, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded early in the day, he gallantly led his company under heavy shell and machine-gun fire to its objective—a village—which he captured, together with over 200 prisoners, four field guns and two machine guns. He then remained at duty in spite of his wounds, until he had reorganized his company and consolidated his position, greatly inspiring all ranks by his magnificent courage and gallantry.

MAIR, BRODIE VALENTINE, M.C., Capt., Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He superintended the forming up of his brigade in the open all through the night under considerable shell fire, and on the following day, immediately the objective had been captured, he made a very skilful reconnaissance, by which he was able to clear up the dispositions of the units on their final objectives.

MAITLAND, WILLIAM BARCLAY, Second Lieut., Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under very trying circumstances. When his company was held up by a machine gun he went forward alone, jumping from shell hole to shell hole until he was within a few feet, when he ran forward, killed the whole gun team and captured the gun single-handed.

MARTIN, BERNARD WILLIAM JOHN HANKINS, Second Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battery was very heavily shelled, two of the guns being destroyed, two damaged and two buried. When the bombardment slackened he took command, the battery commander having been wounded, and had the two buried guns dug out and brought into action. Later, when the battery was in action during an attack and one of his two remaining guns was damaged by an enemy shell, he carried out his complete programme by doubling the rate of fire from the only remaining gun. He showed great courage and leadership, and set a splendid example of devotion to duty to his men.

MARTIN, EDWARD CUTHBERT DE RENZY, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Previous to an assault, in spite of considerable enemy shelling, he had commanded his battalion with such good judgment and determination that on the morning of the assault they had driven strong points into the enemy's line in several places. The result of this was that the left flank of the brigade was thoroughly protected by rifle, machine and Lewis-gun fire during the assault. He successfully and promptly dealt with all enemy attempts to counter-attack, and on one occasion it was due to his initiative that an enemy battalion was caught whilst deploying for an assault, and wiped out. The success of the whole operation was largely due to his skilful leadership.

MAY, HARRY, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut. and Acting Capt.), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in connection with gas operations with Stokes mortars. He discharged a record number of shells against the enemy position, which involved exceptional hard work under most unfavourable conditions owing to the exposed nature of his gun position. He reconnoitred positions and organized and superintended carrying parties with the greatest skill and energy, by his personal leadership setting a splendid example to all ranks.

McCARTHY-O'LEARY, HEFFERNAN WILLIAM DENIS, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a heavy hostile counter-attack, which had driven in his advance post and recaptured part of the position, he went forward with one runner, rallied his men and led them forward again, driving the enemy back and restoring the situation. He remained encouraging his men until he was himself severely wounded half an hour later, but he did not leave the field until he had reported the situation to his brigadier.

MONTGOMERY-SMITH, EDWIN CHARLES, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in the supervision of the arrangements for the evacuation of the wounded. By a systematic study of the ground, clever selection of aid and relay posts and routes, he evacuated a large number of casualties during the operations. He worked untiringly, regardless of his personal safety, visiting all the advanced aid posts. His work was invaluable.

NORTH, PERS WILLIAM, Lieut.-Colonel, Reserve of Officers, Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men to the attack with utter disregard of danger under heavy fire, and the dash with which his battalion went forward in the attack and secured a considerable number of prisoners was largely due to his fine personal example. He was shortly afterwards severely wounded in the chest and back.

ORR, JOHN BOYD, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He worked unceasingly for forty-eight hours without an aid post, and under an almost continuous barrage, attending to the wounded of three units of his brigade. He found time to visit the front line twice and attended to numerous cases under machine-gun and shell fire, and, although twice buried and rendered unconscious for two or three hours, he remained at duty until his brigade was relieved, displaying devotion and personal courage which were worthy of the highest praise. His gallant conduct has been brought to notice on more than one occasion by officers commanding units to whose wounded he had attended.

PALLANT, HUBERT ARNOLD, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Hearing that a number of men belonging to another battalion were on the enemy bank of a river, and unable to cross it owing to the bridge being destroyed, and to their being apparently unable to swim, he hurried to the scene, swam the river fully clothed, and induced the men to enter the water and cross with the aid of a rope. The most exhausted one he personally conveyed across. During this time the enemy were continually shelling both the river and the banks. He set a splendid example of energy and devotion to duty.

PEGLER, SIDNEY JAMES, Temporary Second Lieut., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack in leading bombing parties and consolidating a line of shell holes under heavy machine-gun fire and sniping. He on two occasions displayed the utmost fearlessness in personally attacking hostile bombing parties which were attempting to force their way past his flank, and driving them back with Lewis gun and bombs. His dash and initiative were magnificent, and it was chiefly owing to his example that all the objectives gained were held.

PENNEL, RICHARD, Lieut. (Temporary Major), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a critical moment when a hostile counter-attack had driven our troops back in a village. With the greatest promptitude and presence of mind he burnt all his papers, turned out his headquarters, and advanced under machine-gun and rifle fire, picking up all the stray men he met. He then passed down the whole of the brigade front, giving orders to his own battalion and another for an immediate counter-attack, during which he displayed great courage and coolness, and it was due to his gallant conduct that the counter-attack was successful.

PETRIE, DAVID PARKER, Lieut., Scottish Rifles, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company gallantly to the attack, and when held up by machine-gun fire and snipers he quickly rallied his men and personally led a vigorous assault on the enemy's position. He accounted for more than one of the enemy himself, captured a machine gun and a number of the enemy, after which he led what remained of his company to the next objective under very heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, in spite of which he captured another machine gun and the entire team. Later in the day, by his energy and forethought, he repulsed several hostile counter-attacks, and throughout the operation his coolness and gallantry set a splendid example to his men.

POTTER, COLIN KYNASTON, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion in an attack, captured all his objectives, and personally directed the consolidation of a position, which he held against hostile counter-attacks even after the division on his right had given way. This was largely due to his excellent dispositions and his very gallant personal example.

PRIESTMAN, JOHN HEDLEY THORNTON, Capt., Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in making a valuable and daring reconnaissance under very heavy shell fire, during which he was wounded. His information was so precise and accurate that it enabled our barrage to break up hostile counter-attacks. A fortnight later, he made a similar reconnaissance in the same area with equally good results, and, in addition, finding the situation critical on our left flank, he ordered up a battalion on his own initiative in support, and thus enabled the line to be restored.

ROBINSON, ALBERT CHARLES HENRY, Temporary Second Lieut., attached Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in an advance over difficult ground, and although checked by very heavy gun fire from a concrete fort, succeeded in capturing the fort and gaining his objective. He successfully consolidated and held the second objective line through a very trying period of 36 hours, during which his men were continuously and heavily shelled and fired at from aeroplanes. Throughout the whole operation he displayed the utmost courage and the finest leadership and devotion to duty.

SARGEANT, PERCY RICHARD, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battery was very heavily shelled for three days, in the course of which he continually went about exposed to heavy fire, seeing to the safety of his men, with utter disregard of danger. His fearlessness and calm disregard of his own safety set the finest possible example to the officers and men of the battery.

SHARLAND, ALAN ABBOTT, Capt. (Temporary Major) (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under his successful handling his battalion captured and held its objective in spite of heavy counter-attacks, and of the fact that its right flank was for some time exposed to very heavy machine-gun fire. He visited the position gained, and at once organized a defensive flank.

SHERBROOKE, ROBERT LOWE, Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under his skilful handling his battalion captured and held all its objectives though repeatedly counter-attacked. He visited the position under heavy machine-gun and shell fire, and although slightly gassed before the action he remained with his battalion throughout. The dash of his men in the attack, and their tenacity in holding their position, were very largely due to his personal influence and training.

SLADE, HAROLD ARTHUR, M.C., Temporary Capt., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during two days' exceptionally heavy fighting, which included the forcing of a river. He dug in with his company under heavy machine-gun fire, and maintained his position in spite of a determined hostile counter-attack. He held his ground until the morning of the second day, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy, and afterwards, when fresh troops had passed through his line, successfully accomplished the task of mopping up a strong point with only one casualty, killing and capturing many of the enemy. Throughout these operations he sent back valuable information to Headquarters, and displayed courage and coolness of the very highest order.

STEWART, ALEXANDER JOHN, Capt., Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company in an attack in which he displayed great fearlessness and exceptional skill. He moved up through heavy shelling and hostile machine-gun fire and seized his objective. He then suddenly found himself not only exposed to very severe and accurate machine-gun and sniper fire from three sides, but with his platoon commanders wounded. By his complete grasp of the situation, cool and intrepid behaviour, and magnificent personal example of utter disregard of danger, he inspired his men with complete confidence, and undoubtedly saved a very critical situation.

STRANGE, JOHN STANLEY, M.C., Temporary Capt., Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having led his company with great ability and determination to its final objective, he took over command of the front line, and held it for three days until relieved. He personally reconnoitred his whole front, and sent back very valuable information, setting a very fine example throughout to all ranks under most trying circumstances.

SUTHERLAND, THOMAS DOUGLAS, M.C., Temporary Capt., Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great gallantry in the attack, but on reaching his objective found his flank exposed owing to the troops on his right having been unable to advance. He immediately went back, rallied a company which had lost heavily in officers and senior N.C.O.'s, and led them forward to their objective. He then organized a defensive flank and made the position secure. He showed the greatest courage and leadership, and it was entirely owing to his initiative and determination that the advance of his battalion was successfully carried out.

SUTTON, BESTINE ENTWISLE, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Yeomanry and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On very many occasions he carried out extensive and valuable reconnaissances and contact patrols at low altitudes, attacking infantry and transport with his machine gun and taking photographs which proved of the greatest value in subsequent operations. By his energy, skill, and courage he set a magnificent example to his squadron.

SYMON, JAMES ALEXANDER, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Cameron Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When commanding his company in the reserve line, he led them out of their trenches and charged a successful hostile counter-attack, driving the enemy back and establishing our original front line. By his coolness and absolute disregard of personal danger, he saved the situation, and, afterwards finding that we were suffering from the fire of snipers, went out himself and shot several of the enemy before he was finally wounded.

THOMAS, ALAN ERNEST WENTWORTH, Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.) Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded, he led his company to its objective with great skill and success; afterwards when the troops on his right and left had withdrawn, he held his ground with only six men, two of whom were shortly afterwards wounded. He, however, held on for seventeen hours, and saved the situation, for it was entirely due to his pluck and determination that the attack in the evening was successfully carried out. He set a splendid example of courage and resource in a very trying position.

THOMAS, GWILYM IVOR, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battery was being relieved the position was shelled by an intense bombardment, which lasted for over two hours and caused many casualties in both batteries. The pits and ammunition of one section caught fire, and he succeeded in extinguishing this. Later, the telephone pit and mess shelter were wrecked, and he immediately led the way to the rescue of wounded men inside. The camouflage nets of three more guns were then set alight, and the ammunition began to catch fire. This he also saved by tearing down the burning camouflage and smothering the smouldering ammunition, some of which had already begun to explode. Not until all the fires had been extinguished, and he had seen every man, both wounded and unwounded, clear of the position, did he seek cover for himself. His great gallantry and exceptional coolness throughout the whole of this time were worthy of the highest praise.

TRELOAR, GEORGE DEVINE, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Coldstream Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on two successive occasions. He led his company across a canal under very heavy barrage, and, finding the only available bridge was broken, he personally secured a mat from the original line, and laid it down for his company to cross, thereby saving great congestion and countless lives. Later, when the regiment on his left was held up by machine gun-fire, he immediately grasped the situation, and pressed forward with another company, finally capturing the position. By his great presence of mind and personal example of gallantry and cheerfulness he kept his company going under the most adverse circumstances.

TYSON, ERIC JAMES, M.C., Temporary Major, General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions. He has displayed the utmost fearlessness in carrying out photographic reconnaissances and artillery registration at extremely low altitudes, being continually under fire, but invariably doing excellent work and obtaining most valuable information by his great skill and daring.

WARMAN, CLIVE WILSON, M.C., Second Lieut., General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During two days, whilst operating under very difficult conditions in high wind and against strong hostile opposition, he destroyed three enemy machines and a balloon. He displayed the greatest dash and fearlessness in attacking an enemy aerodrome, and on one occasion, when separated from his patrol, and surrounded by 20 hostile machines, he fought his way through, although his machine gun was useless, by attacking them with his "Very" pistol; eventually regaining his own aerodrome with his machine much shot about. His wonderful coolness and courage have on all occasions been beyond praise.

WATKINS, GWILYM DAVID, Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When cries for help were heard coming from a tank which had been abandoned in an isolated position in the outpost line, he went 200 yards through a heavy barrage and rescued a badly-wounded man from the tank. He dressed his wounds and carried him under heavy fire towards safety, until, being completely exhausted, he was compelled to put the man in a shell-hole and go for assistance. He returned with another officer, and, still under heavy fire, brought the man to safety. Throughout six days he displayed the same indomitable courage and extraordinary devotion to duty, constantly going into the open tending the wounded day and night. He undoubtedly saved many lives.

WATSON, CAMPBELL N., Temporary Major, Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at a critical moment. Whilst commanding his battalion in an advance, he suddenly came under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, but he promptly deployed, attacked the enemy, and gained possession of a commanding position. This he not only held gallantly for four days, but was indefatigable in his endeavours to improve upon his success, and his courage and cheerful bearing had a marked effect in enabling his men to hold their own under most adverse weather conditions and continuous hostile shelling.

WHALLEY, PERCY ROGER, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took charge of a difficult and dangerous situation which had arisen owing to the right flanks of his division being exposed. Quickly grasping the state of affairs, he made excellent dispositions, and refused reinforcements, although they were offered to him, acting with such determination and good judgment that from the moment he took over this sector there was never any doubt that the position would be maintained.

WHEAL, SAMUEL, Second Lieut., East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led the first wave of the attack to its objective, which he captured and cleared, and then led his men forward and captured an enemy strong point, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. Later, when he observed a party of the enemy forming up for an attack on his front, he immediately organized a party and skilfully outflanked the enemy, capturing 35 prisoners. Throughout the operations he led his platoon with the greatest gallantry and dash.

WHITE, JOHN DONALD, Capt., Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men with great gallantry, and consolidated his position with conspicuous ability. When the troops on his flanks were compelled to withdraw, leaving his position isolated and untenable, he nevertheless held on for a considerable time, and when forced to withdraw conducted the retirement with great coolness. He showed utter disregard of danger, continually moving about under heavy shell fire, encouraging and directing his men.

WILLIAMS, JESSE, Temporary Major, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under exceptionally trying conditions. When a counter-attack was expected he took out a patrol and established the fact that there was no attack being made. He then rallied his men and did much to restore the situation by his fine personal example.

WILSON, PERCY NORTON WHITESTONE, M.C., Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. It was largely due to his skill in forming up his brigade for an attack that the movement was successfully accomplished, in spite of darkness, rain and swampy ground, rendered nearly impassable by shell-holes. After the attack had proved successful he made a thorough and long personal reconnaissance of the captured line under constant and heavy shell fire, and brought back very valuable information to his brigadier.

YOUNG, KENNETH, Temporary Second Lieut., Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under very trying circumstances. He took over command of his battalion on his own initiative when the commanding officer and adjutant were wounded, quickly grasped the situation, and continued to handle the battalion with such success that three counter-attacks were driven off. It was largely due to his energy and resource that the battalion was able to maintain its position, as its right wing was exposed to the enemy's machine-gun fire.

CANADIAN FORCE.

McKINERY, JOHN WILLIAM HERBERT, Lieut.-Colonel, Labour Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a very heavy hostile bombardment of the light railway system for which he was responsible. He repeatedly made journeys over the whole of the shelled area, organizing repairs and leading working parties into position. His fine example of fearlessness and energy kept the men together and was instrumental in the work being rapidly and successfully carried out.

PATERSON, ROBERT WALTER, Lieut.-Colonel, Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his daring reconnaissances and careful organization he ensured the success of a raid against four lines of enemy defences. He personally reconnoitred the point of attack with an utter disregard of his personal safety.

RALSTON, JAMES LAYTON, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations which included the capture of a village. He displayed untiring energy and great personal courage throughout, as well as a very high order of military skill, in supervising the attack and consolidating captured positions, and although wounded and ordered off the field he returned to the line after his wound was dressed, knowing that his battalion was badly depleted of officers. He set a splendid example of pluck and devotion to duty.

POLLARD, WILLIAM FAULKNER, R.D., Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), Royal Naval Reserve. In recognition of their services in mine-sweeping operations abroad during the period June, 1916, to June, 1917.

"Honours for the Royal Naval Air Service.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to Officers of the Royal Naval Air Service. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

BOWHILL, FREDERICK WILLIAM, Wing Commander, R.N. In recognition of his invaluable services as Commanding Officer of the Royal Naval Air Service, employed in connection with military operations in East Africa. It is due to his experience and unceasing labour that his small unit of the Royal Naval Air Service has been of such assistance to the military operations. He has instilled a high sense of discipline into those under his orders.

"Honours to the Mercantile Marine.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of honours to the undermentioned Officer of the British Mercantile Marine in recognition of zeal and devotion to duty shown in carrying on the trade of the country during the war. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

READY, JOHN MILNER, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Berkshire Regt., Special Reserve.
SALKELD, HAROLD YORKE, Major, Cavalry, Indian Army.

London Gazette, 7 March, 1918.—" War Office, 7 March, 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette dated 18 Oct. 1917, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

ORMOND, DANIEL MAWAT, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion with exceptional ability and success during two days of the fiercest and most bitter fighting ever experienced by his brigade. In spite of the determined resistance by superior numbers of the best troops of the enemy, he captured all his objectives and maintained the organization of his battalion. Although 60 per cent. of his attacking force became casualties, it did not deter him from attacking and routing a hostile force of more than three times their number. During this operation 20 machine guns were captured. Lieut.-Colonel Ormond also displayed the greatest ability and gallantry in repulsing with the remains of his gallant battalion several determined hostile counter-attacks, during which very heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy. No praise can be too great for the sound judgment and great skill with which he handled his battalion. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

BENSON, CONSTANTINE EVELYN, Second Lieut., Grenadier Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On his own initiative he pushed forward with a small patrol to make a reconnaissance, with the intention of locating the actual line held by the enemy. In doing so, he came under heavy fire from the enemy machine guns, and some of his party were killed. Realizing the great importance of immediately securing certain high ground which had been temporarily evacuated by the enemy, he went back, despite the heavy machine-gun fire, and brought up his platoon to a point where a commanding position was occupied and consolidated. By his quick appreciation of the situation, and his own personal disregard of all danger, a position of considerable tactical importance was secured.

CAMERON, JAMES FREDERICK CAMPBELL, M.C., Temporary Lieut., Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack on the enemy lines all the company officers became casualties. He went out from headquarters, collected troops, and organized a line of defence, in spite of close-range sniping, which eventually held back an enemy counter-attack. He remained at this post until the battalion was relieved.

CRAIG, ARCHIBALD HAY, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On three different occasions he went to the forward posts and steadied the men and organized the line after heavy casualties and in full view of the snipers. On the third occasion the men were threatening to come back on part of the line. He led them back to their positions and thus secured the line. It was due to his efforts that a serious situation was averted.

DE MONTMORENOY, HERVEY FRANCIS, Temporary Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in rallying his men after his battery had been heavily shelled for seven hours and his guns buried, and in getting three into action again. His men were driven back from the guns several times; but he worked himself to restore confidence. During this time he was practically crippled, having seriously twisted his knee by falling into a shell-hole.

GILL, JOHN HENRY, Temporary Major, West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. After being ordered to form a block, on his own initiative he collected scattered men and worked forward up the trench. On finding a block lightly held, he consolidated it and formed two blocks behind, taking charge of the position until ordered to retire. His personal courage helped greatly to rally the men and to stop the further advance of the enemy at a time when the situation was critical, and in spite of the fact that he himself was wounded.

HARDY, THE REV. THEODORE BAYLEY, Army Chaplains' Department. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in volunteering to go with a rescue party for some men who had been left stuck in the mud the previous night between the enemy's outpost line and our own. All the men except one were brought in. He then organized a party for the rescue of this man, and remained with it all night, though under rifle fire at close range, which killed one of the party. With his left arm in splints, owing to a broken wrist, and under the worst weather conditions, he crawled out with patrols to within seventy yards of the enemy and remained with wounded men under heavy fire.

KENNEDY, ARTHUR JULIUS RANN, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a party salvaging ammunition from a vacated gun position. The position was heavily shelled, and one shell fell near a pit containing a large number of rounds of ammunition, setting fire to the pit. He immediately ran to the pit, which was a sheet of flame by the time he arrived. After a great deal of work by this officer and a party under his supervision the fire was extinguished and the ammunition saved.

The position was being shelled continuously during this time. It was entirely due to his prompt and energetic action that the ammunition was saved, and he set a magnificent example of devotion to duty.

MINET, ERNEST CHARLES TEMPLE, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his company. At a most critical period, when the attack was held up, he took charge of all the troops in the vicinity and established a defensive flank. He rushed up two of his guns into a strong point and dispersed enemy parties as they were forming for attack. He moved about the front line all day controlling fire, encouraging all ranks to greater efforts. His great coolness and courage were an example to all ranks.

MOBERLY, WALTER HAMILTON, Second Lieut., Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In an advance against enemy positions three companies reached their objectives and consolidated. The commanders of all three companies were killed, and he thereupon assumed command of the advanced line. The position was extremely difficult, as the troops on both flanks had failed to reach their objectives, and the enemy were consequently holding positions at and slightly behind his flanks. Communication with battalion headquarters failed, as runners were unable to get through the machine-gun and snipers' fire from the front and flanks. In these circumstances this officer determined to hold on to the advanced line at all costs. He took steps to defend his flanks, and organized an effective resistance to counter-attacks. By his prompt and decisive action and complete disregard of danger he inspired his men with confidence; and if it had not been for this plucky decision and courageous determination on his part the whole of the objectives gained would have had to be abandoned.

MUIR, JOHN BALDERSTONE, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. When the position became one of considerable danger he promptly and personally dealt with the emergency, thus enabling the ground gained to be held and the line maintained. He personally organized the line, and by his example and energy infused such spirit into the defence that a very difficult and dangerous situation was saved. Had it not been for his daring and gallantry it is doubtful if his flank could have been maintained in its position, and subsequent operations would have been rendered extremely difficult.

PARR, VICTOR HENRY, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of an advanced battalion headquarters. On his way there he mopped up three machine guns and 50 prisoners. On the battalion being forced back, through both its flanks being exposed, he was responsible for its orderly retreat. Practically all the officers were killed, wounded, or missing, and the casualties by this time were about 60 per cent. He himself was wounded, but by his resolute action the advance of the enemy was delayed and the troops in rear given time to take up covering positions.

REDMOND, WILLIAM ARCHER, Capt., Irish Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a company holding a line of posts. When, following a heavy barrage, the enemy attacked in strength and a bomb fell in his post, knocking out half the occupants, he immediately led the survivors out and drove the enemy back, which enabled him to establish a new defensive line and to hold it against repeated attacks until day broke.

STORRIE, WILLIAM, Second Lieut., Highland Light Infantry, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a reconnoitring patrol. Under heavy fire he went forward in daylight and located two enemy posts and returned to his own lines. He again went out with two men at night and attacked an enemy post of twelve men. Again at daylight he entered an enemy tunnel, blew it up, causing serious damage. His courage, resource and daring are beyond all praise.

VIVIAN, THE HONOURABLE ODO RICHARD, M.V.O., Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his battalion. At a most critical period of an attack he rallied his men and led an advance on an enemy strong-point, which was taken and held. He organized the defence of the ground gained, exposing himself under heavy fire for some hours, with an utter disregard of personal safety. Had it not been for his initiative at a difficult time no ground would have been gained at this point.

WENYON, HERBERT JOHN, Temporary Capt., Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He collected a party, and led them through heavy shell fire in a counter-attack upon one of our posts which had been captured by the enemy, and although the position was exceptionally strong, it was retaken at the first attempt. This was entirely due to Capt. Wenyon's prompt action and the determined energy which he displayed at a critical moment.

WETHERALL, HARRY EDWARD DE ROBILIARD, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. A strong-point held out, and the enemy succeeded in breaking our line and endangering the advance. He immediately organized two attacks on this point, which he captured, thus saving the situation and enabling the line to be straightened and advanced. Next day this point was again seized by the enemy, who were promptly ejected by another attack organized by this officer. By his promptitude and ability many lives were saved and the general situation re-established.

WILSON, GAVIN LAURIE, M.C., Temporary Major, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. The officers having become casualties, and his men held up by machine-gun fire during an advance, he at once set out from headquarters and personally reorganized his front during a critical time as the enemy were taking the offensive.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BAILEY, CHARLES EDWARD, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment, when an attack was held up by strong enemy posts, he brought up reinforcements and attacked under heavy machine-gun fire, which resulted in heavy casualties to his party. It was only by the skilful leadership and determination of this officer that the enemy strong points were captured, a matter of vital importance in order to hold the line which was being consolidated. He maintained the position with complete success against no less than six counter-attacks, during which he accounted for 17 of the enemy himself.

BROWN, WALTER RICHARD, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when temporarily in command of his battalion. He made preparations for attack with great thoroughness. During the attack he handled his battalion with marked ability. By his leadership and coolness in trying circumstances he repelled several counter-attacks, with great loss to the enemy. His conduct throughout the whole operations was most inspiring.

BURNHAM, SYDNEY SMITH, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Previous to an attack he displayed exceptional initiative and forethought in personally supervising the placing of observation posts in the forward area, thus ensuring that at no time during the battle was there any lack of communication from front to rear. On at least two occasions he made daring personal reconnaissances under very heavy machine-gun and shell fire, and brought back very valuable information. His cheerfulness and coolness throughout this period were a wonderful example to the men in the front line.

COCKERAM, ALAN, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon in an attack. On reaching his objective he came under heavy fire from a machine gun. Taking two men with him, he immediately rushed forward, personally killed the gun crew, and then, noticing that a booby trap was attached to the gun, he threw it backwards, on which the trap exploded. He then brought in the gun. During this operation he was wounded, but refused to leave his platoon, and later in the day, while on a reconnaissance with two N.C.O.'s, he met a party of the enemy, all of whom were killed. On the following morning this officer led his platoon in the open against a strong enemy counter-attack, and, after heavy hand-to-hand fighting, in which he personally accounted for several of the enemy, and was severely wounded, the attack was repulsed. His fearlessness throughout was most marked.

GILSON, WILLIAM FORBES, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great initiative and forethought in organizing and preparing his battalion for an assault, and after the final objective had been reached, made a personal reconnaissance of the forward area and brought back very valuable information. Throughout the whole operation he displayed gallantry and devotion to duty of a high order.

JONES, LOUIS ELGIN, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his battalion in an attack, and in resisting numerous counter-attacks made by the enemy, in which he displayed marked skill and initiative. Upon one occasion, the enemy having forced an entrance into his position, he made a well-organized counter-attack, which was entirely successful and resulted in regaining all the lost ground, capturing a considerable number of prisoners, and killing a great many of the enemy. Throughout the operations this officer displayed unusual coolness and sound judgment in critical conditions and was a splendid personal example to all ranks.

McEACHERN, NORMAN ANGUS, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his platoon. He captured all the objectives allotted to him. When his company commander was severely wounded he took control of the situation, and the following day led his company on the right flank of the battalion and captured the objective. Finding that the unit on the right had not come up, he personally placed a post on the extreme point of the captured area. Three times this post was annihilated with the exception of one man. On each occasion he personally re-established it. Though he had only six men left on the right flank, he beat off two counter-attacks. He also carried out two most daring reconnaissances in view of the enemy.

MILLER, ALBERT PETER, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On his battalion's objective being gained this officer took charge, organized, and garrisoned the front and support lines. On two occasions the enemy counter-attacked, driving our men out and occupying the front line. In both cases this officer rallied the men and personally led them against the enemy, driving them back and re-establishing the positions, himself accounting for a number of the enemy with his revolver. His coolness and initiative inspired his men with confidence, and under his direction they charged the enemy with much enthusiasm and splendid spirit. This officer's example has at all times been most outstanding.

MILLS, ARTHUR SAMUEL, Lieut. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great distinction during five days' heavy fighting, gaining all his objectives and making several daring personal reconnaissances. His reports on the situation were clear and concise, and it was due to his inspiring personal example that no less than six determined counter-attacks were successfully repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy in the course of one day.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

DURHAM, CORNEY GEORGE, Major, South African Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. At a time when the unit on his right had been forced to give ground owing to a strong counter-attack, he rallied them, and with the reserves of his battalion ordered a bayonet charge, which resulted in the capture of a machine gun and the inflicting of heavy casualties on the enemy.

"Honours for the Royal Naval Air Service.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to Officers of the Royal Naval Air Service. To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

MOON, EDWIN ROWLAND, D.S.O., Squadron Commander, Royal Naval Air Service. In recognition of the resource and gallantry displayed by him in the following circumstances: On 6 Jan. 1917, whilst on a reconnaissance flight over the Ruffig Delta with Commander The Honourable Richard O. B. Bridgeman, D.S.O., R.N., as observer, he was obliged by engine trouble to descend in one of the creeks, where it became necessary to destroy the seaplane to avoid the possibility of its being captured. For three whole days the two officers wandered about the delta in their efforts to avoid capture and to rejoin their ship. During this time they had little or nothing to eat, and were continually obliged to swim across the creeks, the bush on the banks being impenetrable. On the morning of 7 Jan. they constructed a raft of three spars and some latticed window-frames. After paddling and drifting on this for the whole of 7 and 8 Jan., they were finally carried out to sea on the morning of the 9th, when Commander Bridgeman, who was not a strong swimmer, died of exhaustion and exposure. In the late afternoon Flight Commander Moon managed to reach the shore, and was taken prisoner by the Germans. He was released from captivity on 21 Nov. 1917. He displayed the greatest gallantry in attempting to save the life of his companion.

"Honours for Miscellaneous Services.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following decoration to the undermentioned Officer. For services with the Royal Naval Transport Service in France. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

WARDEN, ST. LEGER STANLEY, Commander R.N.

London Gazette, 18 March, 1918.—"War Office, 18 March, 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette dated 27 Oct. 1917, the following are the statements of services for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

DAVIDSON, NORMAN RANDALL, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great courage and determination in superintending the preparation of battery positions. He was constantly under fire, and the success of the undertaking was largely due to his ability and fearlessness. He also carried out a very important reconnaissance.

PRESTON, THE HONOURABLE RICHARD MARTIN PETER, D.S.O., Major, Royal Horse Artillery (formerly Honourable Artillery Company). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When on reconnaissance duty, he, with a small patrol, was suddenly attacked and fired upon at close range by a superior number of hostile cavalry. On his patrol retiring, the horse of one of his troopers fell. He immediately rode back, placed the trooper on his own horse, and carried him one and a half miles to safety, being pursued the whole way. At the moment of this gallant rescue the enemy were less than 100 yards away.

ROBINSON, HARRY ABRAHAM, Temporary Major, D.S.O., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a heavy enemy counter-attack, when our line had been broken. With the help of a private, he drove off a party of the enemy who were attacking from the rear, killing several of them and thereby saving the situation. His extreme gallantry and coolness throughout the action were most inspiring.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

DAVIDSON, THOMAS, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battery with brilliant success during the operations under very difficult conditions. He went forward on a reconnaissance after an attack, and obtained information as to the dispositions of the infantry which was very valuable to his brigade, and established an observation post from which he was able to bring a withering fire on the enemy during several counter-attacks. He has continually shown great ability and fearless devotion to duty.

DERVICHE-JONES, ARTHUR DANIEL, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His skilful handling of his battalion resulted in all their objectives being captured and the ground held subsequently against repeated counter-attacks. The success of the battalion was mainly due to his total disregard of danger, splendid example and bold initiative.

DRUMGOLD, ARTHUR, Second Lieut., Royal West Kent Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led his company forward and gained his objectives in the face of heavy machine-gun and rifle fire from enemy strong points. With eight men he remained in an isolated position without food or water for thirty-six hours under very heavy artillery fire, holding his position until relieved. He set a splendid example throughout the engagement.

FOORD, ALEXANDER GUNNING, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in capturing all the battalion objectives and holding them against counter-attacks. His battalion had a most difficult task to perform, and it was due to his power of command that they so ably carried it out.

GRELLET, REGINALD CHARLES, Temporary Major, Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion through heavy shell fire, and assisted both in the capture and defence of the furthest objective. By the determination which he inspired at all times, and by his energy, coolness and judgment he raised the highest enthusiasm among his men. As a result of his organization the battalion within a short period took over and maintained with the highest spirit a new portion of the line under most difficult conditions.

HART, REGINALD SETON, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of the battalion, by his personal intervention at critical moments, by the energy and courage which he inspired, and by his excellent arrangements and determination the hostile defence was broken and the position captured and maintained against counter-attacks. Owing to his fine skill and organizing powers his battalion was after a short period ready to take over a portion of the line well beyond the original objective.

HENDERSON, GEORGE DUNNETT, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. When his commanding officer was wounded soon after the advance started he took command of the battalion and directed the operations with marked ability and resource. When the enemy counter-attacked he rallied his men, regained the position, and saved a critical situation. He was largely responsible for the success of the attack, and set a splendid example of coolness and resource in the face of great difficulties.

HUDSON, HERBERT HENRY, M.C., Temporary Major, West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of his battalion he displayed exceptional coolness, judgment and power of command. All ranks were inspired by his courageous example. He in person supervised the consolidation of the captured position under heavy shell and machine-gun fire, freely exposing himself to ensure that his men were well supplied and the position safe.

HUMPHREYS, HERBERT JOHN, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Highlanders. The enemy having broken into our protective tunnelling system, he at once grasped the situation and extended another branch of the tunnel into an old crater, thence driving a shaft down on to the captured tunnel. The mine was charged, tamped and fired, the resultant crater effectually blocking the tunnel at a good distance from our front line. Major Humphreys undertook and supervised this work throughout, carrying it out in the open within a few yards of the enemy front line, and by this action the enemy were undoubtedly prevented from blowing up a considerable portion of our front line.

LETHBRIDGE, FRANCIS WASHINGTON, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was successful in leading his battalion through heavy fire to attack, capture and hold the furthest objective. By his presence in the front line, both during the attack and subsequent counter-attacks, the position was maintained and consolidated. His fine example imbued all ranks with enthusiasm.

MASON, HAROLD LYALL, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The battery was continuously shelled, and several dug-outs and the telephone pit were blown up by direct hits. He remained in the open directing his fire and keeping his guns in action, and, in spite of heavy and continuous shelling, carried out his entire bombardment programme. He set a splendid example of coolness and determined leadership.

MILLWARD, WILLIAM COLSEY, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He assembled his battalion for the attack under artillery fire with only slight losses, and showed splendid leadership and ability in launching the attack. He personally superintended the consolidation of the captured position under heavy fire. Whilst holding the captured position during the two following days, under heavy artillery fire, he displayed great coolness, courage and determination, and, though badly shaken by the explosion of a shell, he remained in command until his battalion was relieved. His personal example was an incentive to all ranks.

RHYS-DAVIDS, ARTHUR PERCIVAL FOLEY, M.C., Second Lieut., Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in bringing down nine enemy aircraft in nine weeks. He is a magnificent fighter, never failing to locate enemy aircraft and invariably attacking regardless of the numbers against him.

RITSON, JOHN ANTHONY SYDNEY, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the attack was held up by machine-gun fire, he went forward to reconnoitre, reorganized the attack, and led it forward successfully. His initiative and gallantry saved what might have been a serious situation.

SALE, JOHN CARUTHERS, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He collected the wounded over a large tract of country exposed to heavy fire, and continuously went out by night in advance of the front line searching for the wounded, many of whom he brought back over most difficult ground and under heavy fire. His coolness and determination were a splendid example to his stretcher-bearers.

STEWART, PATRICK DOUGLAS, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great skill in an attack, capturing all the objectives and holding them against several counter-attacks. By his example and training he inspired all ranks in his battalion with a very fine fighting spirit.

CANADIAN FORCE.

COLLIER, ERNEST VICTOR, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a company in a raid on the enemy's position. He led his company with great skill and courage, and was the first to enter the enemy trenches. He was at once wounded by machine-gun fire, but continued to lead his men. When the objective had been reached and the enemy's works had been destroyed, the enemy launched a counter-attack, which he broke up completely. His splendid leadership contributed largely to the success of the enterprise.

KING, WILLIAM HOPE, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in a raid on the enemy's trenches. During the advance his Company Commander was killed and he was severely wounded, but he at once took command of the company, and led it into the enemy trench, where heavy fighting took place, and he was again wounded. He continued to direct his company until the entire enemy garrison had been killed or captured and the dug-outs and machine-gun emplacements destroyed. He then directed the withdrawal with the greatest skill and coolness, being the last to leave the enemy trenches, and carried in a wounded sergeant under heavy machine-gun fire. Before having his wounds attended to he personally made a report to his Commanding Officer. His magnificent courage and determination were an inspiring example to all ranks.

McCORMICK, JAMES, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men through a very heavy barrage to the attack. When held up by an enemy machine gun, he led a bombing party and captured the gun and killed the crew after a hand-to-hand fight lasting ten minutes. He finally reached the objective, where he took command of the remainder of another company, consolidated the position, and beat off four counter-attacks. His cheerfulness and courage inspired all his men.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

ELLER, JOSEPH HENRY PETER, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led his company under heavy fire with great skill and complete contempt of danger. When he came under heavy machine-gun fire from a pill-box, he bombed the enemy machine gunners and put the gun out of action single-handed, thus preventing many casualties. He captured and consolidated his objective. His courage and leadership contributed largely to the success of the operations.

ERREY, LEONARD GEORGE PRENTICE, M.C., Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After the objective had been captured, an enemy strong point caused many casualties. With four men he rushed through the barrage and attacked it under heavy machine-gun fire, and captured the position, with five officers, 60 other prisoners and two machine guns. His courageous and determined action undoubtedly saved many lives and restored a critical situation.

McCLEAN, FREDERICK STEPHEN, Major, Pioneer Batta. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while engaged on road construction. The road was subjected to concentrated shell fire every night while his party was at work, but he carried out the work successfully, showing great courage and determination as well as ability in handling the transport units bringing up material. On one occasion, when a building, against which a large quantity of 9.2 shells had been dumped, was set on fire by enemy shelling, he at once organized a party and prevented an explosion by removing all the shells under heavy fire.

London Gazette, 22 March, 1918.—"War Office, 22 March, 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette dated 19 Nov. 1917, the following are the statements of services for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

CORFE, ARTHUR CECIL, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), South African Defence Force and Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion during an attack. The assaulting troops in front were checked by heavy rifle fire from a strong point. He at once went forward, and by his inspiring presence and personal leadership reduced the strong point and killed the occupants. He was severely wounded, but continued to advance until exhausted from loss of blood. His splendid example was of the highest value at a critical moment.

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

CLARK, WILLIAM CHARLES, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When he was the only commanding officer remaining in action in his brigade, he personally led forward the leading waves of the brigade in a most gallant and fearless manner. His personal conduct, coolness and example during the most critical moments secured the eventual success of the attack after a very stubborn fight. During the two days following the attack he rendered most valuable service in organizing the defence of the captured position, though frequently exposed to very heavy shell fire.

CLEMONS, WILLIAM FLETCHER, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his brigade appeared likely to be held up in an attack owing to hostile machine-gun fire, he proceeded to the front of the attack, and, rallying the leading troops, he led them successfully to their objectives. By his personal example and contempt of danger he instilled new energy into the attack during a very critical period.

JARVIS, TALBOT McLEAVY, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, King's Royal Rifle Corps (formerly Royal West Surrey Regt.). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The enemy opened a very heavy machine-gun fire on his battalion as it was launching its assault. He rallied his men and led them successfully to the attack, although wounded five times. By his gallant conduct and determination he set a magnificent example to his men.

PENNEL, RICHARD, D.S.O., Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the attacking troops on the right of his battalion were driven back, he organized a party of officers and men from his headquarters, and by prompt action saved a most dangerous situation. During the whole five days his battalion was in action he was ill with malaria and suffering from the effects of an old wound, but refused to leave the field until his battalion was relieved.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

STEWART, JAMES CAMPBELL, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion was ordered to fill a gap in the line caused by an enemy attack, he personally reconnoitred the position in advance of his battalion under an intense enemy barrage. Though the enemy were pressing forward fresh troops and machine guns, by his courageous leadership and example he succeeded in filling the gap with his battalion, consolidated the position in spite of very heavy fire, and held it until relieved. The loyal support which he rendered to other battalions was in a great measure the cause of the success of the operations. On previous occasions he has been largely responsible for the success achieved by his brigade.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ARMSTRONG, GORDON WILSON, Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He worked in the open under continuous and heavy shell fire, and dressed and evacuated 117 stretcher cases from his aid post in 27 hours. Later on, while the shelling was very severe, he volunteered to go in aid of an officer and an orderly, carrying them to the aid post one after another on his back. Though wounded during the second journey, he refused to leave his post, remaining with his battalion until it was relieved.

BORROW, EDWARD, Temporary Major, Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. When the leading troops were suffering severe casualties, he kept the men together by his splendid leadership. Though twice wounded, he led his men to the final objective, and stuck to his post until he collapsed from the effects of his wounds. His courage and example were an inspiration to all ranks.

BOURNE, DENNIS KEMP, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of his battalion and led them with conspicuous ability and fearlessness to the attack on an enemy position, and captured and held it under very heavy machine-gun fire. His leadership and initiative while in command of the battalion were of the greatest value during a most critical period.

CHRISTIE, MURRAY INGLIS, Temporary Second Lieut., attached Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the leading battalion in an attack was held up by machine-gun fire, he led his company through them and captured the enemy position at a time when the success of the whole operation was endangered. Having captured the first objective, he led his men with great gallantry and determination to the second objective, which he captured and consolidated under heavy fire. His skillful leadership and determination at a critical moment were largely instrumental in securing the flank of the main operation.

DENNISS, CYRIL EDMUND BARTLEY, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He rallied and reformed parties of men who had been driven back under heavy shell fire. He then went to Brigade H.Q. to report on the situation, and returned with a relief to the front line. Though wounded by a shell, he went to Brigade H.Q. to report on the situation before having his wound attended to.

EVANS, IVOR THOMAS, M.C., Temporary Capt., South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in the attack with great determination under very heavy machine-gun fire. Though twice severely wounded, he consolidated and held the captured position. Afterwards he went personally to report on the situation under heavy fire, though suffering greatly from his wounds. His fearlessness and devotion to duty were beyond all praise.

GALLIE, OSCAR EUGENE, M.C., Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battery was very heavily shelled while in action, four guns were destroyed, and ammunition dumps were set on fire. He set the battery a splendid example by walking up and down in the open, encouraging the remaining detachments and putting out fires. Later, the battery was again heavily shelled when firing in reply to an S.O.S. signal, and he again behaved with the utmost gallantry, encouraging the men, putting out fires and keeping his guns firing. He set a magnificent example of courage and devotion to duty throughout the operations.

GAYER, AUBREY VIVIAN ARTHUR, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion in an attack on a strongly held nest of concrete posts. Though wounded during the operations, he continued to command his battalion with great ability for four days until it was relieved, and by his devotion to duty set a magnificent example to all ranks.

GRAY, EDWARD, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack he led his men with great initiative and determination on several enemy strong points, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy and killing ten himself. During the consolidation of the captured position and subsequent enemy counter-attacks he walked up and down his line under fire with absolute disregard of danger, and kept his commanding officer well in touch with the situation. On another occasion he personally led an attack against an enemy strong point, capturing a machine gun and ten prisoners. Throughout the operations he set a magnificent example of courage and devotion to duty.

HOWITT, THOMAS CECIL, Temporary Major, Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion during an enemy counter-attack. He displayed conspicuous ability in handling his battalion and in reorganizing the defences of the front line. He went forward through a very heavy enemy barrage to make a personal reconnaissance, and his coolness and decision contributed very largely to the defence of the line.

JACKSON, DENNIS BRIAN MARRIOTT, Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded early in the attack, after having his wound dressed he rejoined his company and assumed command of it, and also of another company. He led them forward to their final objective, and commenced consolidating. He also carried out a personal reconnaissance, in which he was responsible for knocking out an enemy post of six men.

HARDY, CLIVE, Capt., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led his company with great ability to the capture of their objectives. With two or three men he attacked a concrete machine-gun post, which he captured with two machine guns and some 30 prisoners. Though wounded, he remained at duty for 48 hours until his company was relieved. He showed the greatest initiative and determination.

MAXWELL, ALLEN, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of his battalion during an attack when his commanding officer became a casualty, and with great energy and determination led his men forward under heavy and continuous fire. Throughout the attack and during the enemy counter-attacks which followed the capture of the position he set a magnificent example to all by his courage and devotion to duty.

McKIMM, DAVID SIDNEY ALEXANDER, M.C., Temporary Capt., Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. In spite of an enemy counter-attack being then in full progress and certain of the assaulting troops being diverted to meet the new situation, he launched his attack with the greatest skill and determination. He directed the assaulting parties, and personally held up with Lewis gun fire enemy bombers who were checking the advance. As he advanced he collected a mixed detachment of men of various units and established a forward line, getting into touch with the troops on his right. He showed magnificent leadership, courage and resource throughout.

MOFFAT, FRANCIS JOHN CAMPBELL, Temporary Capt., Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He was in command of the right attacking company, which was opposed to a very powerful system of the enemy's defences. He led his company forward with the greatest courage and determination under heavy fire, but they were eventually held up by a machine-gun firing from a concrete emplacement. This he attacked single-handed, putting all the team out of action. He was badly wounded during this encounter, but, inspiring his men to further efforts, he led them several hundred yards further before he fell exhausted. His splendid courage and determination were undoubtedly responsible for the success of the attack.

MUNRO, ALEXANDER, Second Lieut., Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded early in the morning, and the only surviving officer in the company, he was mainly responsible for overcoming the very strong resistance of the enemy. He continued in command of the company, and was again wounded, but refused to leave until the situation was cleared.

PRIOR-WANDESFORDE, FERDINAND CHARLES RICHARD, Second Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battery was in action under heavy enemy shell fire a bomb store close to one of the guns exploded, killing the battery commander and causing other casualties. Seeing that the gun and its detachment were in great danger, he rushed to the bomb store and extinguished the fire at great personal risk. He then assumed command of the battery and kept it in action under very difficult conditions. On several previous occasions he behaved with great gallantry, and set a magnificent example to his men.

ROWBOTHAM, JAMES, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy counter-attack the front line became somewhat disorganized owing to a shortage of ammunition. He personally issued fresh supplies, and by his total disregard for safety and brilliant leadership succeeded in restoring a very difficult situation.

WALKER, FREDERICK WILLIAM, Second Lieut., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack he saw that the left of his battalion was being held up by an enemy strong point. He immediately collected six men, worked round the enemy's rear, and captured the strong point, together with two machine guns and 20 prisoners.

WARNER, THOMAS LOVELL, Temporary Major, Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of a company in the front line, and held his position with very small numbers against two enemy counter-attacks of great strength. In spite of his right flank being exposed, and in imminent danger of being turned, he remained in his position and inflicted great loss on the enemy, finally handing over his line intact. He set a brilliant example of courage and leadership.

WELCH, HAROLD ECHALEZ, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battalion was in immediate support to an attack which was held up by machine-gun fire from concrete posts, and it was found impossible to continue the advance without further artillery preparation. His battalion meanwhile was held up in a most exposed position. During the hours which elapsed before the advance could continue he moved about under fire regardless of danger, reconnoitring the situation, visiting his companies, and issuing orders. Owing to his efforts his battalion was eventually able to continue the advance successfully. His leadership and courage set a magnificent example to all ranks.

WILLIAMS, REES JOHN, Temporary Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack on an enemy position he took command of the whole front line. Regardless of danger, under the heaviest machine-gun fire, he passed from place to place collecting his men, organizing the defence, and clearing up the situation for his commanding officer. He went under heavy fire to report on the situation personally, and subsequently reorganized the whole line. His cheerful courage set an excellent example to all ranks.

CANADIAN FORCE.

THOMPSON, WILLIAM WINFRED, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great gallantry to the final objective in an attack, and on arriving there took command of the whole situation in the front line, consolidated the position with great skill, and sent in very valuable reports. On the following day, when the battalion attacked again, he was put in command of three companies, and led them with great success in the attack, though the troops on his right were held up, and his flank became badly exposed. He captured the position, which was held by an enemy force of more than double his numbers and 20 machine guns. He consolidated the position and held it with very few men against four determined counter-attacks by the enemy. His gallantry, coolness and exceptional handling of the situation were beyond all praise.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

APPLEYARD, SYDNEY VERE, Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He established a forward dressing station immediately in rear of the front line during an attack, and attended continuously to the wounded, frequently going out and dressing cases in the open under heavy shell fire. His dressing station was hit by a shell, and, though he was badly shaken, he continued his work with great determination and devotion to duty. His fearlessness was an inspiration to all, and was the means of saving many lives.

BACHTOLD, HENRY, M.C., Major, Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In daylight, under fire and under direct observation by the enemy, he marked out the assembly positions for the attack by his brigade. During the attack he personally reconnoitred the whole brigade position and organized the work of consolidation. His personal courage and his skill in grasping the situation were of the highest order.

FREEMAN, NEIL MCKENZIE, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when his battalion was attacked by the enemy after a preliminary bombardment of great intensity. Though his right flank was exposed by the enemy attack, he held his position with the greatest determination and repulsed the enemy, inflicting heavy casualties. When reinforcements arrived he personally directed their dispositions under a very heavy enemy barrage, and continued to send clear and encouraging reports upon the situation. He was able eventually to cover the gap on his flank and to consolidate the position. On a subsequent occasion he rendered great assistance in supporting an attack and in consolidating a captured position. His courage and devotion to duty were beyond all praise.

JOHNSTON, WILLIAM WALLACE STEWART, M.C., Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While the enemy were shelling very heavily the positions where assaulting troops were assembled he went out into the open with an absolute disregard of personal safety and attended to the wounded where they lay. After the attack was launched he continued to work for several hours under a very heavy enemy barrage until severely wounded. On many previous occasions his fearlessness and devotion to duty while acting as regimental M.O. have been most conspicuous.

MARSHALL, NORMAN, M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When ordered to fill a gap in the line caused by an enemy attack he personally led his battalion through a heavy enemy barrage to its position. He rendered valuable service in arranging the assembly positions for two other battalions which were ordered to join in an attack at very short notice, and in guiding those battalions under fire to their positions with only two casualties. During the attack, when the troops on the right of the brigade were held up, the flank of the brigade seemed likely to become exposed, but by skilful dispositions he succeeded in keeping this flank covered as the advance progressed and consolidated the position under heavy fire. He subsequently led his battalion to the capture of an enemy position of great tactical importance, and afterwards captured several enemy concrete posts with a number of prisoners. His fine leadership and gallantry were largely responsible for the success of the operations.

MASON, CHARLES CONWAY, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out a successful attack on an enemy position with great skill, although the plan of operations had to be altered at very short notice. Though blown up and severely shaken during the attack, he continued in command and consolidated the position, capturing ten machine guns and inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. The success of the operations was largely due to his courage, determination and devotion to duty.

TOLLEY, HOWARD GEORGE, Major, Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He personally reconnoitred forward routes under a hostile machine-gun and artillery barrage. During the attack he reconnoitred for mines all the concrete posts and dug-outs in the area captured by the brigade, and also assisted in consolidating the captured position under heavy fire. He successfully organized the getting up of engineer stores and the laying out of communication routes, and supervised this work under continuous shell fire. He has at all times set a fine example of cheerfulness and courage under the most adverse conditions.

SCOTT, J., M.B., Capt., Indian Medical Service.

London Gazette, 6 April, 1918.—" War Office, 6 April, 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette dated 26 Nov. 1917, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BEAUMAN, ARCHIBALD BENTLEY, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the troops on the right were in difficulties, and communications with Brigade Headquarters broken down, he made dispositions with his own battalion and other troops which ensured the security of the Divisional front. He proved himself to be a leader of exceptional ability.

HANAFIN, PATRICK JOHN, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. For nine days he was continuously under heavy shell fire while supervising the evacuation of the wounded in the most adverse circumstances. Finally, although wounded in passing through a heavy barrage, he continued on duty until the last man had been brought in. The successful evacuation of the wounded was largely due to his gallant conduct.

HILL, ROBERT McCOWAN, D.S.O., M.B., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While on the way to battalion headquarters his party was caught in an enemy barrage and four of them were wounded. He at once dressed their wounds on the spot in a most exposed position and under heavy fire. On arriving at the aid post he was informed that a whole machine-gun team were casualties in an advanced position. No stretcher-bearers were available, and he at once went forward and attended to them on the spot under heavy fire. He then returned and worked at his aid post under intense shelling, often attending to cases in the trench outside when the aid post was full. Casualties were being caused all round him, and he was wounded himself, but, though suffering severely, he remained at duty for 16 hours until the battalion was relieved. He set a most inspiring example of courage and devotion to duty to all ranks.

HUDSON, CHARLES EDWARD, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Major, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of a sector of the front line for several days during an action, and organized and carried out the defence of the position under continuous and violent enemy shelling. It was entirely due to his organization and personal supervision of the work that the line was able to resist heavy enemy counter-attacks. He showed splendid leadership and great energy and courage.

JAMES, CECIL POLGLASE, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion during the attack and capture of a position, and in holding it against very severe counter-attacks. He personally superintended the work of consolidation, and showed marked ability and untiring energy in the very difficult work of reorganizing his own and other battalions.

KEARSLEY, EDWARD REGINALD, D.S.O., Capt., Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of his battalion at short notice, and organized and launched an attack which was completely successful, capturing the final objective. He showed great initiative and skill throughout.

LE PREVOST, ALFRED PAUL HARRISON, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion in an attack. Though the battalion on his left was held up, he captured his objectives and also a series of strong points which was holding up the battalion on his left, and formed a defensive flank on a frontage of 600 yards. He personally directed this difficult operation under heavy machine-gun fire. He showed a complete disregard of danger, continually visiting his companies throughout the day, and it was due to his magnificent example and cool leadership that the position was secured and the battalion on his left was eventually enabled to advance.

LINTON, CHARLES STRANGWAY, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In the initial arrangements for an attack, which resulted in the capture of the first two objectives, as well as during the action and the consolidation after, he displayed marked ability and leadership as well as fearlessness in exposing himself when necessary.

SOMERVILLE, WILLIAM ARTHUR TENNISON BELLINGHAM, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his battalion during two attacks. It was largely owing to his courage and ability that a defensive flank was successfully formed on both occasions. His conduct was beyond all praise.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

TOLL, FREDERICK WILLIAM, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was ordered at very short notice to take part in an attack with his battalion on the following morning. Notwithstanding the limited time available, he made all the necessary arrangements and led his battalion through a heavy barrage to the assembly position. During the attack the unit on his right was held up, his flank became exposed, and heavy casualties were caused by enemy machine guns in numerous strong points. He organized an attack on the strong points in a most able manner, capturing or killing the entire garrison, and taking 14 enemy machine guns. By his prompt and gallant action the advance was continued and the final objective was captured.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ALDERSON, CHRISTOPHER, Major, Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the front line. He organized the men of all units of the brigade, who were mixed together, with energy and skill. He held on in the face of a heavy and accurate barrage.

BAILEY, HERBERT, Capt. (Acting Major), East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to the heavy going the two rear battalions were late arriving on the starting tapes. Shortly before zero hour he, whose battalion was only covering the right half of the brigade front, grasped the situation and deployed across the whole front just in time to follow the leading battalion behind the barrage. When severely wounded later, he showed a high example of courage when in great pain.

BEST, ALFRED JOHN, Second Lieut., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Whilst carrying out a road reconnaissance during an action he saw a large party of men, without officers, who had been driven from their position. He at once rallied the party, led them forward, and succeeded in re-establishing the position. By his example and good leadership he restored a critical situation.

BRIGHTEN, GEORGE STANLEY, Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion could advance no further owing to intense machine-gun fire, he went forward and personally reorganized it and established a strong defensive line. Later, when this hostile fire slackened, he at once initiated an advance which gained a considerable amount of ground. Throughout, his admirable reports were of the greatest assistance. His ability, coolness, and grasp of the situation had a marked effect on all ranks.

LAYTON, MUIRHEAD COLLINS, Major, Cambridgeshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He marked out the assembly position for the battalion under very heavy shell and machine-gun fire, and afterwards conducted the relief and assembly for the attack. He carried out a daring reconnaissance of the battalion front in daylight under rifle, machine-gun, and shell fire, and showed the greatest gallantry throughout the operations.

DANE, JAMES AUCHINCLOSS, Major, Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battery came under a heavy enemy barrage, during which an ammunition dump was exploded, destroying two gun pits, burying an officer, and killing several men. He at once went through the barrage, and after half an hour's work, with the help of three others, succeeded in rescuing the officer. During this time the barrage was so intense that no other help could reach the position. He set a magnificent example of courage and contempt of danger to his battery.

DAVIES, CHARLES STEWART, Lieut.-Colonel, Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of a battalion which took over an extended line of shell-hole positions after an attack, and by his skilful reorganization of the system of defence he avoided heavy casualties from the enemy's bombardment. On two occasions when his position was heavily counter-attacked by the enemy he kept his line intact and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. His soldierly spirit and cheerful demeanour under continuous and heavy shell fire were a fine example to his officers and men throughout the operations.

DREW, FRANCIS WILLIAM MASSY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion in the attack with great gallantry, and took command of the whole of the left sector during the consolidation of the position. He showed great ability and untiring energy in the difficult work of reorganizing different units and allotting them sections of the defence.

DUNN, JAMES CHURCHILL, M.C., M.D., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He worked with untiring energy in the open in the front line, searching for and dressing the wounded and constantly exposing himself to machine-gun and rifle fire. His medical orderlies were both wounded, and the greater portion of his work was done without any assistance. He set a magnificent example to all of courage and devotion to duty under continuous heavy fire and enemy counter-attacks.

FULLARD, PHILIP FLETCHER, M.C., Temporary Capt., General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As a patrol leader and scout pilot he is without equal. The moral effect of his presence in a patrol is most marked. He has now accounted for fourteen machines destroyed and eighteen driven down out of control in a little over four months.

FURBER, CECIL TIDSWELL, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Own Scottish Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his right attacking company was driven back, this officer left his battalion headquarters, rallied the company, and he himself led the counter-attack, regaining the ground that had been lost. His dash and personal example undoubtedly saved a critical situation.

GARNSWORTHY, RANDALL, Second Lieut., attached Devon Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attacked a strong enemy position, consisting of several concrete dug-outs, with his platoon. In spite of heavy casualties from machine-gun and rifle fire, he rushed one of the dug-outs, killed an enemy officer, and captured the position. He then pushed on to a further objective, showing great coolness throughout the operation.

GELSTHORPE, ALFRED MORRIS, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Durham Light Infantry, attached Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While he was completing most elaborate arrangements in an advanced position for a machine-gun barrage on the following morning, the enemy attacked during the night under a most intense barrage. He immediately got all his guns into action with great effect, and made a personal reconnaissance forward to see if he could use them to better advantage. His teams suffered heavy casualties during this attack, but he carried out his full barrage programme on the following morning under a heavy bombardment. He showed qualities of leadership and initiative of the highest order, and his example of courage and contempt of danger had the most inspiring influence on his men.

GOGARTY, HENRY EDWARD, Lieut.-Colonel, Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. He was wounded early in the operations, and though he was suffering much pain he refused to leave his post, and remained in command during three days of heavy fighting. He showed great courage and resolution, and largely contributed to the successful defence of the sector against repeated enemy counter-attacks.

GRIFFIN, ERNEST HARRISON, M.C., M.D., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He established his dressing station well forward during an attack, and went up to the front line through a storm of artillery and machine-gun fire utterly regardless of personal safety. He moved about in the open for 36 hours without food or rest, attending to the wounded, often leading parties of bearers through heavy barrages until every wounded man had been carried back. He remained behind after the battalion was relieved, still searching for wounded, under heavy fire, though he was several times badly shaken by the explosion of shells. He set a most inspiring example of courage and devotion to duty.

HASSELL, LADAS LEWIS, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company forward through a heavy barrage. In spite of severe casualties, the relief was very little delayed. He pressed home an attack with great ability, captured his objective, and formed a defensive flank when troops on the right were giving way. Though buried by a shell for ten minutes, he continued in command of two companies in the front line till relieved 24 hours later.

HEATH, EDWARD CHARLES, Lieut.-Colonel, Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion was checked in front of its objective by heavy enfilade machine-gun fire, he pushed forward reinforcements and secured the position. He himself at once went forward, reorganized his battalion and established a strong defensive line. He also initiated an action which later resulted in the capture of another position. Throughout the fighting he showed great coolness and grasp of the situation, and was a fine example to his men.

HESELTON, JOHN LISTER, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The battalion had suffered heavily, and seeing an enemy counter-attack starting he collected 100 men of various units and rushed them up through the enemy barrage to reinforce the front line. With the help of these men those of the enemy who got through our barrage were driven off.

HOBBS, WILFRED ALSTON, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By skilful leading he brought his battalion into action at a most opportune time. He behaved with the utmost resource against counter-attacks, and rallied the remnants of the front line when, being unsupported, he was compelled to withdraw.

JOHNSTON, HOWARD RICHMOND, Temporary Second Lieut., attached Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer executed a very useful reconnaissance of a stream in front of our lines and of the enemy strong points. When held up during an attack by a strong point, he himself worked forward round it, rushed the door, shot the officer in charge, and compelled the surrender of the garrison. Later, when twice wounded, he had himself brought to battalion headquarters, and gave a clear account of the state of affairs in the firing line.

KING, HENRY JOHN, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great zeal and determination in the attack. He was untiring in his efforts to keep touch with all the troops under his command, frequently passing through the enemy barrage to encourage and direct his men. The success of his battalion was largely due to his able leadership.

LACON, SIR GEORGE HAWORTH USSHER, Bart., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Warwickshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion was held up by machine-gun fire his skilful handling restored the situation. He made a personal reconnaissance of the front to clear up the situation. On another occasion his skilful handling of his battalion resulted in their gaining their objective, in spite of the mud and the fact that the right of the line was held up.

LIKEMAN, JOHN LONGHURST, Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great dash and skill. It was largely owing to his personal leadership on two occasions that they gained all their objectives and beat off heavy enemy counter-attacks.

LINFOOT, HAROLD ANYON, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was acting second-in-command of his battalion and followed the attack with the rear companies. On arriving at the first objective while fighting was still in progress, he rushed a dug-out containing four machine-guns, capturing the guns and teams. He then moved along the line, under continuous shell fire and sniping, organizing the first objective and the further advance. Throughout the action he sent back full and accurate information, and his example and leadership were of the greatest service.

McFEELY, CECIL MICHAEL, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack, which ultimately proved successful. He greatly encouraged his men by his example of audacious courage, and himself accounted for three of the enemy.

MILLAR, JAMES WILLIAM JOSEPH, Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut. and Acting Capt.), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. Though held up at several points during the advance, he was mainly responsible for the capture and consolidation of the enemy's position under very heavy machine-gun and rifle fire. Later in the day, on seeing the enemy concentrating for a counter-attack, he personally broke up the concentration with a Lewis gun, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. Afterwards he led his company to reinforce the front line, and sent in valuable information as to the situation during a threatened enemy counter-attack. He showed splendid courage and judgment.

MORSHEAD, OWEN FREDERICK, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in making his way forward with a supply of pigeons to clear up a situation, and sending back clear information. He also conveyed important orders to the leading battalions. It is impossible to speak too highly of his conduct.

NADEN, FRANK, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.), Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in temporary command of his battalion during an action. When the situation was obscure owing to the unit on his left having been held up, he made a thorough reconnaissance at great risk, and obtained valuable information. He then directed the attack of his battalion, capturing all his objectives. Throughout the day and the following days he went about under heavy shell and machine-gun fire, encouraging his men and directing the consolidation. The skilful manner in which he handled a most difficult situation was a great factor in the success achieved.

PANTON, HENRY FORBES, M.C., M.B., Capt. and Brevet Major, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The evacuation of casualties, amounting to 60 officers and 1,100 men, after an advance of 3,000 yards was most successfully carried out, chiefly owing to the initiative and sound judgment displayed by him. He spent 24 hours in the forward area, visiting every regimental aid post and sending back hourly reports until the battlefield was completely cleared of wounded.

PEDDIE, TOM ANDERSON, Second Lieut. (Temporary Major), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion throughout the operations with great success. His bearing, coolness, and courage were beyond all praise, and the notable success of his battalion was largely due to his example and ability as a leader.

PORTAL, WYNDHAM RAYMOND, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Life Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When, during an attack, a village in the rear of the attacking troops was discovered to be still occupied by the enemy, he successfully organized a defensive flank, and personally led forward a company, who had lost most of their officers, to fill a gap. The splendid behaviour of his battalion, which suffered heavily in a critical position was largely due to his personality.

PRESTON, JAMES, Second Lieut., Scottish Rifles, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led his men with great skill and determination under heavy fire to the capture of a concrete emplacement which was holding up the advance, taking two officers and 22 other ranks prisoners, and inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. His prompt and fearless action enabled the advance to continue to the final objective.

RADFORD, NORMAN HAROLD, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On two occasions he took command of his battalion when the commanding officers became casualties, and displayed the greatest ability and courage under heavy fire throughout the operations. He contributed largely to the success achieved.

ROBINSON, ERNEST HAROLD, M.C., Temporary Capt., Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in an attack until further advance was impossible. He then reorganized them, and collecting all men available of other companies, successfully repelled two counter-attacks, although the troops on either flank fell back. His skilful leadership and resolute bearing were a magnificent example to the remainder of the battalion.

SPRING, TREVOR COLERIDGE, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Hampshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the advance of his battalion to a counter-attack between two assaulting battalions he showed an admirable grasp of the situation, filling up the gaps on the flank and reinforcing the front when necessary. Being at short notice ordered to undertake a minor operation, he himself passed through a heavy barrage, in which several of his men had already been killed, to convey the orders to his subordinate officers about the attack, which was a complete success.

STUDDERT, ROBERT HALLAM, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On two occasions when gun-pits were struck by shells and the camouflage and ammunition set on fire he personally, with the help of two N.C.O.'s, extinguished the fire with water from a shell-hole. It was largely due to his fine example that the morale of the battery, which was suffering heavy casualties, was maintained at a very high standard.

TRON, REV. MAZZINI, M.C., Army Chaplains' Department. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His cheerful demeanour had a great influence in keeping up the spirits of all ranks whilst assembling for an attack. He went forward with the attack and exposed himself fearlessly in attending to the wounded, regardless of his own safety. His unceasing efforts under heavy fire and the most adverse conditions are worthy of the highest praise.

WEBSTER, JOHN RYIE, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion in an attack. When a strong point, manned by four machine guns, had been passed over by the leading troops in the attack, he promptly organized a party and led it to the capture of the strong point. He then led his battalion forward in the advance and, in spite of serious opposition, took all his objectives and held them against three enemy counter-attacks. The remarkable dash and determination of his battalion during the operations was mainly due to his splendid example and leadership.

WILDE, REGINALD COLERIDGE, M.C., Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack his party met with very strong resistance from an enemy strong point consisting of ten concrete dug-outs. When he found that he had not sufficient men to capture the position he went back under heavy fire and brought up a party of 40, and after a preliminary bombardment with rifle grenades he led an attack which was entirely successful. Two enemy officers and 20 other ranks were killed and more than 40 prisoners were taken, and also four machine guns. He at once directed the consolidation of the position and showed the greatest coolness, energy, and resource under heavy fire, remaining at duty though he was blown up by a shell.

CANADIAN FORCE

(Corrected to New Zealand Force [London Gazette, 17 April, 1918].)

BLAIR, DUNCAN BARRIE, M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an action. He repeatedly went through the enemy barrage, steadying and encouraging his men, and directing the consolidation of the captured position. His courage and coolness did much to inspire all ranks, and the success of the operations was largely due to his personal efforts.

COCKERELL, ALLAN RICHMOND, Second Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While he was endeavouring to fill a gap on his left flank during an attack his platoon came under heavy fire from some pill-boxes and an enemy trench. He at once led his men to the attack, captured the garrison of the trench, and eventually, by a skilful manoeuvre, put the pill-boxes out of action. He was cut off from his company and all his platoon had become casualties, but he took command of a few men near him and held his position when the rest of the advance was held up. Later, he rejoined his company, took command, and consolidated the new position. He showed the greatest gallantry, coolness, and leadership throughout.

COLQUHOUN, DUNCAN, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During heavy fighting, when the situation was obscure, he went forward at a critical time through heavy shell fire and made a most valuable personal reconnaissance of the position. He showed courage and ability of a high order during the subsequent operations.

MACCORMICK, KENNETH, Major, Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the evacuation of the wounded during an action. He remained at duty for 48 hours without rest, visiting the advanced posts, searching shell-holes, and bringing in many wounded. When one of his bearer posts was heavily shelled, with great coolness he got all the wounded away, staying behind himself until the last had left. He set a splendid example of courage and untiring energy.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

CRAIG, WILLIAM BANNERMAN, Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. After the aid post had been blown up he attended the wounded and organized bearer parties in the open. Though wounded he persisted in his work until disabled by another wound.

HAILES, WILLIAM ALLAN, Major, Australian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in attending to four wounded men in the open under heavy fire and conveying them to cover. His example stimulated the stretcher-bearers to great efforts under most trying circumstances.

LEE, HARRIE BERTIE, M.C., Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in charge of the organization of bearer reliefs during an action, and hearing that the officer in charge of the forward bearer parties had been killed he at once went forward under heavy fire and took charge. He located the new regimental aid posts forward of the former front line, and with absolute disregard of danger arranged for the evacuation of the wounded from these new posts through a heavy barrage. His quick grasp of the situation and prompt and courageous action were of inestimable value.

McMASTER, ROBERT MAXWELL, Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in tending the wounded continuously for ten hours under shell fire. Several of his bearers were killed and wounded, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that he was able to save the wounded from being killed or buried alive.

PURSER, MUIR, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was ordered at very short notice to take part in an attack with his battalion on the following morning. Notwithstanding the limited time available he made all the necessary arrangements, and led his battalion through a heavy barrage to the assembly position. In the attack he overcame all resistance by assaulting numerous strong points and capturing large numbers of prisoners. After the final objective was captured he was instrumental in repulsing with heavy loss several enemy counter-attacks. He set a splendid example of courage and determination to his battalion.

ROBERTS, PERCIVAL THOMAS, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of his battalion in an attack when his commanding officer became a casualty. As soon as the objective was reached he personally reconnoitred the whole front, laid out the line of defence and saw that communication was well established with both flanks. During the four days in the line he displayed great qualities of leadership and organization; and set a most inspiring example to all ranks under his command.

SCALES, JOSEPH LINDLEY, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in capturing a strong point 150 yards in front of our line. This he did single-handed. By the effective use of his rifle he killed four of the enemy in the post and two more as they tried to escape. He rushed the post from a distance of 50 yards and captured the machine gun. His devotion and courage inspired his men to further efforts, including the capture of five prisoners.

SLATER, HENRY ERNEST, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After the battalion had reached its objective with few casualties an enemy strong point with several machine guns inflicted severe casualties on the right flank, and threatened the junction with the unit on the right. With a sergeant and two men he attacked the strong point, put the machine-gun crew out of action, and captured the position with 30 prisoners. By his prompt and courageous action he saved many casualties. In the later stages of the fight by his courage and example he inspired his men to withstand and beat off a counter-attack.

TRAILL, JOHN CHARLES MERRIMAN, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He took command of the whole line when another company commander became a casualty during the advance, and encouraged and inspired his men throughout the attack by his splendid personal example. When the whole line was held up by direct fire from an enemy field gun he worked his way to a flank under heavy machine-gun fire and attacked it single-handed, killing five of the crew with his revolver and capturing the gun, thus allowing the advance to continue. His splendid action not only saved many lives but relieved a very critical situation, and the success of the operations was undoubtedly largely due to his magnificent example.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

BROWNE, AMBROSE ROBIN INNES, Capt. (Temporary Major and Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South African Defence Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of a support battalion during an attack, and on going forward to reconnoitre he found that the advance was completely held up by flanking machine-gun fire from a pill-box. He at once organized an attack upon it, captured it and several other enemy strong points, and was able to establish a definite line, which he held until relieved. He displayed exceptional qualities of leadership and resource at a very critical time.

FORBES, ERNEST CRESPIN, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He was with the support company, but, hearing that all the senior officers were casualties, he at once went forward and took command of the three leading companies and led them to the final objective. He then superintended the placing of outposts and the defence of the position, sending in clear and concise reports. Though wounded during the advance, he remained with his men under very heavy fire until he was again severely wounded. His gallant behaviour and cool confidence had a splendid effect on all ranks.

SPRENGER, LESLIE FRANCIS, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. When the advance was held up by a cluster of concrete strong points he collected every available man and organized and led the attack on the position, which he captured under very heavy fire. He showed great courage and high qualities of initiative and leadership, and his prompt handling of a critical situation enabled the advance to continue.

SMITHWICK, ALGERNON ROBERT, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

London Gazette, 22 April, 1918.—"War Office, 22 April, 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Third Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

LUMSDEN, FREDERICK WILLIAM, V.C., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Royal Marine Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a large raid on the enemy's lines, in which a portion of his brigade formed the left of the attack, he first superintended the assembly in our advanced line, and then advanced to each successive objective, encouraging the men. At the final objective, where, owing to heavy machine-gun and rifle fire and the exhaustion of the troops, there was some slight hesitation, he led the assault on a group of seven "pill-boxes," and after their capture made a valuable reconnaissance of the enemy's position. He then supervised the withdrawal, forming a covering party, with which he himself withdrew, being the last to leave the enemy's position. Such coolness, determination to succeed, and absolute disregard of danger not only ensured the success of the operation but afforded a magnificent example to all ranks, the value of which can hardly be exaggerated.

(First Bar gazetted 11 May, 1917.)

(Second Bar gazetted 11 May, 1917.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

BLOCK, ADAM, D.S.O., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In order to direct the fire of his battery during an action he exposed himself fearlessly, standing up on the parapet until he was wounded. His courage and skill greatly contributed to the effective shooting of his battery. On a previous occasion he skillfully got his battery into action 1,100 yards from the enemy's trenches, and brought such an accurate and rapid fire to bear that the enemy abandoned his trenches and retired.

(D.S.O. gazetted 7 Feb. 1918.)

DEAR, HAROLD JOHN, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an action he commanded his battalion in the most gallant and determined manner, rushed the crossing of a stream, and captured many prisoners. It was largely due to his personality and gallantry that this operation proved a success.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

EWING, WILLIAM TURNER, D.S.O., Major, Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward to the front line companies during an attack to clear up the situation, and set a magnificent example of courage and skill, which had a marked effect on the attacking troops.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

FRASER, JOHN ALEXANDER, D.S.O., D.C.M., Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Dragon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As officer commanding a raid he personally supervised the forming up of all the parties, and constantly moved up and down the advancing lines encouraging the men. Having paid most careful attention to the maintenance of touch between the various parties, he supervised the reorganization at the final objective and himself withdrew the last covering party. Throughout the operation he displayed magnificent gallantry and the greatest energy and devotion to duty.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

GRANVILLE, BERNARD, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With half a company and without any reserves, he maintained his position for 24 hours against a vastly superior enemy force, during which period he was continually under heavy fire of all kinds. It was largely owing to his coolness, presence of mind, and the example which he set to his men that the enemy was held back and a critical situation averted.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

HEATH, GEORGE NOAH, D.S.O., Major, Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward to obtain information as to the situation during an attack. Though wounded he succeeded in reaching the attacking battalion, crossing an extended zone swept by heavy machine-gun and shell fire. He obtained accurate information at a critical time and showed great courage and initiative.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

MITCHELL, ARCHIBALD MACLAINE, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led his battalion with great skill and courage, capturing and holding all his objectives under intense fire. He set a magnificent example to his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

FARRINGTON, WYNDHAM BROOKES, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt., Special Reserve and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On five occasions during a period of three months he has led formations on long-distance bombing raids, in which, despite bad weather conditions, he has found and bombed his objectives with the most excellent results. All the operations in which he has taken part have proved highly successful, and his capabilities have stood out most prominently. He is a keen and most efficient pilot, and by his courage and determination has set a splendid example to his squadron.

LAMB, HARRY LIVINGSTONE, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After three companies had attempted and failed to dislodge the enemy from a dominating ridge, he personally led an outflanking party under heavy machine-gun fire, and succeeded in getting in rear of the enemy's position, with the result that 60 prisoners with six machine guns fell into our hands. Thanks to the gallant dash and enterprise of this officer a ridge affording excellent powers of observation was successfully captured.

SNOW, WILFRED RIPPON, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Major), Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a flight lasting three hours and 40 minutes, he successfully registered two siege batteries on a hostile battery, and observed 100 and 150 rounds respectively. On one occasion he made four trips and dropped twelve 112lb. bombs on two aerodrome objectives. He has carried out a large number of successful counter battery and trench registration shoots under exceedingly unfavourable weather conditions, and has at all times carried out his duties in a thoroughly keen and able manner, displaying a magnificent spirit of dash and energy.

TATTERSALL, EDMUND HARRY, Lieut., Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. For 17 consecutive nights prior to a raid on the enemy trenches he was out on patrol along the enemy wire. On the night of the raid he first took out a reconnoitring patrol to ascertain if an enemy post was held. He then returned to take charge of the Bangalore torpedo party, and after the first torpedo had exploded satisfactorily, and while the second torpedo was being placed under the wire, two machine guns opened fire on the party at a range of 20 yards. As there was some difficulty in getting the torpedo through the wire, he, with total disregard of all danger and with magnificent coolness, stood up, and with the light of his electric torch placed the torpedo in the right position. His remarkable courage and presence of mind proved most inspiring to all ranks.

London Gazette, 22 April, 1918.—War Office, 22 April, 1918.

MACDONALD, ANGUS MACGILLIVRAY, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Seaforth Highlanders. The award of the Military Cross, announced in the London Gazette of 22 March, 1918 (corrected to 19 Nov. 1917), is cancelled, the award of the Distinguished Service Order being substituted. The details of the deed for which the Military Cross was awarded, as given in London Gazette, 22 March, 1918, were as follows: For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy counter-attack was meeting with great success he gathered a small party together and boldly attacked the enemy, who was advancing in large numbers. His prompt action retrieved the day, causing the enemy to retreat into our barrage.

London Gazette, 23 April, 1918.—War Office, 23 April, 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette dated 17 Dec. 1917, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order.

PRETORIUS, PHILIP JACOBUS, D.S.O., Major, East Africa Protectorate Forces, attached Intelligence Department. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He remained continuously behind the enemy's lines, and made valuable use of the services of the enemy's natives. He burned several of the enemy's food depôts, causing considerable havoc among their supply arrangements, and killed or captured several of the enemy. His personal courage and initiative were quite exceptional.

PYE-SMITH, CHARLES DERWENT, D.S.O., M.C., M.B., F.R.C.S., Temporary Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the three field ambulances of the division during ten days' operations. Though the weather conditions were abnormally bad and a large number of the wounded of another division had not been evacuated, owing to his constant presence and influence all the wounded were got away promptly and without assistance from the Infantry.

ROBINSON, HUGH THOMAS KAY, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion during three days' operations. In the assembly of his troops, in launching them for the attack, in the attack itself, and in holding the position, he displayed high qualities of leadership and courage.

SUGDEN, RICHARD EDGAR, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. On several occasions he made personal reconnaissances of the new front under heavy fire. His reports did much to clear up the situation.

WORSLEY, FRANK PICKFORD, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in laying out the tape, on which his battalion was to form up, under intense fire. It was owing to his gallantry and energy that touch was kept with his flanks and command so well maintained in his battalion, though all his company officers became casualties.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

IMLAY, ALEXANDER PETER, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. The attack, in atrocious weather conditions, was successful. But owing to the retirement of troops on the left, his men were ordered to withdraw. He personally controlled the retiring troops and skillfully overcame a critical situation, being wounded in the effort.

LEANE, RAYMOND LIONEL, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion in an attack, when he was suffering severely from neuritis. After his battalion had been forced to retire owing to a counter-attack on the flank, he collected stragglers and parties of men who were retiring past their original line and sent them forward again. Though badly wounded he remained at his post till the enemy were checked and the defence was assured.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ANDERSON, FRANCIS, M.C., Capt., Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as brigade major during seven days' operations. He made a most valuable reconnaissance of the hostile position, besides regularly passing through a heavily shelled area in full view of the enemy's snipers to pay visits to the units in the front line.

BOSANQUET, WILLIAM SYDNEY BENCE, Capt., Coldstream Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On reaching the objective he found he was held up by an enemy strong point which was causing heavy casualties. He organized an attack, which failed. Being reinforced, though under a heavy fire, he organized another attack, which was entirely successful, capturing the strong point with one machine gun and 40 prisoners. The enemy made a determined counter-attack, which was completely wiped out. He set an unparalleled example of coolness, initiative and courage.

CLARK, PHILIP LINDSAY, Temporary Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the left flank company of the battalion. When the enemy broke through on his left he organized a defensive flank. Finding a gap on his left he filled and held it with some of his own men and of the unit on his left. He personally led a charge against the advancing enemy and dispersed them, and later repelled another attack. He was wounded by a piece of shrapnel in the head, but though dazed continued in command of his company for two days until relieved.

CRAIG, DAVID, Second Lieut., Grenadier Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Though blown up by a shell, stunned and slightly wounded he went forward and established his sub-section of machine guns in the second objective, when he was again wounded in the leg. Hearing that the officer in charge of another sub-section of guns had been killed he took these guns forward to their position in rear of the final objective. He did not come back to the dressing station until ordered to do so. By this time, thanks to his efforts, the position on the right of the brigade was secure against counter-attack.

CRICHTON, ANDREW GAVIN MAITLAND MAKGILL, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Cameron Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. The attack having been held up he made a personal reconnaissance, crawling from shell-hole to shell-hole in front of his advanced posts under heavy machine-gun fire and active sniping. He brought back most valuable information.

ELLIOTT, RICHARD HEYMAN, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in getting his battery forward during an attack over almost impassable roads and tracks. He commanded his battery all through the operations in spite of very heavy casualties and great discomfort in a manner worthy of the highest praise.

HADLOW, RONALD WALTER, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in personally reconnoitring the ground and forming up his battalion in the correct alignment after the tapping party and guides had become casualties. He handled his battalion skilfully in the attack and rendered most useful reports on the situation.

JOHNSTONE, BEDE, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the attack was held up he immediately grasped the situation and rallied all the men he could from scattered parties of different regiments and sent them forward with his adjutant to form a defensive line. Regardless of danger he continued to reorganize scattered parties of men and to lead them up to the line. By his gallantry and personal example he saved a very dangerous situation.

LAITHWAITE, ALLAN, Second Lieut., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In spite of being wounded during the advance towards his objective he continued to lead his men, and was wounded again on six different occasions, but refused to give in, and again pressed on with a view to gaining more ground. While so advancing he was wounded for the eighth time, this time in the leg, which rendered it impossible for him to proceed further. By his magnificent endurance and example he was able to lead his men across extremely difficult ground.

LISTER, WILLIAM HOWARD, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as bearer officer, taking parties to the regimental aid posts, though they suffered heavy casualties on the way. When a regimental medical officer was wounded, he attended to the wounded of his battalion, searching our lines and "No Man's Land" from mid-day to dark for wounded, and then returned to his field ambulance for another 12 hours' work until relieved.

LOVEDAY, FRANCIS WILLIAM, Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in getting his guns forward along a narrow and broken plank road under heavy shell fire. After several attempts to use horse teams he had to resort to man power.

MARTYN, MICHAEL CLEEVE, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in rallying and reorganizing his men at the furthest objectives when men of other units besides his own were wavering under a heavy barrage and enemy preparations for counter-attack, and so averting a serious situation.

MASKELL, WILLIAM CHARLES, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. A few minutes before zero hour his telephone dug-out was blown in by a shell and he himself was buried and badly shaken. In spite of this he continued to command his battery for the next two days, withdrawing them under heavy fire at the end of that time.

OKMAN, WALTER GEORGE, Lieut., Coldstream Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the left company of an attacking wave, and of both companies, after the company on his right had lost all their officers. Though checked by a group of concrete block-houses, he made dispositions to outflank them, and finally reached the second objective. He had been wounded in the shoulder a few days previously, and was suffering great pain throughout the operations.

OSWALD, KENNETH ALLAN, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in action. He not only reconnoitred the assembly position close to and in full view of the enemy in daylight, but entered the enemy's lines after dark. Owing to his enthusiasm the opposition, encountered before the first objective was gained, was overcome with comparatively small loss.

PEMBERTON, GEOFFREY HARRIS, Lieut., Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the battalion for 24 hours after the commanding officer and senior officers had become casualties. He moved his headquarters to within 300 yards of the front line, and personally supervised the consolidation. During the relief he went out under heavy fire to the advanced posts collecting the men.

PLACE, CHARLES GODFREY MORRIS, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of an assaulting company. Being unable, owing to the chaotic state of the ground and heavy shelling, to reconnoitre in daylight, he went up and down his company all night to get them in a position to attack at dawn. He was wounded while organizing attacks on machine-gun positions which were holding up the line, but did not go back until quite certain that the attack could not get on any further.

RUSSELL, BERTIE ANGUS, Temporary Capt., Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company to the assault, though wounded six hours previously, with great courage and endurance, and, in spite of stiff resistance, his company was the first to reach its objective. At a moment when his flank was exposed, he regained touch with the troops on his right by a skilful redistribution of his own men. His reports on the situation were of the utmost value.

STEELE, ROBERT CRAWFORD, Second Lieut., Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has done consistent good work in aerial fighting during eight months. On one occasion he brought down within our lines an enemy scout of the latest type, and, landing alongside it, made the enemy pilot a prisoner before he could destroy his machine.

TABERER, TRAVERS CHARLES MELVILLE, Second Lieut., Hampshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his company after the company commander had been killed. Seeing, however, that part of the company detailed for the final objective had become disorganized owing to heavy casualties, on his own initiative he led forward his own company and captured and consolidated the final objective.

TETLEY, CHARLES HAROLD, Lieut.-Colonel, West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in an attack, being very successful under most trying conditions and under very heavy artillery and rifle fire.

THOMPSON, HENRY CEDRIC ST. JOHN, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Coldstream Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of the leading company in the attack on the first objective. At zero he and his company swept across 300 yards to a stream which they plunged into waist deep, discarding mats and bridges, and carried the far bank and a line of block-houses. Ten minutes after the attack began there were 95 prisoners back at Battalion Headquarters and several machine guns were captured. By his initiative and skill he contributed largely to the success of the attack.

WISTANCE, WILLIAM ALLSOP, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major and Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion during an attack. He maintained complete control of the situation under extraordinarily difficult conditions.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

CHRISTIE, ROBERT, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. Owing to his excellent arrangements the approach march and deployment were carried out without casualties. He went forward with the battalion in the attack, and established his headquarters close to the final objective. His tactical handling of the battalion reflected great credit upon him.

COLLINS, WILLIAM HENRY, Capt., Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Finding that his regimental stretcher-bearers were unable to find a regimental aid post which he had established in a German "pill-box," he personally led the first party of them through an intense artillery and machine-gun fire barrage. Although knocked down by a bursting shell, he immediately resumed the dressing of the wounded. Although, owing to casualties, he had only two men to help him, he courageously persevered with his work and himself helped to excavate a dug-out for the wounded under heavy shell fire, during which several of the wounded were killed. He remained on duty for sixty hours and refused to leave his post till the last wounded man had been evacuated. By his constant cheerfulness under the most adverse conditions, and by his utter disregard for his own safety, he kept up the spirits of the wounded and stimulated his surviving helpers to their utmost effort.

FRASER, WILLIAM ARTHUR, Second Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his platoon was checked by a machine gun, he located it and, accompanied only by his runner, attacked the dug-out from the rear, killed ten men and captured 20 others, together with the machine gun.

HURRY, GEOFFREY, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in action. He showed a fine example to all ranks, and fought his battalion with great skill, contributing largely towards the success of the operations.

HUTCHINSON, ERIC LLOYD, Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the evacuation of wounded from the forward area. He led a relief of stretcher-bearers over a track knee deep in mud, and at times over his waist in water. Another time he led a party through an intense barrage, thus relieving a temporary congestion of the wounded. He had very little rest during the whole four days.

JAMES, TRISTRAM BERNARD WORDSWORTH, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After the men had been ordered to safety owing to heavy shelling, when a gun-pit caught fire he extinguished it single-handed. By his efforts his personnel were rendered safe and his guns were all maintained in action.

MANTON, RUSSELL FULTON, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battery was being heavily shelled, the Infantry sent back an S.O.S. call on the battery sector; he personally led the detachments to the guns, attended to the wounded and kept every gun in action. By his determination and personal disregard of danger he set a magnificent example. On several occasions he showed the greatest gallantry and ability when in command of his battery.

MAPLESTONE, PHILIP ALAN, Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of all stretcher-bearers and forward posts he showed the utmost coolness under very heavy fire, during which several shelters were hit. By his example he prevented any panic and prevented serious casualties from gas shells. Although gassed himself, he remained on duty till the forenoon of the following day, having been on duty for over 30 hours. Even then he refused to be treated as a casualty, but after a short rest he returned to the advanced dressing station and carried on his duties.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

WICKENS, ROBERT CHARLES, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a gun-pit was set on fire, causing an explosion which killed one man, he set to work personally to localize the fire. As men arrived he organized them into a fire party, and eventually succeeded in extinguishing the fire, thereby saving the other gun and ammunition and probable loss of life.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

HEAL, FRANK HENRY, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When all his company commanders were casualties and the advance appeared not to be progressing satisfactorily, he went up to his battalion on the first objective and accompanied it in the advance to the second objective, which was gained, two counter-attacks being repulsed.

London Gazette, 24 April, 1918.—"War Office, 24 April, 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for distinguished services rendered in connection with military operations in Mesopotamia. Dated 26 March, 1918. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

EWART, ROBERT FREDERICK, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Supply and Transport Corps, Indian Army.

HOSKYN, JOHN CUNNINGHAM MOORE, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Infantry, Indian Army.

London Gazette, 25 April, 1918.—"War Office, 25 April, 1918. With reference to the awards conferred, as announced in the London Gazette dated 18 Jan. 1918, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

ASQUITH, ARTHUR MELLAND, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during two days' operations. He went through a heavy barrage and made a successful reconnaissance of an advanced position. Later, in bright moonlight, he reconnoitred some buildings which were reported to be occupied by the enemy. His advance was observed, and the enemy opened fire, but he entered one of the buildings and found it occupied by an exhausted British garrison. He returned, under heavy fire, and brought up three platoons to relieve them. He showed great determination and resource.

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

DUNCAN, KENNETH, D.S.O., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in controlling his battery under heavy enemy barrages on five different occasions, and attending to the wounded. On the last occasion he had a gun knocked out, and was forced to evacuate his position. Yet on an S.O.S. signal being sent up he led his men back, in spite of casualties, and started firing again. He showed great determination and resource.

JACKSON, GEORGE SCOTT, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He successfully assembled his battalion under very heavy fire. At a critical stage he made a personal reconnaissance under heavy fire, and by judicious use of his reserves gained the battalion's objective.

MCCRACKEN, WILLIAM JAMES, D.S.O., M.C., M.B., Temporary Surgeon, Royal Navy. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in tending and evacuating the wounded in the open under heavy shelling. Hearing that there were many wounded lying in mud and water in shell-holes, he led up two platoons with stretchers. When they were fired on he made them take cover and himself advanced through the enemy's fire, bearing a Red Cross flag on his walking stick. The enemy eventually respected, and so he was able to clear the area of wounded. By his courageous action he saved many lives.

SEWELL, HORACE SOMERVILLE, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the advance regiment of his division. By his personal reconnaissance under fire he materially assisted in the destruction of an enemy ammunition column, a raid on an enemy headquarters and the capture of 50 prisoners and two machine guns.

CANADIAN FORCE.

COSGRAVE, LAWRENCE VINCENT MOORE, D.S.O., Major, Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a lorry in the middle of an ammunition convoy was blown up, and six casualties occurred, he supervised the removal of the wounded under heavy shell-fire. By having the lorries nearest to the burning one removed he minimized the effects of the second explosion when two more lorries blew up. He showed great courage and resource.

FOSTER, WILLIAM WASBROUGH, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of the supporting battalion he personally led two companies of his unit in a flanking attack on some concrete strong points, containing several hostile machine guns. Owing to his personal example of gallantry, his tactical ability and effective leadership, the whole objective was gained with but small loss, and a critical situation was retrieved.

MACLEOD, GEORGE WATERS, D.S.O., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed the greatest initiative in supervising the assault and accurately reporting the position of the attacking troops. He was untiring in his efforts to strengthen the captured position and contributed largely to the success of the operations. He set a splendid example of coolness and courage.

NIVEN, HUGH WILDERSPIN, D.S.O., M.C., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He did excellent work in going to the front line during the operations and reorganizing scattered units. He personally carried away the wounded and saw to their evacuation in the face of great difficulties and dangers. His grasp of the situation in the captured position was of a high order.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

GRANT, WILLIAM, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Australian Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack on a town. He quickly grasped the situation and ordered the attack on the enemy's position. Owing to his promptness the town was occupied and a large number of prisoners were captured.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ANDERSON, ARCHIBALD STIRLING KENNEDY, M.C., M.B., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under heavy shell fire he led forward a party of stretcher-bearers and collected 25 wounded men who were lying within 50 yards of the enemy line. He set a splendid example of courage and self-sacrifice.

ANDERSON-MORSHEAD, RUPERT HENRY, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Devonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in an attack. Though the troops on his left were held up his battalion captured and held an important tactical point. He showed great initiative and skill.

BAILLIE, DUNCAN GUS, Lieut.-Colonel, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion with great skill and determination during a night advance and showed great coolness and courage in an assault on a village. He set a splendid example of pluck and initiative to which the success of the operation was largely due.

BARSTOW, WALTER AGAR THOMAS, M.C., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battery was heavily shelled and gassed, five men being killed and several wounded and gassed, though himself gassed he proceeded to get the wounded out of the dug-outs and clear of the shelled area. The control post with all the orders for next morning's barrage being completely destroyed, he sat in a shell hole working out fresh orders while the shelling continued. It was solely due to his having personally registered his guns from the front line that an enemy counter-attack was dispersed. He showed splendid skill and determination.

BIRKETT, RICHARD MAUL, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the advance was held up by machine-gun fire, and considerable confusion arose, he went forward to the front line and reorganized units, collecting stragglers and selecting positions for defence. He was under heavy machine-gun and shell fire the whole time, and set a splendid example of contempt of danger.

BOWMAN, JAMES THORNLEY, M.D., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack he attended to the wounded for five hours in the open under heavy fire. He showed the greatest coolness and courage throughout the day.

BRACE, HENRY FERGUSON, Capt., Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a company sent up to reinforce the front line, he displayed the greatest courage and ability in leading and organizing his men. By his personal example of coolness and gallantry he was in a great measure responsible for the successful defence of a locality, which at a very critical time was being continually harassed by snipers and machine guns, and subjected to frequent counter-attacks.

BROMLEY, JOHN EDOUARD MARSDEN, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He assisted in getting wounded out of a dug-out which had been blown in, under intense shell fire, and helped them to the dressing station. When an ammunition dump was set on fire, he put it out under heavy shell fire. When a dug-out, containing 15 men, was blown in, though himself wounded, he worked for an hour and a half rescuing them under intense shelling. He showed splendid courage and coolness.

CAMERON, JOHN JACKSON, Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He made a thorough reconnaissance of the ground on which his battalion were to assemble and advance in support of an attack. He guided his battalion to the position, which he found was being heavily shelled, and he assembled them successfully in another position. He showed the greatest ability and skill throughout.

FRASER-TYTLER, JAMES FRANCIS, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of two companies in an attack on a village. He led his men through the enemy's outpost line, penetrated into the village, and formed up close to the enemy without being observed. By brilliant and determined leading he then surprised and captured the majority of the garrison.

GRAHAM, HOWARD BOYD, M.B., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a heavy barrage he personally reconnoitred the advanced aid posts with the result that many cases were evacuated the moment the barrage lifted. This action undoubtedly saved many lives. On another occasion he went out and brought in two officers and four other ranks who were lying out unattended. Later, hearing that an officer had become a casualty, he went forward and brought him back single-handed to a point whence he was evacuated. His coolness, fearlessness and devotion to duty were beyond praise.

HENDERSON, CHARLES ERNEST, Second Lieut., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading a patrol through the enemy outposts to a position in the enemy's main line of resistance which was over 900 yards from our line. His patrol of 20 captured 23 unwounded prisoners and killed or wounded another 25 of the enemy. Though the rifles and Lewis gun jammed owing to mud, he succeeded in covering the withdrawal of the patrol, every man returning safely. He showed magnificent courage and resource.

HILTON-GREEN, HENRY FRANCIS LEONARD, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Major), Gloucestershire Regt., attached Army Cyclists Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack on a village. He advanced across most difficult country, overcoming considerable opposition, and, though part of his column was delayed, he attacked and cleared the village. He led his men with the greatest determination, and by his courageous leadership defeated a force of over double his own strength.

KNIGHTLEY, PERCY FRANK, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took charge of the front line of the attack at a critical moment when, owing to heavy casualties from the enemy's fire, it appeared impossible to advance. He reorganized and rallied the men and led them with great dash to the capture of the objective, afterwards assuming command of the whole battalion front. He showed splendid courage and leadership.

MCDUGALL, ARTHUR, Capt., Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when a strong enemy force attacked his position, which he had been ordered to hold at all costs. The enemy advanced to within 40 yards of his line and opened machine-gun fire, but he held his position and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. He showed great courage and determination.

NEPEAN, HERBERT DRYDEN HOME YORKE, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men under a withering fire to the capture of a ridge, and organized a strong defensive line on the position. Though wounded, he refused to leave his post for some hours. His fearless bearing was the greatest encouragement to his men.

REES, JOHN GORDON, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the right of his battalion was held up by artillery and machine-gun fire, he at once made his way up to the front, rallied and reorganized the company, and led them in the assault. His complete indifference to danger and gallant bearing had a most inspiring effect on all ranks.

ROBERTSON, ROBERT THIN CRAIG, M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When two ammunition lorries were hit by enemy shells he went forward at great risk to where several men had been killed or wounded, dressed their wounds and had them evacuated. He displayed great initiative and coolness.

ROCHFORD, RICHARD ADAIR, M.C., Capt., Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the battalion, on its way up to the line, was heavily bombarded with gas and other shells and was in danger of losing its way in gas masks in the darkness, he placed himself at the head and guided it to its forming-up place in time. Although severely wounded the following day while leading his men, he remained with them for nearly two hours, until forced to desist through sheer exhaustion. He showed splendid determination and resource.

RODGERSON, ALAN PATRICK, Capt., Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led the assaulting companies, on his own initiative, to the capture of a bridge under heavy fire, thereby cutting off the enemy's retreat. Though severely wounded, he refused to go back till he had reported on the situation, and sent in information which was of the greatest value. His conduct throughout was worthy of the highest praise.

STEDALL, LEIGH PEMBERTON, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in a counter-attack. He led forward three troops and galloped them across 500 yards of open country, under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. Though wounded in two places, he led the charge on the enemy's position with the greatest success. He showed splendid leadership and resource.

THATCHER, GERALD GANE, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his artillery group with great skill and judgment during the operations. The success of the bombardment was chiefly due to the daring reconnaissances which he had previously made.

UNICAKÉ, GERALD LAWRENCE, Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great coolness and skill when in command of his battalion during an enemy attack, and saved a critical situation when the enemy were pressing forward their attack on an exposed portion of his line. His courage was a fine example to all.

CANADIAN FORCE.

AIKINS, GORDON HAROLD, Major, Mounted Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as staff captain to an infantry brigade. He constantly visited the battalions in the front line, on several occasions passing through heavy barrages, and organized and supervised the carrying up of ammunition and supplies under the most difficult circumstances. On the afternoon of the attack he supervised the collection of wounded on the battlefield. His initiative and untiring energy contributed largely to the success of the operations, and his courage and example were an inspiration to all ranks.

BURGESS, WALTER HARTLEY, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of his company, which was in support during an engagement. When part of the front line began to be driven back by the enemy, he at once went forward, took command, and by his example and influence succeeded in holding the position. He exposed himself fearlessly to an intense artillery and machine-gun barrage to steady the men and keep them in their position, and he reorganized and established the line, and handed it over intact when relieved. His courageous action undoubtedly saved a critical situation.

CAMERON, JOHN ANGUS, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On the attack being held up by a strong enemy bombing post, he rushed forward, ahead of his platoon, and charged the post single-handed, bayonetting one of the enemy and compelling the other twelve to surrender. Though he had been wounded, he remained with his men, showing a fine example of leadership, until he was again wounded, so severely that his evacuation was necessary.

JAMIESON, WILLIAM FRANCIS, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the original attack broke down, despite heavy losses, he moved his company forward and held his ground under severe fire until a second attack was made. When this succeeded, he again led his company forward and captured his objective ahead of him with numerous prisoners and machine-guns. He showed great courage and skill.

KENNEDY, HECTOR, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In the attack he led his company in the most determined and courageous manner, through heavy enemy fire, and successfully gained his objective. It was then reported that the company, which had passed through his own to a further objective, was held up by two "pill-boxes." Appreciating the situation, he immediately went forward, and, despite heavy enemy machine-gun fire, accompanied by another officer, he rushed these enemy posts, forcing the garrisons to surrender, taking six officers and five other ranks prisoners. His courage and gallantry, together with his determination and prompt action, cleared up a critical situation, and enabled the final objective to be successfully carried.

LAWLESS, WILLIAM THEWLES, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When, owing to heavy fire, the original attack failed, he at once advanced to the support company, and reorganized the line. He then went ahead under very heavy fire to select a position from which a further advance could be made. Although wounded by a sniper he remained with the company until he could explain the situation personally to his commanding officer. He displayed great skill and courage.

MACNAGHTEN, RONALD FREDERICK, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in charge of his platoon, when a machine-gun opened fire, causing several casualties. He very gallantly rushed forward, shot two of the enemy, his platoon killing and bayonetting the others, and capturing two machine guns. His splendid example inspired all ranks.

PEARSON, RONALD WILFRED, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a company, during an attack on a strong enemy position, he led his men with splendid skill and courage under intense fire. When the success of the attack at one time seemed to be threatened by enemy snipers and machine-gun fire, he seized a machine gun, and moving forward close under the barrage, subdued the enemy fire. His prompt action enabled the attack to proceed without delay, and secured for his men the protection of the barrage. Throughout the operations his courage was outstanding, and his example was an inspiration to his officers and men.

SAVAGE, HAROLD MURCHISON, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a shell struck a large pile of ammunition, causing a terrific explosion and many casualties, and setting fire to more ammunition, he led five men in among the bursting shells and dragged out six severely wounded men with their clothes on fire. He remained at work with great determination till the last man living had been taken out. A few seconds later another big explosion occurred.

WALKER, WILLIAM KEATING, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in building bridges under severe and accurate machine-gun and rifle fire. Though two officers and 18 men became casualties, he persisted until his work was completed. He set a splendid example of coolness and courage.

WILSON, WILLIAM DOUGLAS, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He advanced his guns to a very forward position under most difficult conditions, some of them being two days on the road, though he worked continuously night and day. Though at different times 11 guns were put out of action, he always succeeded in repairing them or bringing up new guns, so that in each of three attacks there were six guns in action when the engagement began. He showed splendid determination and skill.

YOUNG, HARVEY GORDON, Temporary Capt., Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He went forward with a stretcher squad through a heavy barrage and established an advanced aid post. For two days he was untiring in his work of attending to the wounded and getting them in from advanced areas with complete disregard of danger. By his skilful organization and untiring energy he attended to and evacuated over 400 cases in two days.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

A'BECKETT, MALWYN HAYLEY, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a battalion which relieved the attacking troops. He personally carried out a most valuable reconnaissance under most dangerous conditions, clearing up an obscure situation, and then established a very strong system of posts as a front line of defence. He set a splendid example of courage and resource.

BOURCHIER, MURRAY WILLIAM JAMES, Lieut.-Colonel, Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As commanding officer, he led his regiment into action in the most gallant and capable manner. By his skilful handling of the regiment and by his magnificent example of courage and determination he was very largely instrumental in the success of the attack and the capture of the objective.

CAMERON, DONALD, Lieut.-Colonel, Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He directed the attack of his regiment in an extraordinarily able and determined manner. In conjunction with another unit, he was responsible for the marked success of the action, which led to the capture of an important objective, many field guns, machine guns and several hundred prisoners.

DAVIES, GEORGE VERNON, Capt., Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in going forward through an intense barrage and establishing a regiment aid post in an advanced position, remaining on duty continuously for 54 hours, often working in the open under heavy fire. When the aid post was hit by a shell he extricated a man who was buried, and continued his work. He remained for 15 hours after the battalion was relieved till the last man was carried back to safety and set a magnificent example to all.

DIXON, ROBERT DERWENT, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the centre company of his battalion in an attack. When held up by a nest of machine guns, with a small party he rushed the position and succeeded in capturing four machine guns and 30 prisoners. He did excellent work during the whole day, and set a splendid example of courage and initiative.

FETHERSTONHAUGH, CUTHBERT MURCHISON, Major, Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, during the attack, was with his squadron in support when the enemy from his main defences, which were obstructing the attack, opened up a very heavy machine-gun and rifle fire. Quickly appreciating the situation, he led his squadron with great gallantry in a charge on the enemy's trenches, overcame their resistance and enabled the assault to be carried on successfully to the final objective.

FRANKLIN, REGINALD NORRIS, Major, Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great coolness and determination in handling his squadron under heavy fire. At a critical period, when the commanding officer of the regiment had become a casualty, he took command, and though twice wounded he continued to lead his men, and set a magnificent example of courage and resource.

HENDERSON, ROBERT OSWALD, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion had reached its objective he personally supervised the digging-in and remained in the shell-holes with his men. On another occasion, when his battalion was brought up from reserve to replace casualties, he did excellent work in reorganizing the various units under heavy fire, after many officers had become casualties. He set a splendid example to his men.

HYMAN, ERIC MONTAGUE, Major, Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer led his squadron at full gallop against an enemy redoubt, strongly manned with machine guns and rifles. Though the hostile fire was very heavy, yet the charge was so vigorous and determined that the enemy was overrun and his fire silenced, thus enabling the regiment to continue the assault and complete the capture of the objective.

LAWSON, JAMES, Major, Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack on the enemy trenches he led his squadron at the gallop, under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, across the first enemy trenches, dismounting immediately a few yards in front of the second line, in which all the enemy were either killed or captured and a machine gun was taken. He then led his squadron with great determination and skill against a very strong trench, heavily garrisoned with machine guns and infantry. The trench was rushed and a hundred of the enemy were either killed or captured.

PAYNE, LESLIE HERBERT, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He supervised the preparation of the attack, reconnoitring the forward area and organizing the assembly of the battalion under heavy shell fire. He set a splendid example of coolness and skill.

SELMES, JEREMIAH CHARLES, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When all the officers and all but eight men of two batteries were reported to have been gassed he went forward a distance of 300 yards, through a heavy barrage, with complete disregard of danger, had them evacuated and arranged for the manning of the battery until the reliefs could arrive.

THOMPSON, ROY MELDRUM, M.C., Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battery suffered heavy casualties from high explosive and gas shells he personally got one wounded man away and fetched the medical officer to another, and although gassed himself did not leave till all men were away safely. On the following day when suffering from gas poisoning and ordered to the dressing-station, seeing his battery being shelled, he returned and in attempting to extinguish exploding ammunition was seriously wounded. He showed great courage and determination.

London Gazette, 26 April, 1918.—"Admiralty, 26 April, 1918.—Honours for Miscellaneous Services. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. (1).—Evacuation of Thermi Aerodrome. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

CHICHESTER, CECIL GEORGE, Commander, R.N. In recognition of the energy, good judgment and coolness under fire with which he organized and executed the evacuation of the Aerodrome at Thermi, Mityleni, on the 9th to 15th Oct. 1917. The evacuation of the Aerodrome was carried out under continuous bombardment by the enemy, and was effected entirely without casualties and without loss of stores.

(ii).—Operations on the Belgian Coast.

To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order:

COLLARD, BERNARD ST. GEORGE, Capt., R.N.

MORETON, JOHN ALFRED, Capt., R.N.

HAMMOND-CHAMBERS, ROBERT HERBERT BORGNI, Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), R.N.

PERCIVAL, PERCY RALPH PASSAWER, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

BAKER, HENRY, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N.R.

"Honours for the Royal Naval Air Service.—(1).—Dunkirk. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to Officers of the Royal Naval Air Service, in recognition of their services at Dunkirk. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

CLARK-HALL, ROBERT HAMILTON, Wing Capt., R.N.

CAVE-BROWN-CAVE, HENRY MEYRICK, Wing Commander, R.N.

DALLAS, RODERIC STANLEY, D.S.C., Squadron Commander, Royal Naval Air Service.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

MULOCK, REDFORD HENRY, D.S.O., Wing Commander, Royal Naval Air Service.

(2).—Miscellaneous.

To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order:

DIGBY, FRANK THOMAS, D.S.C., Flight Commander, Royal Naval Air Service. For the consistent determination, gallantry and skill displayed by him on long-distance bombing raids, particularly on the night of the 24th-25th March, 1918. On that date, in spite of mist, which made the journey most difficult, he eventually reached his objective, which he bombed with good results.

London Gazette, 1 May, 1918.—"Amendment.—The announcement of the award of the Military Cross on page 2162 of the London Gazette of the 18th Feb. 1918, to Lieut. (Temporary Capt.) Alexander Witham, Royal Field Artillery, is cancelled, and the following substituted. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

WITHAM, ALEXANDER, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Field Artillery.

London Gazette, 1 May, 1918.—"Admiralty, 1 May, 1918.—Honours for the Royal Naval Air Service. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to Officers of the Royal Naval Air Service for zeal and devotion to duty during the period from 1 July to 31 Dec. 1917. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

NOYES, CHARLES ROBERT FINCH, Squadron Commander, R.N.

NICHOLL, VINCENT, D.S.C., Squadron Commander, Royal Naval Air Service.

London Gazette, 13 May, 1918.—"War Office, 13 May, 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

JACKSON, ARNOLD NUGENT STRODE, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), North Lancashire Regt., attached King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battalion was subjected to an intense bombardment throughout a whole day, which caused many casualties and cut off all communication by wire with the front-line companies. He handled the situation with such skill and initiative that when the enemy attacked towards evening the casualties caused by the bombardment had been evacuated and replaced by reinforcements and communication with the front line had been re-established. It was entirely due to his powers of command and the splendid spirit with which he inspired his men that the attack on the greater part of his front was repulsed, and that the enemy, though they penetrated into parts of the front line, were counter-attacked and held at bay until the arrival of reinforcements. By his skilful dispositions he materially assisted the counter-attack which drove the enemy back with heavy losses and completely re-established the position.

(First Bar gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

FRASER-TYTLER, NEIL, D.S.O., Major, Royal Horse Artillery, attached Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When several batteries suffered heavy casualties from a prolonged enemy bombardment of gas and high explosive shells, he showed great courage and coolness. He inspired the men with confidence by his splendid example, and enabled them to carry on their duties under the most difficult conditions.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1916.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

JONES, ELMER WATSON, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Infantry, East Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a large enemy raiding party, using flammenwerfer, entered his trenches under cover of an intense barrage, he at once went forward under heavy fire and directed a counter-attack which re-established the line without the enemy having gained an identification. Later, under his direction, a raiding party entered the enemy's lines, captured some prisoners, and inflicted severe losses on the enemy. He displayed great resource and initiative.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

BAMBRIDGE, RUPERT CHARLES, M.C., M.M., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was ordered to lead his company in a counter-attack against the enemy who had gained a footing in part of the front line. The night was very dark, and the exact position of the enemy was unknown, but he led his men to the best position of assembly, and after a personal reconnaissance launched a counter-attack. This attack being only partially successful, he quickly organized another which drove the enemy back a considerable distance. At dawn he launched a third attack, drove the enemy out, and completely re-established the original position. The success of the operation was largely due to his splendid leadership, skill and energy.

BODDINGTON, HUMPHREY WEST, Lieut. (Acting Major), Yeomanry, attached Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was ordered at very short notice to carry out a counter-attack, and re-establish a position which had been captured by the enemy. He organized the operation with great skill and initiative, issued clear orders, and led two companies to the assembly position under heavy fire. His disregard of danger inspired all ranks, with the result that the enemy was driven back, and the position was completely re-established.

HANNAH, ROBERT WILLIAM, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an engagement. He maintained the ammunition supply and conducted the advance of his battery with the greatest skill and resource. He kept in touch with the infantry in spite of the difficult state of the ground and intense enemy shelling, and though wounded he remained at duty. He set an example of courage and initiative which had a splendid effect on his men.

HASSELL, JACOB, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy had gained a footing in part of the outpost line he led his company in a counter-attack at very short notice. In spite of the difficulties of assembling the company for the attack and the intensity of the enemy's machine-gun and shell fire, he carried out the operation with the greatest success, drove the enemy out, and completely re-established the position. He showed magnificent leadership and resource.

WATERS, JOHN DALLAS, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy, after a heavy bombardment, had gained a footing in the front-line trenches, he skillfully organized a counter-attack which drove them out with heavy losses. He arranged the supply of bombs and ammunition, kept open communications when all the wires were cut, and directed the whole operation with the greatest determination and initiative.

London Gazette, 17 May, 1918.—"Admiralty, 17 May, 1918.—Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

LECKIE, ROBERT, D.S.O., Flight Commander, Royal Naval Air Service.

"Honours for the Naval Armoured Car Squadron.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services with the Naval Armoured Car Squadron during the Russian retreat from Galicia in July-Aug. 1917."

To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order:

WELLS-HOOD, WILLIAM, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.V.R. This officer joined the Armoured Cars at the outset of war, and served with them in Belgium, South-West Africa, France, the Caucasus, Armenia, the Dobruja, and Galicia. Throughout the Galician retreat he fought day and night, under every sort of difficulty, always cheerful and ready, and inflicted very heavy casualties on the enemy. His last fights round Gusiakyn were very severe, and drew the praise of the Russian General in command. In the last day's fight he brought down an enemy aeroplane.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

SMILES, WALTER DORLING, D.S.O., Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. When the road to Brzezany was blocked in the attack of 1 July, 1917, this officer called for volunteers to destroy the obstruction, and succeeded in removing it in the face of the fiercest fire by taking cover in the adjoining ditch, and rushing out during lulls to tear down wire and sandbags. Later on during the retreat he fought with characteristic courage until all his cars were lost in action, with the exception of a light-armoured Ford. He then improvised an armoured car by taking the armour off an old car and concealing it round a lorry. With this car and a heavy armoured car borrowed from another squadron he kept the enemy at bay beyond the frontier in Austria for six hours, until all troops had crossed the river. These cars passed over the river five minutes before the last bridge was blown up, and were the last thing on wheels to leave Austrian territory.

"Honours for Miscellaneous Services.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers."

(1).—Action in the Heligoland Bight on the 17th Nov. 1917.

To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order:

WILSON, MAURICE FIENNES FITZGERALD, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. On recovering consciousness after being wounded, he returned to duty, and for some time aided the officer who assumed command after the captain had been mortally wounded.

(2).—Services on the Mediterranean Station.

To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order:

THOROWGOOD, ARTHUR PENTON NAPIER, Commander, R.N.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

BEST, THE HONOURABLE MATTHEW ROBERT, M.V.O., D.S.O., Capt., Royal Navy.

London Gazette, 31 May, 1918.—"War Office, 31 May, 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve the following award for gallant services rendered on the occasion of a hostile air raid. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

BRAND, CHRISTOPHER JOSEPH QUINTON, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry. While on patrol at night

he encountered an enemy aeroplane at a height of 8,700 feet. He at once attacked the enemy, firing two bursts of 20 rounds each, which put the enemy's right engine out of action. Closing to a range of 25 yards he fired a further three bursts of 25 rounds each, and as a result the enemy machine caught fire and fell in flames to the ground. Capt. Brand showed great courage and skill in manoeuvring his machine during the encounter, and when the enemy aeroplane burst into flames he was so close that the flames enveloped his machine, scorching his face. This officer has shown great determination and perseverance during the past nine months when on anti-aeroplane patrols at night, and his example of unassuming gallantry and skill has raised his squadron to a very high state of efficiency.

London Gazette, 3 June, 1918.—"War Office, 3 June, 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased, on the occasion of His Majesty's Birthday, to approve of the undermentioned rewards for distinguished service in connection with military operations in France and Flanders. Dated 3 June, 1918. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

He has carried out his duties with the greatest zeal and energy, and has shown an excellent example by his fearlessness and devotion to duty. He has been twice wounded, and would have been relieved but for his strong desire to remain at his post.

BRADBURY, WILLIAM, M.B., Surgeon (Acting Staff-Surgeon), Royal Navy. In recognition of his services with the Royal Naval Division in Gallipoli and France. As Medical Officer of the Hawke Battalion, Royal Naval Division, in Gallipoli, he did exceptionally good work, often under the most trying circumstances.

London Gazette, 22 June, 1918.—"War Office, 22 June, 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

DAWSON, WILLIAM ROBERT AUFRERE, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a party of the enemy had broken through the brigade front, he led the personnel of his headquarters as a fighting formation, and, co-operating with the counter-attacking battalion, inflicted heavy losses on the enemy and captured two machine guns and some prisoners. On the following day, when the enemy attacked in force, he organized and led a counter-attack with two companies. He repulsed the enemy and re-established and advanced the line. Later, when the enemy attacked some advanced posts, he counter-attacked and drove the enemy off with loss. By his capable leadership, promptness of action and courageous example, he was largely responsible for the position held by his battalion being maintained intact. (D.S.O. gazetted 15 April, 1916.) (Bar gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order :

BURNE, ALFRED HIGGINS, D.S.O., Major, Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the enemy attack, his battery was subjected to heavy shell fire, two of the guns being buried and one destroyed. He continued fighting his guns over open sights until the enemy were within 600 yards of the position, when he succeeded in withdrawing his five guns. On the same day he rendered great assistance to a neighbouring battery, the guns of which he succeeded in withdrawing. During a period of 12 days, in which his battery inflicted heavy losses on the enemy, his information has been of incalculable value, and his devotion to duty most marked. (D.S.O. gazetted 9 Nov. 1914.)

HUSEY, RALPH HAMER, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. When the enemy approached close to his battalion headquarters he held the forward end of a communication trench with the personnel of his headquarters and a few other men, and largely assisted in breaking up the enemy's attack. He used a rifle himself at close range, and inflicted many casualties on the enemy. He then conducted an obstinate withdrawal to the next line of defence, where the enemy were finally held up. He set a magnificent example of courage and determination. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

PATERSON, EWING, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Dragoons. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to the neighbouring troops being driven back, his flank became exposed and a gap was made in the line. Though he had very few men, he at once extended his flank and maintained a most gallant and determined resistance for an hour against largely superior numbers, closing the gap at a most critical moment until other troops were able to advance and restore the line. His tactical handling of the brigade during successive withdrawals, often with one or both flanks exposed, was magnificent. (D.S.O. gazetted 27 Sept. 1901.)

VAN STRAUBENZEE, ALEXANDER WILLIAM, D.S.O., Major, Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On his battery being heavily shelled for a period of five hours, he succeeded in withdrawing all his guns after firing on the advancing enemy with open sights at very close range. His services have been of the greatest value, his personal reconnaissances of our retiring line of inestimable importance, and thanks to his personal example and devotion to duty his battery, after 12 days' continuous and heavy fighting, remained in a high state of discipline and efficiency. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

MACDONALD, DONALD JOHN, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In the attack launched by a cavalry brigade he led the reserve squadron of the regiment to the attack. Though suffering acute pain from a wound in the ankle, he continued to direct operations and led his men forward until the position was finally secured. But for his outstanding courage, skill and dash the position could not have been held. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

ALLEN, STEPHEN SHEPHERD, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Auckland Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He supervised the assembly of his battalion for an attack in a difficult position. When part of one of the companies was held up during the attack he at once went to the spot, and by skilful leadership enabled the advance to continue. The success of the operation was largely due to his courageous example under intense machine-gun fire, which was an inspiration to all ranks. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order :

CARLISLE, THOMAS HARTLEY, M.C., Major, Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On two occasions, during a period of ten days' heavy and continuous fighting, he withdrew his battery when it was under a heavy close range fire from the enemy, upon whom his guns inflicted great losses. At all times he has afforded to all ranks of his battery a most inspiring example of courage and confidence.

COWIE, WALTER NICHOLAS, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of his battery when the battery commander was wounded during an enemy attack. The enemy infantry approached within 500 yards of the batteries of his brigade and opened fire with a machine gun. He kept his battery in action under intense shell and machine-gun fire, covering the withdrawal of the other batteries and continued to fire his guns until another battery was in position further back. Though twice wounded he remained in command, showing the greatest courage and coolness. He finally withdrew his battery with great skill, and though he had suffered heavy casualties, he brought all the guns of his battery into action again within twenty minutes of ceasing fire. It was mainly due to his gallant leadership and example that this was accomplished.

DUNLOP, JOHN, Second Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On information being received that the forward section of the battery was being gassed and shelled, and that the officer in charge and the majority of the personnel had become casualties, he voluntarily went forward to the section under an intense barrage, assisted the wounded and brought the guns into action again, firing all the remaining ammunition. Being at this period under machine-gun fire he withdrew the guns to safety. His courage, determination and ability were of the highest order and set a high standard of efficiency which all ranks maintained.

FITZGERALD, EDWARD GALBRAITH AUGUSTINE, Lieut., Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The enemy launched a heavy attack on the point of junction of his company and the battalion on the right and succeeded in capturing some front line posts. He at once got into touch with the battalion on the right and organized counter-attacks by this battalion and his own company. He led his company under heavy machine-gun fire with such dash and determination that the enemy were ejected and driven well beyond the line of posts. The success of the operation was entirely due to his courage and resource.

JOHNSON, FRANCIS SHAND BYAM, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion became isolated during an enemy attack and both flanks were exposed, by his courage and skill he succeeded in withdrawing his battalion without serious loss. The successful withdrawal was entirely due to his splendid leadership and determination.

LEGARD, D'ARCY, Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Lancs. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a brigade during the recent operations he on one occasion obtained valuable information as to the flanks, and undoubtedly saved a critical situation. During a period of 12 days he has handled his troops in a masterly manner, inspiring all ranks by his energy, coolness and cheerfulness.

MORT, GUY MACAULAY, Lieut.-Colonel, Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On it being reported that the enemy had broken through and were about to attack his line in rear, he immediately organized and carried through a counter-attack, which succeeded in recapturing a vital point and thus saving a critical situation. Throughout the day and on subsequent occasions he has displayed cool courage, initiative and fine determination.

PHILLIPS, FRANCIS ASHLEY, Capt. (Acting Major), Yeomany. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was the senior officer in the front line system when the enemy attacked. During the preliminary bombardment he kept battalion headquarters informed as to the situation, and when the enemy launched their attack he organized the defence with the greatest courage and energy. He maintained a determined resistance against heavy odds for over four hours, although he was completely outflanked and attacked from the rear. He led a counter-attack over the open and killed or drove out the enemy who were holding a trench behind his headquarters. When the position became quite untenable he organized a skillful withdrawal. He set a splendid example of determination and resource to his men.

PRICE, ROBERT BERNARD, M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Prior to the division going into action he took over the duties of Assistant Director of Medical Services at half-an-hour's notice. When on one occasion all casualty clearing stations in the neighbourhood of the division were withdrawn, his improvisation on the previous night of an emergency casualty clearing station further to the rear proved of such inestimable value, that a large number of casualties were able to be dealt with and all the wounded evacuated with the utmost despatch. Owing to his resource, forethought and exceptional powers of organization the smooth and successful evacuation of all wounded was carried out during the period of 12 days' heavy and continuous fighting in which the division was engaged.

QUIGLEY, FRANK GRANGER, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While leading an offensive patrol he attacked a very large number of enemy aeroplanes, destroyed one of them and drove another down out of control. On the following day, while on a low-flying patrol, he was attacked by several enemy scouts, one of which dived at him. He out-maneuvred this machine and fired on it at very close range. He followed it down to 500 feet, firing on it, and it spiralled very steeply to the ground in a cloud of black smoke. During the three following days, while employed on low-flying work, he showed the greatest skill and determination. He fired over 3,000 rounds and dropped 30 bombs during this period, inflicting heavy casualties on enemy infantry, artillery and transport.

SMITH, ARNOLD EDWARD, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a brigade of artillery. When a withdrawal became necessary he carried out a reconnaissance of the route and then skillfully withdrew the brigade under very heavy fire. It was due to his courage, tenacity and resource that the operation was successfully carried out.

STEIN, OSWALD FRANKLIN, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Grenadier Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a strong enemy attack a party of 50 of the enemy effected an entry into part of the front line trench held by his company. He at once organized a counter-attack, and, sending a party to make an outflanking movement and cut the enemy's line of retreat, he personally led a bombing attack. Owing to his splendid leadership and his example of courage and energy the enemy were at once driven out with heavy losses. It was largely due to his quick grasp of the situation and prompt and determined action that the counter-attack was successful.

STONE, ARTHUR, Temporary Major, Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of a raiding party, portions of which were unable to force a gap through the enemy wire, he proceeded under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire up to the enemy's wire, and having satisfied himself that it was impassable, ordered the parties held up to withdraw. It was entirely due to his coolness and command of the situation that the withdrawal of the parties and the evacuation of the wounded were successfully effected. Throughout the whole of the raid he displayed the most supreme contempt for danger, and inspired all ranks by his magnificent example.

THOMSON, GEORGE EDWIN, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On one occasion, encountering a number of enemy two-seater 'planes, he dived on one of these and sent it down in flames. On returning to our lines, he dived on to another enemy machine, the observer of which was seen to collapse in his cockpit, the hostile machine going down, completely out of control. On the following day, observing a hostile two-seater machine, he dived on it, engaging it at 100 yards' range. On the hostile 'plane going down in a slow spin, he followed it to within 2,500 feet, but was compelled to withdraw owing to heavy machine-gun fire from the ground. He has, in all, accounted for 21 enemy machines, and has at all times during recent operations displayed the most marked skill and gallantry.

WHETHAM, PAUL, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battalion was continuously in action for four days during an enemy advance, and was successful in repulsing all the enemy's attacks. On two occasions his promptness and skill in organizing and leading counter-attacks resulted in the line being restored. His courageous example and cheerful bearing under most difficult conditions not only maintained but increased the fighting spirit of his men.

WHITWORTH, JOHN HAWARTH, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when temporarily in command of his battalion. He continued to hold his position under intense shelling, and in the face of heavy enemy attacks, although the positions on each of his flanks had been captured by the enemy. After being eventually forced to withdraw, he led the remnants of his battalion and some men of another unit in a counter-attack, recaptured the position, and held it against two attacks until forced to withdraw. It was due to his courage and determined leadership that an important tactical point was held until orders were issued for a withdrawal.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BURBANK, MAURICE AUGUSTUS, Major, Railway Troops. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy advance he superintended the construction of light railway bridges. He completed two bridges in the course of ten hours under heavy enemy shelling and bombing, and in the face of great difficulties, and superintended the withdrawal of a large quantity of light railway material and rolling-stock across a river from the battle area. He showed magnificent courage, skill and resource in a most difficult situation.

MOYER, LESLIE CLARE, Major, Railway Troops. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great skill and judgment in handling his company at their work under intense shell fire during an engagement. During later operations he kept his lines open for traffic throughout under very heavy fire until ordered to withdraw, and then succeeded in bringing back all his light railway rolling-stock and stores. His splendid example of courage was an inspiration to his men.

STEVENSON, HERBERT IRVING, Lieut.-Colonel, Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When our line was temporarily pierced, he led a charge with great skill and dash, by which the enemy were driven back and a new line established. He succeeded in establishing communication with the troops on his right flank, and though heavily outnumbered maintained this line until relieved by fresh infantry units. His prompt action and cool leadership were the means of allowing two battalions of infantry, who were in danger of being cut off, to withdraw safely to our line.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

DUTHIE, NORMAN ALEXANDER, Major, Auckland Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company into action immediately after a long march in perfect order, and took charge of the left flank of an attack. When the advance was held up by machine-gun fire he led his men with great skill, and it was largely owing to his efforts that the battalion captured the objective. Though wounded early in the attack he remained with his men showing the greatest courage and determination.

ORR, ERIC HAMILTON, Major, Auckland Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He showed great determination and skill during an advance of one and a half miles. On two occasions when the enemy pierced the line of the battalion on the left he led forward a party under intense shell and machine-gun fire, closed the gap and restored the situation.

London Gazette, 22 June, 1918.—War Office, 22 June, 1918. Correction.—The award of the Military Cross which was announced in the London Gazette, dated 4 May, 1917, to the undermentioned officer, is cancelled, the award of the D.S.O. being substituted.

ANDERSON, ROY D., Captain, Congo Carrier Section, East African Transport Corps.

London Gazette, 5 July, 1918.—"War Office, 5 July, 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette dated 4 Feb. 1918, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BARTON, BAPTIST JOHNSON, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion during eight days' operations. When his battalion suffered heavy casualties and was forced to withdraw out of a village he rallied his men with great skill and determination, and held the high ground on a ridge against counter-attacks.

BEATTY, GUY ARCHIBALD HASTINGS, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Indian Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a regiment to which he was in support was held up in an attack he led his regiment forward at the gallop under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire and occupied an important position, the capture of which enabled the other regiment to advance and take their objective. His quick decision and skilful handling of his men resulted in an important success.

BOYALL, ALFRED MOREY, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of an advanced guard battalion he pushed forward, after the capture of the first objective, and occupied a more advanced position, which was one of great importance, on his own initiative. His appreciation of the situation and display of bold initiative had considerable bearing on the success of the whole operations.

GRAY-CHEAPE, HUGH ANNESLEY, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yeomany. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led a charge against the enemy's guns with the utmost gallantry and determination. The enemy's gunners were firing at point-blank range, but the guns were captured and the gunners put out of action.

HARDRESS-LLOYD, JOHN, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Colonel), Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He organized the advance of his Tanks with great skill, and made several personal reconnaissances of the whole area to be covered.

HOARE, CHARLES HERVEY, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yeomany. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion was twice outflanked and driven back after sharp fighting, on both occasions he led counter-attacks and recaptured the position. Though he was wounded he remained with his men, showing the greatest courage and determination.

JACKSON, EDWARD DARBY, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Own Scottish Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After his battalion had gained its first objective in the face of strong and prolonged opposition, it was repeatedly and heavily counter-attacked, suffering heavy casualties. By his courage, energy and personal example he succeeded in reorganizing his battalion and in holding on to the trench system which he had gained. Later, when his battalion was very heavily attacked, his sound dispositions, prompt counter-attack, and fine leadership undoubtedly saved the situation, enabling the extreme flank of the line to be held against the enemy attack.

JAMES, CHARLES KENNETH, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in support of an attacking brigade. The prominent part played by the battalion in the day's operations was mainly due to his leadership and to the information which he had obtained by personal reconnaissance.

KNOWLES, GEORGE, D.S.O., Major, Indian Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of his regiment when his commanding officer became a casualty, and remained in command though he was wounded. He made most skilful dispositions and clung to his position with the greatest determination, though surrounded on all sides, until he was relieved. He showed great ability and courage.

LITTLE, ARTHUR CAMPDEN, D.S.O., Major, Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in a dismounted attack his right flank was left exposed, he organized several bodies of scattered infantry to protect it, and thus enabled the objective to be seized. Later, when a large gap occurred between his regiment and the next, he led three companies to fill it, and so enabled the position to be held. He showed great skill and resource.

MILLS, ARTHUR MORDAUNT, D.S.O., Major, Indian Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his squadron in an attack. Though, owing to heavy casualties, they were at first forced to withdraw a short distance, he reorganized, led them forward with great skill and determination, and captured his objective.

OSBURN, ARTHUR CARR, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On seeing the enemy approaching close to his dressing station, he carried out the evacuation of the wounded under heavy shell and rifle fire in the coolest and most gallant manner. Having cleared away all cases by ambulance train and cars, he re-established his dressing station further in rear. As officer commanding bearer divisions, he constantly inspected his line of bearer posts and forward dressing stations under heavy fire. The successful evacuation of the wounded from the divisional front was due to his careful organization and fearless supervision under the most trying conditions. His was an example of gallantry, courage, and resource worthy of the highest praise.

PLUNKETT, JAMES FREDERICK, D.S.O., M.C., D.C.M., Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during 60 hours' hand-to-hand fighting. When our line was pressed back by a counter-attack and the men began to waver on the right, he reorganized them and succeeded in re-establishing our old line. When reinforcements arrived he organized and led a successful counter-attack. He carried out in person many daring reconnaissances, and undoubtedly saved the situation at many critical moments by his prompt action.

RAIKES, GEOFFREY TAUNTON, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under very difficult conditions he organized the defence of his line against a strong enemy counter-attack. On a later occasion he led his battalion headquarters to the attack, and thereby checked the advance of the enemy, averting what might have become a very serious situation. Throughout the operations he ceaselessly exposed himself to heavy shell and machine-gun fire, and by his example of fearlessness and energy did much to stimulate the morale of his men.

CANADIAN FORCES.

DRAPER, DENIS COLBURN, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Mounted Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in several engagements. In an attack, when elements of his battalion reached the line of their final objective and held their position though both flanks were in the air, with the aid of two companies of another brigade he formed a defensive flank 500 yards long, and with great skill and coolness secured the left of the ground gained. He afterwards remained in the forward area until the evacuation of all his wounded had been organized.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ALLARDYCE, JAMES, M.M., Second Lieut., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The enemy made a violent attack which penetrated the line of the battalion on his flank and threatened to cut off his men entirely, since his other flank was already exposed. He immediately collected a few men, charged the enemy across the open, and drove them into a communication trench, at the end of which he succeeded in forming a block. Despite the very superior numbers of the enemy, and though nearly all his party had become casualties, he held this block against repeated attacks, throwing bombs continuously for three hours. He displayed the greatest dash and initiative under very heavy fire, and it was entirely due to his action that the battalion was not completely cut off.

BIBBY, ARTHUR HAROLD, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked and advanced towards his battery, he walked up and down behind his guns under heavy fire encouraging his men. Though the enemy continued to advance, he kept his guns in action till the arrival of the limbers, controlling his fire with the greatest coolness. His example was an inspiration to all.

BOOTH, PATRICK DICK, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having rallied a party of divisional machine-gunners, who were retiring, he, with one machine-gunner, succeeded in holding a ridge against the advancing enemy until an organized defence could be arranged. Later he took command of a party of infantry in order to clear a village just occupied by the enemy. Having captured five of the enemy and cleared the north end of the village, he encountered a party of 20 of the enemy, armed with bombs. Though he was wounded in the subsequent fight, the enemy was driven back, thanks to his courageous efforts and those of the officer accompanying him. It was entirely due to the gallantry displayed by these two officers that an advanced dressing station was recaptured.

BROWN, AUSTIN HANBURY, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the construction of tracks in preparation for the operations. By his splendid example and determination he completed the work in time, in spite of heavy shell fire, and by skilful organization reduced his casualties to a comparatively small number.

BROWNING, FREDERICK ARTHUR MONTAGUE, Lieut., Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of three companies whose officers had all become casualties, reorganized them, and proceeded to consolidate. Exposing himself to very heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, in two hours he had placed the front line in a strong state of defence. The conduct of this officer, both in the assault and more especially afterwards, was beyond all praise, and the successful handing over of the front to the relieving unit as an entrenched and strongly fortified position was entirely due to his energy and skill.

CARR-HARRIS, FERGUSON FITTON, M.D., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Hearing that ten men of another battalion were lying wounded in front of the position, he volunteered on completion of the relief to go to their rescue. He was out for eight hours of the night, found nine of the men alive, took two of them back to headquarters, and organized the rescue of the remainder. He showed great coolness and self-sacrifice.

CASTLE, JOSEPH PERCY, Second Lieut., West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a company. He established communication on both flanks under heavy fire. He cleverly cut off and captured an officer and two men from the rear of an enemy company, and scattered the whole company with a Lewis gun. The next day he rushed through heavy machine-gun fire to redirect the fire of the Tanks. Though twice wounded, he remained with his company, setting them a splendid example of courage and determination.

CONLAN, VERNON DOUGLAS ROBERT, Temporary Major, Army Service Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Coming up to a captured village in his car, and finding that ammunition had run out, he returned to the dump and brought some in his car under heavy machine-gun fire. He then returned and brought up Lewis gun drums, afterwards advancing with the attacking party. He showed great initiative throughout.

COURAGE, ANTHONY, M.C., Major (Temporary Colonel), Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in successfully organizing Tanks in their assembly position and making dispositions which were mainly responsible for their successful attack. He showed splendid skill and resource.

DENDY, MURRAY HEATHFIELD, M.C., Major, Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He reconnoitred sites for batteries and got the batteries to their positions before an attack. Later he showed great coolness and initiative during a counter-attack.

DUTHIE, ANDREW MAY, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with marked success, and it was largely due to his excellent leadership that the attack was pushed to its final objective. When this had been reached he took out a patrol, and put out of action an enemy machine gun, which was holding up the attack on the flank. Before withdrawing his patrol he was able to have four badly wounded men brought in, whilst on their return the men of his patrol surprised two other hostile machine guns, the crews of which were killed, and the guns were brought in. It was largely due to this officer's splendid example and fine leadership that the attack was carried to a successful end.

EDWARDS, WILLIAM ACE, Second Lieut., Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his platoon in an attack. He went forward 100 yards ahead of his men to ensure direction. Finding some machine guns enfilading them which had not been effectively dealt with by the Tanks, he rushed to the emplacement with great determination, covered the crews with his revolver, and enabled his men to surround the enemy. One officer and 14 other ranks and two machine guns were captured.

EVANS, WILLIAM MAURICE, Lieut., South Wales Borderers, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when sent up to reorganize the battalion after almost all the other officers had become casualties. Finding that the left flank had been driven back, he rallied the men and led a counter-attack which regained some high ground, which he afterwards held against numerous counter-attacks. He showed great skill and resource.

GERARD, CHARLES ROBERT, Capt., Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the flank of the battalion became exposed during an attack on a village and the enemy penetrated between the attacking and the reserve companies, he volunteered to go forward and reconnoitre the situation. He reached the village and made his way round a large portion of it, though it was still held by the enemy, obtained most valuable information, and cleared up a most obscure situation. He afterwards collected some men of various units, led them up to the firing line in the face of very heavy fire, and by his skilful fire orders and his grasp of the situation inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. He displayed the greatest coolness and initiative.

GLASIER, PHILIP MANNOCK, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his personal energy and leadership he succeeded in assembling his battalion in a shallow trench very close to the enemy. The subsequent attack was most successful, resulting in the capture of more than 70 of the enemy, three machine guns and a trench mortar. Prior to the attack he had, with persistence and resource, organized a series of most successful offensive patrols, in which prisoners were taken and serious losses inflicted on the enemy.

GOODALL, TOM, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When an attack was held up by heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, the commanding officer being killed and heavy casualties sustained, and there was grave danger of disorganization, he went forward amid a hail of bullets to locate the enemy, and signalled back to a platoon of his company to attack. With one man he dashed into a strong point, killing several of the enemy, and this enabled the platoon to capture an officer and 58 other ranks and two machine guns, and to rescue an officer and a N.C.O. who were prisoners in the hands of the enemy. He showed magnificent courage and determination.

HALLSMITH, GUTHRIE, Second Lieut., Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attacked a strong point which was held in force by the enemy and captured two machine guns and ten prisoners, and then led his men to the objective. He was eventually forced to withdraw by counter-attacks on both flanks, but hearing that an officer had been wounded and left on the field, he went forward alone to search for him. Later, during the night he led forward patrols to search for the wounded.

HAMILTON, JOHN STEVEN, Lieut., West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in an attack and captured all his objectives. He then, with one officer and two men, went forward, selected a position commanding the whole front, and remained there till a line of posts could be established. When some troops on his flank fell back during a counter-attack, seeing that they were without officers, he took command, reorganized them, and re-established them in their old position. He set a splendid example of determination and courage.

HANCOCK, JOHN ELIOT, Temporary Lieut., Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to his company commander being seriously wounded, he took command of the left company in an attack. When they came under heavy machine-gun fire he organized a frontal attack while he, with two N.C.O.'s, rushed across the open from a flank, killed or wounded all the gun teams, and put the guns out of action. He himself killed six men. In the subsequent fighting he showed great initiative in clearing the houses in a village and directing the advance.

HARTER, JAMES FRANCIS, M.C., Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Being sent forward to establish a new headquarters, after the capture of the first objective, he found some troops held up by enemy fire. Having reorganized them, he planned an attack and cleared a wood of the enemy, a prompt action which had an important effect on the progress of the operations. On several later occasions he obtained, by personal reconnaissance, most valuable information, and under difficult situations has been of the greatest assistance to battalion commanders. He has always displayed initiative, gallantry and a soldierly instinct.

HOLCROFT, CYRIL WALTER, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked and broke through the line on the right of his company, he at once formed a defensive flank and prevented the enemy from getting in rear of the front line. Later, when he was again attacked, he fought for several hours at close quarters against greatly superior forces, and finally drove the enemy back and maintained his position. His coolness and courage held up the enemy's attack and saved a most difficult situation.

JACKSON, HERBERT SELWYN, Capt., West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in assuming command of the battalion when the commanding officer had been killed and heavy casualties were being incurred and there was grave danger of disorganization. He moved about in the open under a hail of bullets, rallied the men and organized a most successful attack, all the objectives being captured. The following day, when the battalion was engaged in severe fighting, he personally conducted a Tank to the place where the fighting was fiercest, and so enabled the battalion to capture this sector of the enemy trenches. He showed magnificent courage and resource.

JAMES, WILLIAM GEORGE, Temporary Second Lieut., Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He crept through the enemy wire right up to their trenches, located and marked existing gaps and cut other gaps. In the attack he led his platoon across about 300 yards of open ground into the enemy trenches, and with two men killed 18 of the enemy. Later, he took command of the battalion owing to heavy officer casualties, and with both flanks exposed he held the enemy in check until reinforcements could reach him. He showed splendid courage and initiative.

JOFFE, WILLIAM, Second Lieut., Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Before reaching the final objective, which his company had been detailed to capture, his company commander becoming a casualty, he immediately organized a party, consisting of an N.C.O. and 12 men, and in the face of extremely heavy machine-gun and rifle grenade fire and point-blank fire from an enemy field gun rushed the position and captured the gun. Though wounded, he showed great courage and determination, and the successful capture of the final objective was entirely due to his fine leadership and quick initiative.

JOHNSTON, KENNETH ALFRED, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Hampshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Finding that the bridge which he had been ordered to cross was broken, he led his battalion over by another bridge exposed to heavy fire. During the night he dealt with a critical situation, and disposed his battalion so as to establish securely the right flank of the brigade.

KNIGHT, EDWARD SPURIN, Second Lieut., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the enemy's first rush, which overran our forward bombing blocks, this officer engaged the attacking bombers at our second block, and by the accuracy and determination of his bombing drove the enemy back to the first blocks, thereby enabling our original position to be re-established. His courage and coolness undoubtedly saved the situation.

LUCAS, CHARLES ROBERT, Temporary Capt., Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After his senior officers had become casualties he took command of the remnants of the brigade and two companies belonging to another brigade. Though unsupported by artillery or machine guns he established a line which was made the basis of a further advance when machine-gun support was available. Here he repulsed two separate counter-attacks.

LYNN, ALFRED CECIL, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company forward to the attack with great determination across 350 yards of open ground under heavy enfilade fire, dashing out in front, and being the first to enter the enemy trenches, himself killing four of the enemy and forcing eight others to surrender.

MAGINN, JOHN FRANCIS, Second Lieut., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When an officer of another regiment was very severely wounded and was unable to move he rushed forward with two stretcher-bearers under heavy machine-gun and sniper's fire and sniped the enemy for 15 minutes, covering the stretcher-bearers, who were thus able to bring the wounded officer back. He showed splendid courage and resource.

MATHIAS, FRANCIS MORGAN, Temporary Capt., Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of the battalion after the commanding officer and second-in-command became casualties. He displayed a thorough grasp of the situation, keeping in close touch with the brigade headquarters and continually readjusted the line under heavy fire. He was wounded early in the action, but continued to carry out his duties with the greatest courage and determination.

MCCUDDEN, JAMES BYFORD, M.C., M.M., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attacked and brought down an enemy two-seater machine inside our lines, both the occupants being taken prisoner. On another occasion he encountered an enemy two-seater machine at 2,000 feet. He continued the fight down to a height of 100 feet in very bad weather conditions and destroyed the enemy machine. He came down to within a few feet of the ground on the enemy's side of the lines, and finally crossed the lines at a very low altitude. He has recently destroyed seven enemy machines, two of which fell within our lines, and has set a splendid example of pluck and determination to his squadron.

McKEEVER, ANDREW EDWARD, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Flying Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While on patrol by himself over the enemy's lines in very bad weather he encountered two enemy two-seater machines and seven scouts. By skilful manoeuvring he engaged one and destroyed it. As he turned to get back to the lines five of the enemy dived on his tail and his observer engaged and destroyed two of them. After an indecisive combat with two others he attacked and destroyed one of the enemy which had overshot him. He continued the fight with the remainder until he was within 20 feet of the ground, when the enemy machines climbed and left him. He has recently destroyed ten enemy machines and has shown great courage and initiative.

MORGAN, DAVID WATTS, Temporary Major, Labour Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his camp was heavily shelled with a few N.C.O.'s and men he turned some dug-outs into a temporary dressing station and assisted the wounded in the vicinity. When shelling rendered his position untenable he brought back his men in good order. He displayed great coolness and resource.

MORGAN-GRENVILLE-GAVIN, THE HONOURABLE THOMAS GEORGE BREADALBANE, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major, Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out valuable reconnaissances, readjusted sections of the line, and arranged the assembly positions for subsequent attacks. He showed the greatest courage under difficult conditions.

MOXON, CHARLES STONE, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company in an attack. When held up by an enemy strong point, he entered a Tank and directed it to the spot, but it became ditched. He got out, and single-handed, under heavy rifle fire and a shower of bombs, attacked the strong point, killing several of the enemy and enabling a platoon of his company to capture the strong point and five prisoners. He set a magnificent example of courage and determination.

NIXON, SIE CHRISTOPHER WILLIAM, Bart., Major, Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He continued to command his battery after being wounded in two places. The accurate shooting of the battery was instrumental in repulsing an enemy counter-attack, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy.

NOTMAN, JAMES PARTRIDGE, Second Lieut., Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When some enemy machine guns were enfilading the battalion during an advance and causing heavy casualties, he rushed well ahead of his platoon and attacked the machine gunners. When they showed fight he shot two and the remainder surrendered. He returned through intense machine-gun fire, carrying a captured machine gun. He afterwards entered a house from which an enemy machine gun was firing, and captured the gun and team. He showed splendid initiative and courage.

O'BRIEN, GERALD, Second Lieut., Royal Munster Fusiliers, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the centre of the line was held up by machine-gun fire, he rushed forward alone regardless of danger, shot the enemy gunner, and captured the gun. This prompt and gallant action not only saved many lives, but also enabled the advance to continue without loss of time, which was of great importance.

PANK, CECIL HENBY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The enemy in overwhelming numbers succeeded in forcing the blocks in our trenches and temporarily cut off communications with headquarters on the flank. He immediately organized a counter-attack, and so infused his men, disorganized by heavy losses, with fresh fighting spirit that he succeeded in re-establishing touch on the flank, and with the help of another unit driving back the enemy and reforming the blocks. Though wounded he showed great personal courage, coolness and resourceful determination, which contributed largely to the success of the counter-attack.

PAUL, WILLIAM, M.C., Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy was seen from the battalion transport lines to be advancing about 400 yards away, he at once collected all battalion details, held back the enemy at close range, and held the position for four hours until relieved, thus enabling the units in rear to reform. He was severely wounded, but refused to withdraw until relieved. He showed splendid courage and determination.

PEEL, JAMES, M.M., Second Lieut., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His platoon being held up and suffering many casualties from two machine guns, which were firing from a church, he rushed forward alone and captured the first gun from the flank, killing four and wounding the remainder of the team. Some of his men having by this time caught up with him, he at once rushed them towards the rear of the second gun, which they captured, killing or wounding the whole team. His splendid courage, dashing gallantry and bold initiative were beyond all praise.

POOLE, GILBERT SANDFORD, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in an attack. He handled his battalion with great skill, and his courage and judgment contributed largely to the success of the operation.

POWER, ROWLAND EDWARD, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After his battalion had suffered heavy casualties in an attack he went forward, reorganized it, and drove the enemy from their position. He showed the greatest initiative and resource throughout the operation.

ROSEH, JOHN BRENCHELEY, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On our cavalry being temporarily held up, and whilst the reinforcing infantry were still some way in the rear, he immediately despatched two companies to the assistance of the cavalry, and himself led up a third company as reinforcements. His prompt action immediately resulted in the capture of the objective with slight casualties.

RUNDALL, CHARLES FRANK, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He had under his command two companies, and in addition collected a mixed force of two field companies and other details of several different units. Some of these being greatly disorganized, he rapidly reorganized them and formed a defensive line, on which he repelled a small local attack, and shortly after dispersed a considerable body of the enemy which was forming up for an attack. He rendered invaluable assistance in directing a counter-attack and in reconnoitring a front of 7,000 yards under heavy fire.

RUSSELL, GEORGE GRAY, Lieut.-Colonel, King Edward's Horse, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of two squadrons attached to an infantry brigade during an advance. He frequently moved about in the foremost line directing reconnaissance work under heavy machine-gun fire, and when the right flank of the brigade was dangerously exposed he conducted a valuable reconnaissance with great skill and resource and cleared up the situation.

SPENCE-JONES, CECIL JOHN HERBERT, Lieut.-Colonel, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy counter-attack. He went forward into the firing line and remained with his men, and by his presence and example under heavy fire encouraged them to hold on to a very difficult and exposed position.

STIDSTON, CHARLES ALGERNON, M.D., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when his dressing-station was very heavily shelled throughout a whole day and received several direct hits. It was impossible to remove the wounded, and throughout the day he moved about continuously, arranging for their safety with utter disregard of danger. It was owing to his fearless example and splendid organization that all the wounded were finally removed without further casualties.

STIRLING, JOHN ALEXANDER, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major, Scots Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Orders having been received that the battalion was to retake certain high ground, he, both before the attack, when he made a careful reconnaissance, and after, was continuously up and down the line under heavy machine-gun fire. His initiative was to a great degree the reason for a difficult situation being cleared up successfully, while his courage and contempt of danger inspired all ranks with the greatest confidence.

STORR, LEYCESTER PENRHYN, Temporary Major, Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of the battalion, on both company commanders of the leading companies becoming casualties, he personally led on the men under heavy fire to the capture of the first objective. Having reorganized the battalion, he led it on to the second objective, which was successfully taken. By his coolness, courage and ability he set a splendid example to all ranks, and the success of the operations was due to his good leadership and initiative during a critical period.

STUART, GERALD FITZGERALD, Lieut., West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion was counter-attacked and in great danger of being out-flanked he was sent with a party of headquarter details to defend the right flank, which was entirely in the air. With less than 30 men he succeeded in arresting the advance of about two companies of the enemy, and remained exposed to heavy fire at close range for three hours, showing splendid courage and determination.

TILLOTSON, JOHN EDWIN, Temporary Second Lieut., West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led men of his own and other battalions forward in the face of heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, and was entirely responsible for the capture of the company's objective. When other troops who were passing through his company were held up by a strong point 300 yards forward and suffering heavy casualties, he dashed forward in the face of direct fire from three machine guns and attacked them with the bayonet. He killed 12 of the enemy, put all three guns out of action, and captured two trench mortars. He set a magnificent example of courage and determination.

TUCKEY, ELLIOT CLARKE, Second Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He kept his gun in action until ordered to withdraw. When the detachments had been withdrawn he went forward by himself across 50 yards of open ground under heavy fire to attend to a wounded officer. He returned for water, and finally carried the man back under very heavy fire. He showed splendid courage and self-sacrifice.

UPTON, WILLIAM ARTHUR, Temporary Second Lieut., Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He captured an enemy trench and three machine guns. He held on to the position, though subjected to fire from all sides, and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. When ordered to withdraw at dusk he covered the withdrawal with rifle grenades. His courage and contempt of danger were magnificent.

WARDEN, HERBERT LAWTON, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of the advanced troops in an attack, and maintained his headquarters in a forward position under heavy fire. He drove off three enemy counter-attacks, and handled his reserve with such skill as to be able to withdraw without loss. He then maintained a position where he was able to keep in touch with three companies of another battalion which were under his command. He showed splendid initiative and skill.

WESTMACOTT, GUY RANDOLPH, Lieut., Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His flank was completely exposed, both during the attack and after reaching the objective, and he had to form a defensive flank with his company throughout the whole action. On the enemy delivering a heavy counter-attack on this exposed flank he formed his company to the right, and shattered it with steady and admirably controlled fire. On reaching the objective he consolidated, covering the flank of the battalion by digging a very strong line, and also providing further protection for the flank of the division by means of several machine guns. The complete success of the attack and the immediate defeat of the hostile counter-attack were largely due to his resource and prompt action.

WILSON, BEVIL THOMSON, Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He reached some canal bridges with the leading waves of infantry, and destroyed the charges of explosives before the bridges could be blown up. During an enemy counter-attack he collected what men he could and drove the enemy back, spending the rest of the day and night in organizing a defensive flank under heavy fire. During the withdrawal across the canal he remained behind until orders were received for the destruction of the bridges. He showed splendid courage and initiative.

CANADIAN FORCES.

BIRDS, SAMUEL BUTTREY, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in support during an attack, and when the leading companies were held up he advanced straight to the position and captured it, together with three machine guns and a large number of prisoners. He reconnoitred the whole position and sent in most accurate sketches and reports. He showed great courage and skill.

BORDEN, ALLISON HART, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his personal reconnaissance prior to the attack, in the face of great danger from machine-gun and rifle fire, he obtained sufficient information to modify his plans so as to deal with the unexpected situation caused by the enemy's counter-attack. With complete disregard for his own safety, he made a tour of the line, making the necessary adjustments in dispositions to ensure its being held. His example to his battalion was magnificent, and his determination, courageous conduct, and skilful leadership inspired all ranks to hold on to their objective, even though their losses were very heavy.

GRANT, ALEXANDER, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company to the final objective and organized the defence. When his company was in support and a counter-attack was imminent, he led his company forward through heavy shell fire, established it immediately behind the front line, and took charge of the situation. He set a splendid example to his men.

McEVAN, JOHN ALEXANDER, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. When all the other officers of his company became casualties, he placed himself in front of his company, under heavy fire, and led them with the greatest skill and determination to their final objective. Though three times buried by shells, he continued to hold the line for four days.

McNAUGHTON, ANDREW GEORGE LATTA, Lieut.-Colonel, Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as counter-battery staff officer. He carried out daring reconnaissances, and observed the enemy's batteries from an exposed position under very heavy fire. On one occasion he crossed the enemy's lines in low-flying aeroplane, obtaining valuable information as to the enemy's batteries. He rendered most valuable service during a long period.

NEWFOUNDLAND FORCES.

BUTLER, BERTRAM, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When two attacks had been held up, on his own initiative he organized and led another attack and captured the position. He set a magnificent example of courage and determination.

London Gazette, 18 July, 1918.—"War Office, 18 July, 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette dated 18 Feb. 1918, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

McDONALD, SAMUEL, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. When nearly all the officers had become casualties, and the attack was held up, he not only made a dangerous reconnaissance alone, but subsequently, on three separate occasions during the day, reorganized parties of his battalion, and led them forward in spite of heavy fire and severe losses. He showed magnificent courage and coolness.

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

BENZIE, ROBERT, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during lengthy operations. He constantly forced back the enemy and readjusted his line under heavy fire.

After nearly all the officers of the brigade had become casualties, he organized the remnants into a unit, which he personally led, with the greatest courage, in a counter-attack, remaining in command of the advanced elements until relieved by another division.

BOYLE, CHARLES ROGER CAVENDISH, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during lengthy operations. He led his battalion to an attack, placing himself so that all his men could see him, and, despite the heaviest fire, broke through all opposition. Later, he was ordered to counter-attack over a large area which was swept by severe shell and machine-gun fire. He initiated the advance by section rushes, and then walked calmly forward with his battalion. His personal courage and resource were magnificent.

BRYCE, EDWARD DANIEL, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of tanks in an attack. After the capture of the first objective he collected and reorganized his command and carried out a further attack. On the following day he led some of his tanks in an attack on a village, which he captured, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. His coolness and courage were an inspiration to all, and his judgment and ability contributed largely to the success of the operations.

CROSSE, RICHARD BANASTRE, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during lengthy operations. He displayed great ability in grasping the possibilities of the situation, and in improving the defensive and offensive properties of the line. He personally reconnoitred positions close to the enemy posts, which he caused to be occupied. His indifference to personal danger was most marked.

HOTBLACK, FREDERICK ELLIOTT, D.S.O., M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Norfolk Regt. and Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He reorganized the infantry whose officers had become casualties, collected tanks, and succeeded in launching a fresh attack under heavy fire. He set a splendid example of courage and initiative on this and many other occasions.

JAMES, ARCHIBALD HUGH, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling the troops under his command during lengthy operations. After severe fighting, he had forced his way forward, only to be driven back by a heavy enemy attack, but by his courage and energy he regained his position. Later, the situation becoming critical, he made a personal reconnaissance under intense fire, cleared up an obscure situation, and, on his own initiative, led his battalion forward again to their objective. He gave a fine example of courage and initiative to all ranks.

JANSON, JAMES THEODORE, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of a battalion which was in reserve during an enemy attack, and collected and led a large number of men of various units with the greatest coolness and skill. He carried out a reconnaissance of the position, got the situation well in hand, and by his fine example forestalled every attempt of the enemy to break through.

KNOX, ROBERT SINCLAIR, D.S.O., Temporary Major, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion when in command of a battalion. Owing to previous hostile attacks, the position of the line his battalion took over was very uncertain. By a personal night reconnaissance he was able to adjust the line, and later, when the enemy commenced a bombing attack, he again went forward to reconnoitre the position, which was very critical, and then organized a successful attack, driving back the enemy and taking prisoners. His courage throughout was magnificent.

McCUDDEN, JAMES BYFORD, D.S.O., M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attacked enemy formations, both when leading his patrol and single-handed. By his fearlessness and clever manoeuvring he has brought down 31 enemy machines, ten of which have fallen in our lines. His pluck and determination have had a marked effect on the efficiency of the squadron.

McKAIG, JOHN BICKERTON, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a strong enemy attack. When the enemy penetrated the front of the unit on his left, and his flank thereby became exposed, he supervised the redistribution of his battalion and the formation of a defensive flank under intense fire. By his disregard of danger, and the confidence with which he inspired his men by his splendid example, he enabled his battalion to hold their ground against frontal and flank attacks during a most critical period, when a break-through would have had very serious consequences to the whole line.

NASH, HENRY EDMUND PALMER, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an advance. Owing to the troops on his right having failed to gain their objective, he was obliged to detach two companies to safeguard his flank. When this was secure he led them forward, reorganized his battalion, which had been held up by heavy fire, and succeeded in capturing his objective. Throughout the day he showed great contempt of danger, moving freely under the heaviest fire of all kinds, and his splendid example gave great encouragement to the troops under his command.

NELSON, HERBERT, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Brigadier-General), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In spite of having no support from tanks or artillery, he led his brigade forward in face of heavy opposition and captured all his objectives. Subsequently, when the brigade was in reserve, and the enemy had made a considerable advance, he at once counter-attacked, driving them back with heavy losses over two miles, again without the assistance of artillery. His personal conduct was most gallant throughout.

ROSER, JOHN BRENCHLEY, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked in great force positions held by his battalion he displayed the greatest courage and ability, inspiring his men to beat off three attacks. When finally pressed back by superior numbers he reorganized the remnants of the battalion, and advancing, reoccupied the trenches from which he had been temporarily ejected.

STIRLING, COLIN ROBERT HOSTE, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He reorganized his company under most difficult conditions and led them forward to the assembly position. He carried out a personal reconnaissance of our position, getting close to the enemy line and sending in valuable information. He showed splendid initiative and resource.

THORNE, AUGUSTUS FRANCIS ANDREW NICOL, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion had captured its objective in an attack he organized the consolidation of the position and supervised the placing of strong points under very heavy fire. It was mainly through his excellent dispositions that the battalion maintained its position against heavy counter-attacks. He showed great coolness and ability.

WATSON, HUGH WHARTON MYDDLETON, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He held his position against continued heavy enemy attacks. His battalion was subjected to intense shell fire throughout, but, regardless of danger, he moved about continually among his men, organizing the defence and encouraging all ranks by his fearless example, and proved himself a magnificent leader. On the previous day he had carried out a successful operation against the enemy, capturing and consolidating an important area.

WELCH, HAROLD ECHALAG, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was ordered to capture an enemy position situated on high ground. He led his battalion forward with the greatest determination and skill, under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, and succeeded in establishing his position on the reverse slopes of the ridge. He inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, and maintained his position against superior numbers until the whole ridge was captured on the following day. His successful attack contributed largely to the success of the whole operation.

WESTON, SPENCER VAUGHAN PERCY, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy launched a heavy attack on his position he moved up his reserves and organized the defence with such skill that, though the enemy attacked continually for six hours, his battalion withstood all the enemy's attempts to break through and inflicted very heavy casualties. His tactical skill, coolness, and example were mainly responsible for the successful resistance offered by his battalion.

WIGGIN, WILLIAM HENRY, D.S.O., Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading a charge on the enemy's position. His fearless leadership and example inspired all ranks and were largely responsible for the success of the charge, which swept over an enemy battery firing at point-blank range.

CANADIAN FORCE.

McLAUGHLIN, LORNE TALBOT, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He deployed his battalion for the attack under very difficult conditions and heavy fire, captured all his objectives, and consolidated the position. His conduct was an inspiration to all under his command.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

BARKER, WILLIAM GEORGE, M.C., Temporary Capt., General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When on scouting and patrol work he has on five different occasions brought down and destroyed five enemy aeroplanes and two balloons, though on two of these occasions he was attacked by superior numbers. On each occasion the hostile machines were observed to crash to earth, the wreckage bursting into flames. His splendid example of fearlessness and magnificent leadership have been of inestimable value to his squadron.

BELCHER, RAYMOND DOUGLAS, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On the enemy threatening the front and flank of the battery he continued to move about among his guns, encouraging the men and supervising the laying of the guns. In spite of losses he continued to keep up the fire of his guns, repelling all attempts of the enemy to break through. Although dangerously wounded he continued to command the battery until he was carried away. The splendid work accomplished by the battery was in a great measure due to his skillful command, determination and fine example.

BION, WILFRED RUPRECHT, Temporary Second Lieut., Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of his tank in an attack he engaged a large number of enemy machine guns in strong positions, thus assisting the infantry to advance. When his tank was put out of action by a direct hit he occupied a section of trench with his men and machine guns, and opened fire on the enemy. He moved about in the open, giving directions to other tanks when they arrived, and at one period fired a Lewis gun with great effect from the top of his tank. He also got a captured machine gun into action against the enemy, and when reinforcements arrived he took command of a company of infantry whose commander was killed. He showed magnificent courage and initiative in a most difficult situation.

BONNYMAN, EDWARD WILLIAM, Temporary Capt., Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The enemy attacked after a heavy bombardment, and gained a footing in the trenches on both flanks of his company's position. Though his company suffered heavy losses he kept the situation well in hand by his coolness and magnificent example and finally succeeded in driving the enemy out of his trenches, and inflicting heavy casualties on them.

BROOME, RALPH HOWARD, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Major), Wiltshire Regt. and Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded 30 tanks during the operations, and handled them with the greatest courage and ability. His tanks cleared the way for the infantry to a most important enemy position, and enabled the infantry to consolidate it. He set a splendid example of pluck and determination throughout.

BULTEEL, JOHN CROCKER, M.C., Capt., Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack he was in command of the leading squadron, charged the enemy line and in spite of heavy enfilade fire, organized the consolidation of the position against greatly superior forces. He displayed great courage and admirable resource.

CARRINGTON, CHARLES WORRELL, Second Lieut., Grenadier Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When part of the advance was held up by two enemy machine guns firing from a house he at once organized and led a bayonet charge and captured the house and its occupants. He then led a successful attack on the second objective, and having captured it, beat off a counter-attack. Later, when his flank became exposed, and the enemy attacked him from the rear, he fought his way back, and brought his men out in good order. He set a magnificent example of courage and initiative.

CHEAPE, GEORGE RONALD HAMILTON, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Brigadier-General), Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his brigade with great courage and ability, and captured all his objectives. Subsequently when the enemy had broken through on the flank of his position he repelled 12 heavy attacks in spite of greatly reduced numbers. This splendid performance was mainly due to his magnificent example of courage and determination.

CRAWFORD, JOHN, Temporary Second Lieut., Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After the enemy had broken through the front line he led his platoon, and a few men from other units, to a forward position of a new line protecting the guns. Although twice driven out by shell-fire he rallied his men on each occasion and attacked again, holding his position long enough to enable the gunners to dismantle their guns and wireless station, and to save important documents. He showed splendid courage and resource.

CROUCH, THOMAS ALFRED, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Irish Fusiliers, Special Reserve, attached Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed the greatest judgment and initiative in leading his tanks in an attack. He led them forward to a village in the enemy's lines and, moving about on foot under heavy fire, succeeded in getting them all through the village. Though he had no infantry support he overcame the enemy's resistance and held a most important position.

DAMIERS, GEORGE MURRAY, M.C., Capt., Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his squadron with courage and ability when he was the only officer with the squadron. He charged the enemy's position at the gallop under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. He succeeded in holding the flank against heavy enfilade fire, thereby enabling the rest of the regiment to advance.

DAWES, GEORGE, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major, South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during lengthy operations. He took over an important line and established a strong position. He rendered prompt assistance to a battalion on his left in a successful attack. Later, he organized and directed the withdrawal of the battalion with such skill that hardly any casualties were suffered, and all ammunition and tools were moved back. His courage and cheerfulness never failed, though he was constantly under heavy fire, and was suffering from gas.

DIGBY-WINGFIELD-DIGBY, FREDERICK JAMES BOSWORTH, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his squadron in a charge, in which more than 100 prisoners together with a field gun were captured. He handled his squadron with great courage and ability, and the success of the operation was entirely due to the quickness with which he dismounted his men, bringing rifle fire to bear on the enemy's guns, and putting one team out of action.

DURRANT, ARTHUR WILLIAM, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an advanced post. He was repeatedly attacked by large numbers of the enemy. More than once portions of the post were lost, and he was in danger of being surrounded, but with splendid courage he organized repeated counter-attacks, personally disposing of many of the enemy in hand-to-hand fighting, and withdrew in good order, when his ammunition was exhausted.

ELEY, EDWARD HENRY, C.M.G., Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of the brigade, he displayed marked courage and ability, and materially assisted in checking the enemy at a most critical moment. He handled the batteries with the greatest skill, and succeeded in keeping himself in touch with the situation on both flanks.

FROST, JOHN MEADOWS, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a long and continuous advance of the enemy against our positions, he, quickly appreciating the situation, split his battery into sections, and ultimately materially assisted in staying the advance. Later, though men and horses were tired with continuous marching, he achieved a mastery performance in moving his battery in the dark over difficult, mountainous and unrecognised country for some considerable distance, so that he succeeded in arriving in time to take part in the bombardment of an important objective.

GEE, ERNEST EDWARD, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Major), Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He saved the guns of his battery which were lying in "No Man's Land" close to the enemy's lines. He reconnoitred the position, and found that the enemy had completed preparations to blow up the guns, and having removed the detonators and disconnected the fuses, he directed the withdrawal of the guns. Though Very lights were sent up continually, and the position and the track leading from it were subjected to continual shell fire, he dug the guns out and got them safely to our lines with only one casualty. He showed magnificent coolness and courage at his difficult task and rendered great service by saving four valuable guns.

GERARD, WALTER DOUGLAS, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Yeomanry and Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the tank in which he was going forward became ditched he withdrew his crew from the tank, and, finding it impossible to extricate the tank, formed his men into a Lewis gun section and led them forward into action. He organized the crews of three other disabled tanks as Lewis gunners, and also brought a captured machine gun into action with great effect. He showed great initiative and determination.

GILLILAN, EDWARD GIBSON, Capt., Coldstream Guards, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. Though nearly all the officers and platoon sergeants of his company became casualties early in the advance, he organized and led a successful attack on a strong enemy position, inflicting heavy casualties and capturing 200 prisoners. He then led his company to the final objective under very heavy fire, and when in danger of being surrounded owing to the flanks of the position being exposed, he withdrew and established a strong defensive position and beat off an enemy attack. He showed magnificent courage and ability.

GROUNDS, GEORGE AMBROSE, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When three of his tanks were disabled he formed his men into Lewis gun sections and led them into action to assist in repelling the enemy's attack. While going along a trench he met a party of the enemy, and by using enemy bombs he disorganized and held up the party single-handed. He got forward another tank in conjunction with a party of infantry, cleared about 200 yards of enemy trench, capturing 15 machine guns and a large number of prisoners. He showed the greatest initiative and coolness and good leadership, which resulted in a successful advance being carried out.

HARCOURT, ALEXANDER CLARENCE, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Berkshire Regt., Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When tanks were required to assist the infantry who had been held up in an attack on a village he at once went forward on his own initiative with two tanks. They overcame all enemy resistance and held the village until the infantry arrived. The capture of the village was due to his promptness and initiative.

HENSHALL, LOUIS SYDNEY, Capt. (Acting Major), South Lancashire Regt., Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He followed his tanks closely on foot in the attack, and, having captured the first objective, collected his tanks and led them forward against a village, which he captured and held. He showed great ability and set a magnificent example of contempt of danger, moving about in the open in full view of the enemy under heavy sniping and machine-gun fire.

HEZLET, CHARLES OWEN, Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Garrison Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He kept his guns firing and encouraged his men until the enemy were within 300 yards of the battery. He remained at his post though the enemy's barrage had passed beyond the battery, and the machine-gun fire was very severe. Every round in the battery was fired. He gave a very fine example of coolness, courage and efficiency.

HUBBARD, REV. HAROLD EVELYN, Army Chaplains' Department. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When several men had been killed by a sniper in attempting to rescue a wounded man from a derelict tank, he went out, regardless of danger, and brought the man in. His gallantry and courage were an inspiration to the men throughout the operations.

HUNT, GERALD PONSONBY SNEYD, C.M.G., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He established and organized the line after an attack by siting a series of posts on commanding ground. During an enemy attack he held his position against repeated thrusts by the enemy, although his right flank was exposed, and when touch was lost with the brigade on his right he re-established communication. He showed splendid leadership and courage.

LATCH, ARTHUR RONALD, Temporary Second Lieut., Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took his tank into action and by his courage and determination saved an infantry battalion from a desperate situation. He drove the enemy from some strong points which were threatening the flank of the infantry. When darkness came on he was surrounded by the enemy, who climbed on to the top of his tank and seized hold of his machine guns, but with great presence of mind and courage he succeeded in driving them off and inflicted heavy casualties upon them. He then dispersed the enemy who were assembling for a counter-attack. He handled his tank in a most able manner under very difficult conditions, and the assistance which he rendered was of the greatest value.

LONGDEN, ALFRED APPLEBY, Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy broke through on the left of his position he went forward under heavy fire close to the enemy and reconnoitred the situation. He rallied his men, and, after a counter-attack, got his battery into position very rapidly and opened fire. He rendered valuable assistance to the infantry in the neighbourhood, and kept his guns in action under most difficult conditions and heavy and continuous fire.

MAURICE-JONES, KENNETH WYN, Second Lieut., Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battery received an S.O.S. call while it was being heavily bombed with gas and high explosive shells he got all the guns into action within 30 seconds. He moved about regardless of danger, encouraging his men while two ammunition dumps were blown up close beside him. As soon as the battery ceased fire he carried a wounded man to safety, discarding his gas helmet, and though suffering from the effects of gas, continued to encourage his men and assist the wounded until he collapsed. Later, when an ammunition dump was set alight by enemy shell-fire he at once attempted to extinguish it, and continued his efforts until the dump exploded. He set a magnificent example of courage and initiative.

McELROY, FREDERICK WILLIAM, Temporary Second Lieut., Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in attack. He drove the enemy back and captured two strongly-held craters. When his tank caught fire and had to be evacuated he remained inside in spite of the fumes from his Lewis gun, and held the enemy back single-handed when they attempted to capture his tank, inflicting heavy casualties on them. When his crew, many of whom were wounded, were surrounded in a shell-hole he killed eight of the enemy with his revolver, and it was owing to his great courage and coolness that the tank and the crew were saved.

MENZIES, ALASTAIR FORBES, Temporary Lieut., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He held his ground during an enemy attack in a communication trench leading towards the enemy's lines and brought heavy enfilade fire to bear on the enemy as they passed his position. His determined action gained time, which was of vital importance to the re-organization of the main line of defence. He organized a bombing attack, regained 200 yards of trench, and established a block. The enemy made five most determined attacks on his position and suffered great loss without gaining any ground. By his courage, coolness and leadership he saved the situation and assisted in inflicting a severe defeat on the enemy.

MURPHY, WILLIAM HENRY, Major, London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Whilst in command of the battalion he reconnoitred the whole of the position and was continually in the front line, where his unflinching cheerfulness was an inspiration to all ranks. On the occasion of an attack he successfully led his battalion in support at very short notice and in darkness. Later, he directed the withdrawal with remarkable skill, and on another occasion, when the outpost line held by his battalion was attacked in large force by the enemy, and eventually pressed back, he re-established the line of posts and organized them into a defensive position, maintaining them until relieved. He displayed magnificent courage, leadership and ability.

MURRAY-LYON, DAVID MURRAY, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked and penetrated the line after intense fighting and continual bombing attacks, by his courage and personal example he succeeded in driving them out and held his position against further heavy attacks with splendid coolness and determination.

NICOLLS, EDWARD HUGH JASPER, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. When his right company met with strong resistance from the enemy he went to the position and by his courageous example encouraged his men to hold on until reinforcements arrived. His prompt action at an important period of the operation resulted in the whole of his objective being eventually captured and consolidated. He proved himself a gallant and capable leader.

PEARSON, ALGERNON GEORGE, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Berkshire Regt., Special Reserve and Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He launched a successful attack with his tanks at very short notice, captured a village in the enemy's lines, held it until the infantry established themselves in the position, and brought his tanks safely out of action. He showed the greatest ability and courage in a most difficult operation. He again led his tanks into action two days later with excellent results.

PRATT, DOUGLAS HENRY, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Irish Regt. and Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. It was largely owing to his careful preparations and excellent leadership and organization that his tanks were successful in reaching all their objectives. He directed the operations on foot, going forward in front of the infantry and in the face of strong opposition. He never spared himself, and showed the greatest courage and contempt of danger.

RAIKES, DAVID TAUNTON, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), South Wales Borderers, Special Reserve, attached Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He directed his tanks in an attack with utter disregard of danger, continually going about on foot giving orders in full view of the enemy and exposed to heavy fire. On the following day he directed nine other tanks in addition to his own in the attack, and set a magnificent example of courage and contempt of danger throughout.

RICE-JONES, ARTHUR PHILIP, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of the construction of forward lines necessary for the operations he worked under shell fire during the whole of one night and completed the work. On the next night he re-established communication when one of the cables was cut by shell fire a short time before the attack. Later, during an enemy attack, he collected a party of about 100 men, organized the defence, and held up the enemy's advance for about four hours, at a most critical time, until reinforced. He set a splendid example of courage and initiative.

ROBINSON, LAWRENCE, Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy attack he led his company forward to assist the infantry and established a defensive line. The gallant defence which he made materially checked the enemy's advance and was of the greatest importance in facilitating the recapture of the position later in the day. He showed great initiative and determination.

ROSS-SKINNER, HARRY, M.C., Capt., Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He held his position for two days against repeated enemy attacks and succeeded in recapturing some ground which had been lost. He carried out a very difficult relief with great skill, in spite of the close proximity of the enemy, and showed splendid leadership and resource throughout the operations.

ASHLEY-SCARLETT, HENRY, Capt. (Temporary Major), Reserve of Officers, Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during two heavy enemy counter-attacks. He reorganized troops, who had been driven back, exposing himself freely in face of severe machine-gun and rifle fire, and displaying the greatest determination and coolness. In the second attack he showed splendid courage and resource in rallying and encouraging the men, and although blown out of a trench by a shell and badly shaken, he remained at his post until the battalion was relieved.

SCOTT, WILLIAM, M.C., Capt., Royal Irish Fusiliers, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a strong point on the way to the assembly position was found to be still in the possession of the enemy he took command of the battalion, the commanding officer being wounded, and led them to the capture of the position with the greatest gallantry. His coolness, courage and leadership, under heavy fire at a critical moment were of the greatest value.

SKEY, CYRIL OSCAR, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. When left with one officer only, he reorganized the remnants of the battalion and by his good example and leadership succeeded in rallying the men, who had been much shaken, and holding on to his position for 48 hours.

SMELTZER, ARTHUR SIDNEY, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On the enemy attacking, he led a counter-attack and succeeded in clearing the enemy from a strong point, which he held until forced to withdraw. This withdrawal he effected with great skill, inflicting considerable losses on the enemy. Later, he took command of a composite battalion, and having checked the hostile advance for three hours, during which time he was heavily engaged, established a sound defensive flank, maintaining the line until relieved. He showed great coolness and disregard of danger, and inspired his men by his example of fearlessness and determination.

SOMERSET, HENRY ROBERT SOMERS FITZROY DE VERE, Lieut., Coldstream Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men with great dash and determination in an attack, and, having captured the final objective, he organized and led an attack on a strong point, which he captured. He was driven out by heavy shell fire, but at once led another attack and regained and held the position and captured a field gun. He set a magnificent example of courage, initiative and leadership.

STRIKE, HENRY RICHARD, Temporary Major, Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He established an advanced headquarters when the objective was captured, superintended the consolidation of the position, and sent in most valuable reports. He showed untiring energy and initiative.

VAN SOMEREN, WILLIAM VERNON LOGAN, M.C., Temporary Major, Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst in command of his battalion. He displayed the greatest courage in rallying the men of his own and other units, who had been heavily attacked. He showed great contempt of danger, and his behaviour amidst heavy shell and machine-gun fire, to which he was constantly exposed in reorganizing his battalion, undoubtedly put fresh heart into the men and enabled the position to be held.

VINCE, WILLIAM BERNARD, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. He led his battalion with great courage and skill in a counter-attack, which ejected the enemy from their trenches and resulted in the capture of many prisoners and eight machine guns.

WALSH, JAMES, Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion. During continual and heavy hostile attacks he visited all portions of his line, regardless of personal danger, and it was owing to his courage and ability in dealing with critical and constantly changing situations that his line was held. He set a splendid example of fearlessness and devotion to duty to all under him.

WILLIAMS, FRANCIS SEYMOUR, Lieut., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. When the enemy were surrounding his position he withdrew his section gradually a short distance. Having collected a few stragglers and a small party of infantry he led them forward to the attack, drove the enemy back, and recaptured a battery which had been lost. Though again forced to withdraw he succeeded in establishing a defensive position, which he held with the greatest courage and determination.

WITHAM, ALEXANDER, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy attack he maintained the fire of his battery throughout the day in close support of the infantry, and finally man-handled his guns for 400 yards to a position whence the teams could hook in and saved all the guns. He showed the greatest coolness and resource.

WOODWARD, LESLIE COLLINS, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a brigade. Hearing that the enemy had broken through on his right, he brought up three guns on to a crest, and for several hours fought his battery under heavy artillery, machine-gun and rifle fire, only stopping it when it was no longer possible to see. Throughout the day he displayed the greatest coolness and courage, and the work performed by his battery was invaluable at a critical time.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BROWN, ARCHIE FAIRBURN, Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led his men over very difficult ground to the capture of the first objective and, when two other company commanders were wounded, he took command of all the assaulting troops and led a successful attack on the final objective. Though he was severely wounded, he remained at the captured position until it was consolidated. His courage and ability were instrumental in securing the success of the attack.

CARTER, ALBERT DESBRISAY, Major, Infantry and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He destroyed two enemy aeroplanes, drove down several others out of control, and on two occasions attacked enemy troops from a low altitude. He showed great keenness and dash as a patrol leader.

CRAWFORD, JOHN KNOX, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded two companies in an attack, and when the advance was held up and the situation became critical he rallied his men and led them successfully to the objective, capturing 59 prisoners and five machine guns. His initiative and determination were alone responsible for the success of the operation.

MACPHERSON, JOHN ROSS, Temporary Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After a personal reconnaissance he led his company forward and surrounded and captured an enemy strong point together with its garrison, in spite of determined resistance and intense shell fire. His energy and initiative were entirely responsible for the success of the operation which straightened out the line for a further successful attack on the following day.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

DIXON, ERNEST WILLIAM, Lieut., Imperial Camel Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack, the enemy in turn counter-attacked on the flank of the battalion. He at once grasped the situation, took command of more than 200 men of various units, and held on to a portion of rising ground which was vital to the whole position. Having driven off the attack, he remained in command of the hill for two days, the retention of which vital point was almost entirely due to his personal example and courage.

WILLSALEN, THOMAS LESLIE, Major, Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With his squadron he encountered at night a party of the enemy who opened fire on his men. He called upon the enemy to surrender and succeeded in capturing the whole party of 230 of the enemy. He showed the greatest coolness and courage.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

HARTIGAN, MARCUS MICHAEL, Major, Defence Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led the assaulting companies with great fearlessness, and was the first to enter the enemy's trench. He showed splendid powers of organization in directing the consolidation of the captured position, and inspired all ranks by his fine example.

London Gazette, 23 July, 1918.—"Admiralty, 23 July, 1918.—Honours for Services in the Operations against Zeebrugge and Ostend on the Night of the 22nd-23rd April, 1918. The King has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the undermentioned Officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

OSBORNE, EDWARD OLIVER BRUDENELL SEYMOUR, Commander, R.N. Gunner Officer on Staff of Vice-Admiral Dover. Was responsible for the fitting out of Vindictive with howitzers, mortars, pom-pom and machine guns. During the action displayed an exceptional combination of knowledge, skill, courage and devotion to duty in circumstances of great difficulty and danger.

GODSAL, ALFRED EDMUND, Commander, R.N. (Since killed in action). This officer in brilliant led the Ostend blockships and stood in to the shore in the face of a tremendous barrage from the shore batteries, the wind having shifted and driven back the smoke screen at a critical moment. His spirit and bearing were those of a very gallant officer; he at once volunteered on hearing that another operation was in contemplation.

HELYAR, KENNETH CARY, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. (North Star). While his vessel was lying totally disabled and under heavy fire from shore batteries off Zeebrugge, displayed the greatest bravery and devotion to duty. He refused to leave his ship until she was sinking under his feet. Showed throughout an admirable example to those under him.

BODDIE, RONALD CHARLES, Engineer Lieut.-Commander, R.N. (Thetis). When both engines of Thetis had been disabled and the order to clear the engine-room given, the ship being in a sinking condition, this officer returned to the engine-room. He got the starboard engine going ahead, thereby enabling the ship to be turned into the fairway before she was sunk.

HOARE, KEITH ROBIN, D.S.C., Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Commander), Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. When Sirius was sinking he went alongside in his motor-launch under very heavy fire and took off 50 of the crew; then proceeding to Brilliant he took on board 18 men, and afterwards returning to Sirius took off remainder of officers and crew. He showed the utmost coolness and judgment in handling his vessel throughout.

CAMPBELL, HAROLD GEORGE, Lieut., R.N. (Daffodil). Handled his ship magnificently under extremely heavy and unceasing fire; but for his skill and devotion the storming parties from Vindictive could neither have landed, nor, having been landed, recovered. During the greater part of the time he was suffering from a wound in the eyes.

BONHAM-CARTER, STUART SUMNER, Lieut., R.N. (Intrepid). Handled his ship with great skill and coolness in a position of considerable danger under heavy fire. Great credit is due to him for his success in sinking Intrepid in the Bruges Canal.

DICKINSON, CECIL COURTENAY, Lieut., R.N. Was in command of the demolition party, displaying able leadership, and did splendid work on the mole. Was of the greatest assistance in securing Vindictive alongside and in facilitating the retirement from the mole. His work after the ship had left the mole was invaluable.

HENDERSON, OSCAR, Lieut., R.N. (Iris II.). When a shell carried away the port side of the bridge of his ship and caused a serious fire amongst the ammunition and bombs, he led a volunteer fire party with a hose on to the upper deck to quench the fire. Took over the command of the ship after Commander Gibbs had been mortally wounded.

WELMAN, ARTHUR ERIC POLE, D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Navy. During the action the units of the coastal motor-boat flotilla under his command were handled in a masterly manner, rendering the greatest service in screening and rescue work. He, himself, was in a coastal motor-boat, and was always in the most exposed positions across the harbour entrance covering Vindictive, Iris II. and Daffodil by smoke screen.

ANNESLEY, JOHN CAMPBELL, Lieut., R.N. In command of a coastal motor-boat showed great bravery when under heavy machine-gun and battery fire at short range. He continued to make smoke screens, and only withdrew when he and all his crew had been wounded.

BILLYARD-LEAKE, EDWARD WHALEY, Lieut., R.N. (Iphigenia). Exhibited the greatest bravery, and is deserving of much credit for placing his ship by calculated manoeuvring under heavy fire exactly where he wanted to place her to block the canal, before blowing his charges and leaving the ship.

POCOCK, FRANK PEARCE, M.C., Surgeon, Royal Navy (Iris II.). By his devotion to duty, he undoubtedly saved many lives. When Iris II. was hit he at once commenced tending the wounded, and as all the sick-berth staff were killed, had all the work to do alone. After the dynamo was damaged, he had to work by candle and torchlight.

HOWELL-PRICE, JOHN, D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve (H.M. Submarine C3). His assistance in placing Submarine C3 between the piers of the viaduct before the fuse was lighted and she was abandoned was invaluable. His behaviour in a position of extreme danger was exemplary.

BOURKE, ROLAND, Lieut., R.N.V.R. Throughout the action showed the greatest coolness and skill in handling his motor-launch. Repeatedly went alongside Brilliant under very heavy fire and took off 38 officers and men. Took in tow and brought back to harbour another motor-launch which was damaged.

LITTLETON, HUGH ALEXANDEB, Lieut., R.N.V.R. Handled his motor-launch in a magnificent manner. Embarked over 60 officers and men from Thetis under heavy machine-gun fire at close range. It was solely due to his courage and daring that his boat succeeded in making good her escape with the survivors of the Thetis.

CHATER, ARTHUR REGINALD, Capt., R.M.L.I. Was of the greatest assistance in keeping up communication between the various units of the battalion, and carried out his duties in a calm manner, which greatly contributed to the success of the operations. Gave great assistance in the preparation of the plan for the assault.

BROOKS, REGINALD ALEXANDER DALLAS, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), R.M.A. (Vindictive). He imbued his men with the highest degree of devotion to duty. The manner in which the howitzer, in its exposed position on the quarter deck, was used under his personal direction was very fine.

PESHALL, REV. CHARLES JOHN EYRE, B.A., Chaplain, Royal Navy (Vindictive). His cheerful encouragement and assistance to the wounded, calm demeanour during the din of battle, strength of character, and splendid comradeship were most conspicuous to all with whom he came in contact. Showed great physical strength, and did almost superhuman work in carrying wounded from the mole over the brows into Vindictive.

COOKE, THEODORE FREDERIC VERNON, Lieut., R.M.L.I. By his personal bravery under fire set a magnificent example to his men, and led them forward with the greatest courage and dash in spite of being wounded. He was wounded a second time whilst endeavouring to carry a wounded man back to the ship.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

HARRISON, FRANCIS CHARLES, D.S.O., Lieut., Royal Navy. Was in charge of a coastal motor-boat division operating off Ostend. Led his division with conspicuous ability and resource, and carried out the whole programme up to the last moment. Laid out the calcium flares to mark the pier ends in a most efficient manner under a heavy fire from both shore batteries and machine guns.

London Gazette, 26 July, 1918.—"War Office, 26 July, 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

CROFT, WILLIAM DENMAN, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He constantly showed the greatest courage and skill during many days' operations in command of a brigade. His H.Q. were placed close behind the firing line, as he rightly judged that the situation required his closest supervision. Owing to the movements of troops on his flank, it was necessary for the brigade, already weakened by many casualties, to hold a much-extended front. Without resolution of the highest order, and constantly exposing himself to machine-gun and rifle fire, it would have been impossible to hold the line so long and withdraw as a fighting organization.

(First Bar gazetted 10 Jan. 1917.)

GOSCHEN, ARTHUR ALEC, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a retreat lasting for several days. He handled his brigade throughout with the greatest courage and efficiency, and it was mainly due to his personal efforts that after repeatedly inflicting heavy losses on the enemy, it came through these very difficult operations without losing a gun, and with comparatively small casualties.

(First Bar gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

HAIG, ROLAND, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a long period of active operations. On one occasion, when there was danger of a line giving way, he rode forward, regardless of personal danger, and re-established it. His great courage and untiring energy set a splendid example to all officers and men.

(First Bar gazetted 18 June, 1917.)

OGLIVIE, SHOLTO STUART, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of his battalion, being hard pressed, he frequently went out into the open under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, collecting stragglers from various units and organized them into fighting forces, which he then employed. It was mainly due to his supervision, and to the fact that he personally reorganized his battalion three or four times, that the withdrawal was able to be carried out in an orderly manner.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Aug. 1916.)

(First Bar gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

RIDDELL, EDWARD PIUS ARTHUR, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during several days of severe fighting in rear-guard actions, when he repeatedly organized counter-attacks, and personally led two of them. After the whole of his staff had become casualties, and two of his commanding officers had been hit, his magnificent example, and total disregard of danger had the greatest effect in steadying his command.

SEAGRAVE, WILLIAM HENRY ERIK, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy developed a strong attack on an exposed flank, this officer, collecting H.Q. details, led two counter-attacks, restoring the situation. He then made a personal reconnaissance under heavy machine-gun fire, and reorganized the defence. His energy and resource throughout frequent attacks encouraged his men in keeping the line unbroken.

(D.S.O. gazetted 7 March, 1899.)

(First Bar gazetted 4 March, 1918.)

WESTON, SPENCER VAUGHAN PERCY, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the trying period of a retreat. Despite heavy losses, he withdrew the battalion in good order, inflicting severe casualties on the enemy, and it was largely due to his coolness and personal courage that the retirement was so well carried out. He invariably displayed fine powers of leadership, and his splendid example was of the greatest encouragement to all ranks.

(D.S.O. gazetted 17 April, 1917.)

(First Bar gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

ARMITAGE, CHARLES CLEMENT, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during long operations, when he made several invaluable reconnaissances, on one occasion riding about the front in full view of the enemy, and under heavy fire, and rallying those who were inclined to fall back. Finally, when the battalion retired, he organized it on a new position, which was held until a further withdrawal was ordered.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

BEASLEY, ROBERT LONGFIELD, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. While visiting front-line posts he saw a hostile party creeping forward to rush the posts. By his prompt and energetic action the enemy were driven in towards our lines and several prisoners taken. He himself disposed of several of the enemy, and his great courage and utter disregard of personal danger inspired his men with his own fine spirit.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

BIRT, CHARLES WILLIAM HOWARD, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while handling his battalion in recent operations. He organized in one day three successful counter-attacks, which re-established the line. His personal gallantry and able leadership enabled his battalion to hold the corps line for 24 hours, until ordered to withdraw.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Aug. 1917.)

BORTHWICK, FRANCIS HENRY, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under very heavy machine-gun and rifle fire he deployed his battalion with great coolness and rapidity and led them to the assault. The quick and clever handling of his men saved many casualties, while his bearing did much to encourage the men under heavy fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

BREWIS, GEOFFREY SYDNEY, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When commanding a battalion during a withdrawal he inspired great confidence by his skillfulness and contempt for personal danger.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

BROOKE, GEOFFREY FRANCIS HEREMON, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Lancers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During recent operations he showed exceptional gallantry and devotion to duty in conducting the operations of his regiment. The example he set under heavy shell and machine-gun fire had an excellent effect, and largely contributed to the success of the operations. He was of the greatest assistance, and his gallant services merited highest praise.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

BROWNE, GEORGE EDWARD ALLENBY, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Liverpool Regt., Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a battalion which had had little infantry training, he so efficiently handled his men as to materially assist in the successful withdrawal of the division, a detached platoon of his destroying a party of the enemy with the bayonet. His fine leading and skillful handling converted his slightly trained men into a highly competent infantry battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

BUCKLE, ARCHIBALD WALTER, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Division, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion. He repelled the enemy's attack, organized a counter-attack, and drove the enemy completely out of the menaced area. It was largely due to his courage, initiative and leadership that this important success was obtained.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 March, 1918.)

BURT, ALFRED, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack, when, although his left flank was exposed, and the enemy well in his rear, by his personal courage and example he so cheered and inspired his men, that he was able to keep his portion of the defence intact, and inflict severe casualties on the enemy.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 June, 1917.)

CASEMENT, FRANCIS, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when he evacuated all the wounded and saved a large quantity of surgical material, blankets and stretchers during a long retirement. His courage, coolness and resource were most marked during the whole of this trying period.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

CHILD-VILLIERS, THE HONOURABLE ARTHUR GEORGE, D.S.O., Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his squadron dismounted in a counter-attack with remarkable skill and daring. Although wounded in the leg he refused to be evacuated to the dressing station, but continued to lead his men, and sent back valuable information as to the situation, although in great pain. He set a splendid example of coolness and endurance.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

COFFIN, CLIFFORD, V.C., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel and Brevet Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a long period of active operations, when he handled his brigade with great skill, especially when covering the withdrawal of the remainder of the division. On one occasion he commanded for a time the infantry of the division with marked success, and his personal courage and example at all times inspired all ranks with him.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

COLQUHOUN, SIR IAN, Bart., D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Scots Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion in a most capable manner throughout six days' critical fighting. When reconnoitring in front of a village with six men, he met an enemy patrol, three of whom he killed with his revolver, being slightly wounded himself.

(D.S.O. gazetted 20 Oct. 1916.)

COLLINS, DUDLEY STUART, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During recent operations he rendered most valuable services in collecting details and organizing defences. Finding the main dressing station closed, he reopened it and kept it working until the arrival of the Cavalry Field Ambulance. He was always on the spot and throughout the operations showed great initiative and presence of mind.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

CRAIGIE-HALKETT, HUGH MARJORIEBANKS, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion during lengthy operations, and in the most desperate fighting. At one time he led the battalion forward to reinforce the corps' line, and it was entirely due to his splendid courage and example that the battalion, although much reduced in numbers, was able to hold back the enemy, and inflict very heavy casualties.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

CRELLIN, WILLIAM ANDERSON WATSON, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He organized and led a counter-attack, which restored the situation. He held the position until ordered to withdraw, by which time two companies had almost ceased to exist. With the remainder he carried on continuous fighting until he took over command of the brigade. Throughout the operations he showed great skill and unflinching cheerfulness, and was always on the spot whenever the situation became critical.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

CROFTON, MALBY, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Whilst he was in close proximity to the batteries of another brigade during a withdrawal, a party of the enemy suddenly appeared in view on the crest near by, whereupon he immediately ordered the guns to be brought into action. The guns, however, were involved in very bad ground, and despite his personal efforts to attempt to man-handle each gun in turn into action, they all became bogged in shell-holes. He then proceeded towards the enemy in order to discover the exact nature of the situation, after which he himself withdrew, having satisfied himself that each gun had been rendered useless. During the whole day his skilful dispositions, imperturbable bearing, and personal efforts and encouragement inspired all ranks in the highest degree.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

CURTIS, HUBERT MONTAGUE COTTON, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Major), North Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In recent operations he rendered invaluable services. Hearing that the enemy had attacked he at once collected all details at the transport lines and brought them up to brigade headquarters. His timely arrival enabled a dangerous gap to be filled and the enemy's advance checked. On another occasion, after his detachment had been relieved and withdrawn to a reserve line, he rallied other troops who were falling back. Reorganizing the line he beat off three attacks on his flank. A splendid example of quick initiative and courage.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

DANN, WILLIAM ROWLAND HARRIS, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Bedfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. Although vastly outnumbered by more than six to one, he held up the enemy for many hours until ordered to withdraw, which he did with great skill and in splendid order. He was untiring in his efforts, and his gallantry and example stimulated the defence to the utmost. He was a tower of strength to the brigade.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

DAVIDSON, HUGH ALLAN, D.S.O., M.B., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of his unit he maintained the advanced dressing station in spite of heavy shelling by the enemy, only withdrawing when ordered to do so. He visited the regimental aid posts under heavy shelling, and by his example and energy many casualties were evacuated which might otherwise have been lost.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

DAWES, GEORGES, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With his battalion and some other troops he covered the retirement of the division, maintaining his ground for eight hours, until nearly surrounded, when he fought his way out. On another occasion, when the enemy outflanked his left, he saved the situation, reorganizing the line under heavy machine-gun fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

DERVIOHE-JONES, ARTHUR DANIEL, D.S.O., M.C., Capt., (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in operations, when he maintained a splendid defence of a position, although outflanked to a depth of more than a mile, and it was mainly due to his courage and fine example that the position was held for hours, with a small force against great numbers of the enemy, to the last possible moment.

(D.S.O. gazetted 27 Oct. 1917.)

DRUMMOND, ROY MAXWELL, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attacked single-handed a formation of six enemy scouts, and brought down one, which was wrecked on striking the ground. He was then attacked by the remainder, and succeeded in bringing down one out of control before he himself, owing to engine trouble, was forced to land. He got the engine going again, and though stopped by engine trouble on four occasions, he managed to get back to his own lines, thus evading his pursuers. His performance was a gallant and successful one.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 March, 1918.)

DUMBELL, CHARLES HAROLD, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a section of the reserve line, although gassed, he went up three times under intense artillery and machine-gun barrage, rallying men of various units who were falling back. Later, he organized a fresh defence line 400 yards from the attacking enemy, and then went out to bring in a wounded man who was lying 150 yards from the enemy.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

EVES, THOMAS SWAN, D.S.O., M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in charge of an advanced dressing station which was being heavily shelled by the enemy, and he personally and thoroughly carried out a complete change of organization. Later, he was superintending the loading of ambulance cars near a railway bridge which was a special target for the enemy's guns, and though twice thrown over and bruised by bursting shells he stuck to his post till all the wounded had been dressed and evacuated. His fine performance under continuous shell fire till the enemy were close upon him was a splendid example to all.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

FAGAN, EDWARD ARTHUR, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his front battalion was being overwhelmed he personally directed the action to be taken by other battalions, with the utmost disregard for his personal safety. He inspired all ranks with enthusiasm, and the success of the defence was largely due to his fine example.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

FISHER, BERTIE DREW, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, Lancers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his battalion. The battalion on his right had been penetrated, and he was outflanked by the enemy. He withdrew his men with great skill under very heavy shell fire to a fresh position, which he held throughout the day and handed over practically intact to another division next morning. The importance of this position was great, and by holding it as he did he rendered fine service.
(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1915.)

FITZGERALD, FITZGERALD GABBETT, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his casualty clearing station was heavily shelled he not only evacuated his patients to places of safety, but saved practically all the stores of his unit. This action was performed twice over, and on both occasions his courage and ability were pre-eminent.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

FOORD, WILLIAM PERCY STILLES, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion in action. For two days he maintained his position, fighting continuously, and with his flanks several times dangerously exposed. It was due to his leadership and fine qualities that the defence was maintained and heavy losses inflicted on the enemy.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

GOODERSON, VALENTINE EDGAR, D.S.O., Temporary Major, Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked and drove in the left of the line, he reorganized the battalion a short distance behind and then gallantly leading it forward, restored the position. By his timely action he saved the left flank of the brigade from being turned. Later, when in charge of the rear-guard, he handled his men with great ability and kept back the enemy until the other brigades had been withdrawn.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

GROGAN, GEORGE WILLIAM ST. GEORGE, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion during a long period of active operations. On one occasion, when in command of the left of the division, it was mainly due to his personal efforts that the line was maintained and extended when troops on the left were withdrawn. Whenever the position became critical he went forward himself to restore the situation, and his splendid example of courage and endurance greatly inspired all ranks.
(D.S.O. gazetted 11 May, 1917.)

GUINNESS, THE HONOURABLE WALTER EDWARD, D.S.O., Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as brigade major throughout operations and during a subsequent retirement. He carried out continual reconnaissances under heavy shell fire and with an absolute disregard of danger, and on one occasion he personally assisted to re-establish the line, leading forward men who had fallen back. His fine example and untiring energy and his reports throughout were invaluable.
(D.S.O. gazetted 20 Sept. 1917.)

GURNEY, CLEMENT HENDERSON, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, East Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his right flank was exposed owing to the troops on that flank giving way, he restored the situation, capturing several prisoners. He personally superintended and successfully carried out a very difficult withdrawal by night, and throughout the fighting visited all parts of the firing line, encouraging the defence by his splendid example.
(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916 [correct date 1 Jan. 1917].)

HALLIDAY, WILLIAM JOHN FREDERICK, D.S.O., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While bringing his battery back from taking part in a raid, the enemy commenced to shell heavily the road along which it was necessary for the battery to pass. He personally supervised the passing of every man and carriage through the danger zone. When the guns and teams had been got away, he remained with a wounded driver, sheltering him with his body from splinters, until the arrival of the ambulance. He set a most inspiring example of coolness and resource.
(D.S.O. gazetted 16 Aug. 1917.)

HUNT, JOHN PATRICK, D.S.O., Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He formed at short notice an improvised force, comprised of troops from several different units, and handled it with great skill. He contributed largely towards the success of a counter-attack, when he rallied his men at a very critical period and drove the enemy back out of a village. Again, later, by his fearless example, he restored the situation, when the enemy were on the point of breaking through the line.
(D.S.O. gazetted 20 Oct. 1916.)

IMPEY, GEORGE HASTINGS, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. When his battalion was attacked and cut in two, causing it to fall back, he promptly turned out his battalion headquarters and a few men who had become lost in its neighbourhood, organized them into a garrison, and held the position with great courage and skill against all attacks for several hours, thus saving a most critical situation and allowing time for the battalion to reform, counter-attack, and regain their line.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

KELLY, HARRY BEATTY, D.S.O. M.B., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the camp, in which over 40 stretcher cases were collected, was heavily shelled, he collected the bearers and removed the wounded to a position of safety. Again, when the infantry were being withdrawn, he collected casualties with the bearers and carried them through a heavy barrage to the ambulance cars, thus saving several lives and setting a fine example to his men.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

KENNEDY, JOHN, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the situation required the closest handling of the brigades, he commanded his in a most skilful and fearless manner during a daylight retirement, having his horse shot under him by rifle fire. His brigade rendered conspicuous service and came out of a severe battle with its morale undiminished, for which his example and leadership were much responsible.
(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

KIRKPATRICK, HARRY FEARNLEY, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of his battalion. The enemy attacked and drove in the troops of another division which caused the left flank of his battalion to become much exposed. By his magnificent courage and leadership he succeeded in restoring the situation.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

LAING, RODERIC, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack, when he made a personal reconnaissance under very heavy artillery fire and brought back most valuable information to brigade headquarters. The success with which the attack was driven off, and over 100 prisoners taken, was greatly due to his splendid courage and skill. Throughout all operations his invaluable services have maintained the finest discipline and morale in his battalion.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

LAWRENSON, REGINALD ROBERT, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), West India Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion during constant attacks. It was owing to his indomitable spirit, personal example and fine leadership that the battalion maintained its position throughout the operations. One night he went to brigade headquarters to report personally, and was then much exhausted, but with characteristic pluck returned to his battalion and handled it in a most efficient manner during the retirement.
(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

LITTLE, WILLIAM BENJAMIN, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during several days of severe fighting when in command of a composite battalion. His force was constantly depleted by casualties and augmented by stragglers. During the whole period, by energy, courage and force of character, he held his men together under enemy attacks, and led them in several counter-attacks. Owing to his magnificent example his men, who were in no way organized and very exhausted, behaved with praiseworthy steadiness.
(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

LLOYD, EVAN COLCLOUGH, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion in action. In spite of very heavy enemy attacks, preceded by gas and accompanied by a dense bombardment, he succeeded in maintaining his position, although nearly surrounded. A subsequent counter-attack enabled him to withdraw the battalion, inflicting casualties on the enemy in doing so. His courage and tenacity gained valuable time to reorganize the defence in the rear of the battle zone. Later he was severely wounded.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

McCLINTOCK, STANLEY ROBERT, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While in command of his battalion this officer, when the enemy had broken through the front, support and reserve lines, took up a defensive position with his battalion headquarters details, and held up the attack. Later, while in command of the remnants of his battalion, he showed great tenacity in holding on to the last during the various stages of the withdrawal.
(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

MELLOR, ABEL, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy was shelling canal bridges with salvos of 4.2 shells, causing great confusion to the stream of traffic, this officer, regardless of danger, stood on the bridge for over an hour regulating the transport, and it was entirely due to his single-handed efforts that order was restored.
(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

METCALFE, FRANCIS EDWARD, C.M.G., D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in the defence of a position. By his skilful leadership and ability, his battalion succeeded in beating off six determined attacks by the enemy. He personally directed his battalion during the operation, when his courage and cheerfulness were the greatest inspiration to the entire garrison.
(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

MOULTON-BARRETT, EDWARD MORRIS, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout two days' fighting his courage and resource were an example to all. On receipt of orders he cleverly withdrew his battalion from close contact with the enemy, without a casualty. Some days after he was wounded while holding his headquarters in the support line against heavy hostile attacks, using a rifle himself.
(D.S.O. gazetted 23 June, 1915.)

NORTON, GILBERT PAUL, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during lengthy operations, during which he displayed the greatest courage and skill, firstly, in defending a position, and later in organizing and leading a counter-attack. His complete grasp of the situation and fine personal example inspired all ranks with confidence, and greatly contributed in maintaining good order.
(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

PIPON, ROBERT HENRY, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy unexpectedly appeared in the rear of the brigade he attacked them with his battalion headquarters personnel, and held them while he brought back his two support companies and elements of other units. With the line thus formed he covered the withdrawal of the rest of the brigade next day under the heaviest fire. He twice assumed command of the brigade at critical moments and conducted the operations with skill and judgment.
(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1917.)

POTAL, CHARLES FREDERICK ALGERNON, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut., (Temporary Major), Royal Engineers, Special Reserve and Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a period of four months, chiefly under adverse weather conditions, he repeatedly carried out successful raids by day and night, his ingenuity and daring enabling him to drop many tons of bombs on important enemy posts. One night he crossed the lines five times, only landing between each flight to replenish with bombs. Another day he took on single-handed five enemy machines, and drove down three of them—a most gallant and splendid feat. On another day, despite thick mist, he registered one of our batteries on an enemy battery, causing the destruction of one pit and obtaining one fire and two explosions; and another day, flying for 5½ hours, he carried out two very successful counter-battery shoots, observing 350 rounds. He has always set a most magnificent example to the squadron under his command.
(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

POWELL, JOHN, D.S.O., M.B., Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a long period of active operations. Owing to the great number of extemporised formations from the divisions, which increased continually from day to day, the task of providing adequate medical facilities was one of extreme difficulty. By his indefatigable energy and powers of organization he successfully met all demands, and completed the evacuation of all wounded with splendid efficiency. On one occasion, hearing some wounded had been left behind, he went himself, under heavy and continual shell and machine-gun fire, with three ambulances, and brought them in. Throughout, his conduct was beyond all praise.

PRIDEAUX-BRUNE, DENYS EDWARD, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion and elements of other units with consummate skill, gallantry and disregard of personal danger. He stubbornly defended positions one after another, then skillfully extricated his men and organized fresh ones. He showed great presence of mind, initiative, and resource at all times.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

PRIOR, BERNARD HENRY LEATHES, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout two days of an enemy advance, and until wounded, he set a splendid example of coolness and courage under most trying conditions, personally supervising the readjustments which had to be made to meet the enemy attacks, and the gallant resistance offered by his battalion was largely due to his magnificent example of fearless determination.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

REVELL, JOHN WALTER, D.S.O., Temporary Major, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion during long operations in command of a field company attached to an infantry brigade. When the brigade was in lack of men, and the enemy was pressing its withdrawal, he, with great coolness and courage, covered with his company the right flank, and maintained his position until the brigade had been withdrawn. He then destroyed all huts and blew up the water-mains, thereby depriving the enemy of a billeting area and water supply.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

RITSON, JOHN ANTHONY SYDNEY, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion in a series of rearguard actions lasting for several days. During this period he displayed exceptional courage and judgment in a series of withdrawals to fresh positions and repelling attacks, causing the enemy heavy casualties. He held on to his last position, repelling all attacks with severe enemy losses until ordered to withdraw, which he succeeded in doing under exceptional difficulties and heavy fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 27 Oct. 1917.)

ROLLO, GEORGE, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut., Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In a most admirable manner he collected men from other divisions and organized the defence. He was not at that time in command of his battalion. He subsequently took command of his battalion, and handled them with magnificent skill and coolness during the rearguard action that followed. His splendid courage was an example to all.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

ROWBOTHAM, JAMES, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He continually visited the front line of his battalion, which was under heavy shell fire and gas, and brought in valuable information. On one occasion, finding the enemy were making progress on his left by bombing and using flammenwerfer, he rallied the men and restored the situation. Subsequently, while directing the defence in a very exposed position, he was severely wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 19 Nov. 1917.)

SHAW, LAWRENCE DREW, D.S.O., M.B., Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was placed in charge of the forward division of the combined field ambulances. Although constantly exposed to heavy shell and machine-gun fire, he organized the system of evacuation and extended it to neighbouring divisional units. By his inspiring example and disregard of danger he ensured a complete and successful evacuation of the wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

SMITH, HERBERT CHARLES HYDE, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel) Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a ten days' withdrawal he handled his battalion with great gallantry, and repeatedly organized lines of resistance. By his personal example he induced men to defend positions in a most stubborn way, although very much outnumbered, and more than once, thanks to his cool intrepidity, his battalion beat off very heavy attacks and inflicted great loss on the enemy.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

SPOONER, ARTHUR HARDWICKE, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his brigade in very difficult positions with consummate coolness and skill, and on every occasion displayed great initiative and resource. The clever handling of his brigade bettered the situation on the front of two divisions.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1915.)

STAFFORD, RONALD SEMPILL HOWARD, D.S.O., Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a rearguard action lasting over a period of five days he behaved with consistent coolness and courage. On one occasion, the left flank of his battalion having been driven in and the battalion ordered to establish a defensive flank, he carried out a personal reconnaissance under direct machine-gun fire, gaining valuable information as to the dispositions on his right flank, and personally placed each company in its position. During this time the enemy was fast approaching in massed formation, and artillery fire was opened on his battalion at point-blank range. His total disregard of danger and quickness of decision saved the situation on this and other occasions.

(D.S.O. gazetted 20 Oct. 1916.)

STANLEY-CLARKE, ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER LANCELOT, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. The enemy had driven in the troops on his right, and, seeing the danger of the situation, he went forward, and after a personal reconnaissance organized a counter-attack, which was very successful, and which prevented the enemy from advancing further that day. Throughout the operations he set a fine example of initiative and courage.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

THOMSON, GEORGE, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. Although his battalion was used up to reinforce the whole line, he displayed the greatest courage and energy in his efforts to clear up the situation and encourage the defence. He personally visited the left flank when it became outflanked, and disposed the men for its safety, setting a magnificent example, by a total disregard of danger, until finally he was wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

TOMKINSON, HENRY ARCHDALE, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Dragons. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. When the enemy had penetrated a line, and the infantry were retiring in some disorder, by his quick decision and selection of fire positions he succeeded in holding up the attack in spite of the heavy machine-gun fire. Finally, when the line was re-established, he walked up and down in the open, fully exposed to heavy fire, encouraging the men, until he was badly wounded. His splendid example and leadership saved a most critical situation.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

TORRENS, GEORGE LESLIE, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his battalion with the utmost skill in the defence of the line, and also when in command of the rearguard, and being closely pressed by the enemy, in covering the withdrawal of the brigade. In subsequent actions he always had his battalion well in hand, and displayed splendid leadership and courage.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

TYRRELL, WILLIAM, D.S.O., M.C., M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a line of evacuation. He worked continuously for six days, and it was due to his gallantry, organization, and energy that touch was maintained so efficiently with the brigades, and so many casualties evacuated. He displayed great courage and coolness throughout, and inspired those under him by his fine example.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

WATSON, CAMPBELL NEWELL, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of his battalion during lengthy operations. His courage, cheerfulness, and resource at all times set a splendid example to his officers and all ranks under him, and his tenacity during several rearguard actions undoubtedly inflicted severe casualties on the enemy and delayed his progress.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

WHITEHEAD, HECTOR FRASER, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in operations, when by his gallantry, energy, and marked ability he was able to keep his battalion in a high state of offensive spirit. Later, when his men were really tired out after ten days' continuous fighting and marching, his splendid example encouraged them to hold on, and even to counter-attack under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

WILKINSON, WILLIAM THORNTON, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, King's Own Scottish Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under difficult circumstances he extricated his battalion in good order, holding two rearguard positions to cover the withdrawal. On another occasion, with two battalions, he held on to some high ground from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., although his right flank was in the air. Exposed to heavy machine-gun fire, he went up and down the line encouraging his men, being subsequently wounded in the head.

(D.S.O. gazetted 27 Sept. 1901.)

WINNER, CHARLES RUPERT PETER, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Brigadier-General), Reserve of Officers, South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the progress of repeated enemy attacks. He displayed the utmost skill, coolness, and gallantry whilst in command of his brigade, rallying the men, reforming the line, and inspiring all those about him with confidence by his complete disregard of personal danger.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Aug. 1916.)

WINTER, ERNEST ARTHUR, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion received orders to withdraw from the line they had been holding since the previous evening he, though suffering severely from the effects of gas, successfully withdrew his battalion and organized his headquarter runners and servants into a rearguard, being himself the last to leave. On another occasion, though completely under enemy observation, he successfully withdrew his transport, his cool courage causing the men to successfully carry out the dispositions made by him.

CANADIAN FORCE.

CLARKE, FREDERICK FIELDHOUSE, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Railway Troops. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack lasting for four days. He organized from his battalion 16 Lewis gun teams, and made all arrangements for ammunition and supplies to be brought up to the front line by his own lorries. Except for the higher direction of the defence, the unit was entirely self-contained. The promptitude and alacrity with which this unit responded for volunteers, the splendid manner with which the defence was organized, the coolness and sustained enthusiasm displayed by all ranks under his command, were largely due to the courage, inspiring example, and fine leadership of the commanding officer.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ANDERSON, GEORGE HENRY GARSTIN, M.C., Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during ten days of continuous fighting, when he carried out the duties of adjutant with exceptional skill under almost impossible conditions. By his splendid example of courage and cheerfulness under the hottest fire, he was mainly instrumental in keeping the battalion well in hand, when it might otherwise have become demoralized, and in every withdrawal he was always the last to leave. When any stand was made he moved about, regardless of personal danger, encouraging the men, and although frequently without food or drink, and exhausted from lack of sleep, his exertions for the good of the battalion never failed. No praise can be too high for his devotion to duty.

ANDERSON, HORACE, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Irish Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was sent to take a hill with two companies. In advancing they were exposed to heavy machine-gun fire, causing some wavering. He showed complete disregard of danger, and by his fine example encouraged his men and took his objective.

ANDERSON, PATRICK CAMPBELL, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during seven critical days of a withdrawal, when he commanded his battalion with the greatest courage and skill under most trying conditions. Again and again he rallied his men, and, on his own initiative, held on to vital points, keeping his men steady by his magnificent example. When relieved, noticing that some of the troops then in the line were slightly unsteady, he remained with them for several hours, helping to keep the situation in hand. His able leadership and constant courage were of inestimable value during these critical days.

ARMSTRONG, WILLIAM FORTESCUE, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a period of withdrawals. He used his guns to the very last moment in covering the infantry, and had to run them back under machine-gun fire.

ARTHUR, BECKHAM, Major, Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when handling his motor machine-gun battery during a defence, and the subsequent withdrawal. It was largely due to his action that two battalions of infantry were enabled to carry out a successful retirement, for his guns inflicted heavy losses on the enemy and materially held up their advance.

ATKINSON, JOSEPH DEAN, Temporary Major, Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By skilful disposition of Lewis guns during the withdrawal of a brigade, he prevented the enemy from occupying a ridge, thereby enabling the move to be carried out without a casualty. Later, he assisted in a withdrawal from a very difficult position, with the enemy on three sides, successfully accomplishing it without loss, and bringing back all the wounded.

BALL, KENNETH MOORE, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack, when, although wounded at the commencement of the bombardment, he remained in command of his battery throughout the day and rendered most valuable assistance in driving off repeated attacks. His courage and skill throughout the operations were most marked.

BATES, CHARLES, Second Lieut., South Staffordshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went forward, through a heavy barrage, to a commanding position, and lay there, under fire, for three hours, sending back valuable information. Then, returning to his platoon, he altered his dispositions and held up the enemy, in spite of repeated efforts to attack and turn his flank. Although twice wounded, he stayed with his command, which he withdrew the following day, when he again stopped the enemy's advance by getting a Lewis gun into position on a railway embankment and firing it himself until all ammunition was exhausted. He then was able to withdraw.

BATTEN-POOL, JOHN ALEXANDER, M.C., Capt., Lancs. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in reconnoitring under heavy fire and personally driving the enemy back with bombs over a canal. Later, when the enemy had entered the trenches on his flank, he organized a counter-attack and restored the situation. Though wounded, he continued to direct his squadron, until he was wounded a second time.

BAUDAINS, GEORGE LA CROIX, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. When in command of the right front company of his battalion, a heavy enemy attack drove back the battalion on his right, leaving his flank exposed. In spite of this, he held his support line position against greatly superior numbers, and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. Subsequently he was entirely cut off, but continued to hold on until he judged that the troops in his rear had had time to take up a new position, when he fought his way out, being wounded while so doing. By his splendid courage and coolness he set a fine example to all with him.

BEAK, DANIEL MARCUS WILLIAM, M.C., Temporary Commander, Royal Naval Division, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a night attack by the enemy the right flank of his division was left in a dangerous position. He arranged for a flank to be formed in that direction, and subsequently covered the retirement of two brigades with a composite rear-guard which he organized and commanded. His initiative and presence of mind greatly assisted in extricating these brigades from a very difficult situation. Throughout, the skilful handling of his battalion was particularly noticeable.

BIRD, MALCOLM GELLING, Major, Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when, although wounded, he continued to command his battalion, until severely wounded a second time, at a very critical moment, when his gallantry and resource were of valuable service.

BIRNIE, EDWARD D'ARCY, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When hard pressed by the enemy he led several counter-attacks against their bombing parties, and for hours kept large forces of the enemy at bay. At one time he took up a position on the parapet, and (being a marksman) accounted for many of them with a rifle. Finally, when his position became untenable, he successfully withdrew his men. He displayed exceptional skill and courage in the face of great odds.

BOWYER, CHARLES HASTINGS, Temporary Capt., Royal Fusiliers (Lieut., South African Defence Force). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his promptitude in forming a defensive flank he was instrumental in breaking up the enemy's attack, and more than once he saved his battalion from an awkward situation. When the officer commanding his battalion was missing, he assumed command and displayed fine courage and efficiency.

BLACKBURN, ERIC DEANE, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a company of tanks in a counter-attack. He personally led the tanks on foot under heavy machine-gun fire. Again, hearing that the enemy were advancing on a village, he rushed a Lewis gun party up on a lorry, riding forward to reconnoitre, and denied the village to the enemy, on whom he inflicted heavy casualties and took about 20 prisoners. He was responsible for rallying the infantry in the vicinity, and throughout the whole action showed the greatest determination and total disregard for his own safety.

BROOK, FRANK, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy attack on his battalion he showed great coolness under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire at close range, and greatly assisted a successful withdrawal. The same night, when owing to a misunderstanding an unauthorized withdrawal was taking place, he rallied the men, pushed forward with tanks, and restored the line. At various times, by his fine personal example, he maintained the moral of the troops.

CALDER, ARCHIBALD, Temporary Second Lieut., Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of eight Lewis guns. On five consecutive days the enemy made heavy attacks, forcing our troops to retire. Second Lieut. Calder invariably displayed the greatest gallantry and coolness in rallying retiring men, leading them back to their original positions, and in bringing his guns into action in support of the defence, holding up the attacks, and causing very heavy enemy casualties. In stopping one attack he three times expended all his ammunition. He set a splendid example of courage and determination.

CAMPBELL, AUBONE CHARLES, Major, Royal Scots (Capt., King's Own Scottish Borderers). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, when for six days he handled his battalion in a series of rearguard actions, and was seriously wounded. At a critical moment he personally commanded the battalion rearguard, and once succeeded in slipping away when the enemy was right round his flank.

CAPE, HERBERT ANDERSON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Lancs. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical time he displayed remarkable coolness and skill in organizing defences. His fine example stimulated all ranks.

CHAMPION, CHARLES COVERLEY, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the troops on the left flank began to retire, he went forward and took command of two companies. The only line of withdrawal was through a river staked with barbed wire, and it was largely due to his coolness and organization of covering fire that part of the companies succeeded in getting back. He then reformed scattered troops of different units and led them forward, thus enabling a battery to get its guns away. Later, he displayed great courage in a counter-attack.

CHART, STEPHEN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battalion was sent up to reinforce the brigade. His dispositions were excellent, and he handled the situation with great skill and courage. He maintained his position until ordered to conform to the new situation. Never sparing himself, he set a splendid example of coolness and confidence, and greatly inspired all ranks under him.

CLARK, DONALD GORDON, M.C., Capt., Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the line was exposed on the left flank and taken in rear, this officer organized his company in a communication trench and held on till 1.30 a.m. the following day. He was twice bombed out of the position, and each time took up another, inflicting severe casualties on the enemy. Subsequently he showed fine leadership in occupying successive rearguard positions.

CLEGHORN, GEORGE MATTHEW, Temporary Major, Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in charge of the consolidation of a position, when he found that the enemy was still in possession of the northern side of a village. He organized a storming party, and, with great dash, cleared the village. He afterwards reorganized the line in depth in daylight and in full view of the enemy. His example was worthy of the highest traditions of the service.

CLUTTERBUCK, NOEL STANLEY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Marine Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when he handled his battalion in a most skilful manner during a successful counter-attack, when the whole of the lost ground was regained. He personally led the attack, which was organized with great promptitude.

COCKBURN, WILLIAM, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On several occasions he displayed qualities of leadership of an exceptional nature. He covered the withdrawal of his battalion by night, fought a brilliant rearguard action, and, by his dash and absolute disregard of his own safety, gained the vigorous cheers of his men.

COLES, JAMES HUGH, Capt. (Acting Major), East Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion while commanding his battalion during several days of severe fighting. By his remarkable coolness and courage in face of the most difficult circumstances, he was enabled to extricate his battalion on at least two occasions when practically surrounded. His fine qualities of leadership and devotion to duty greatly inspired all ranks under him.

COLLINS, REGINALD FRANK, Temporary Capt., Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion was heavily attacked and forced from its position in a wood, he, as the senior officer on the spot, took hold of the situation with vigour and judgment. He moved the battalion, now reduced to less than 200 men, and extending, advanced the whole line against the attacking enemy, who were in vastly larger numbers, and drove them out of the wood, capturing a machine gun himself. His bold handling of a few troops restored a dangerous break in the line. Throughout the operations he has set an inspiring example to all ranks.

COPE, ARTHUR HAWTAYNE, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Devonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a long period of active operations when in command of his battalion. Notably he held river crossings in face of fierce attacks, counter-attacking at times, when the enemy had broken through a line, and restoring the situation, and finally, though nearly surrounded, withdrawing the battalion as a formed body. The splendid record of his battalion was due to his great courage and fine leadership throughout.

COX, JOHN ALONZO, Major, Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when the enemy raided our outposts with mounted patrols and cyclists. During the confusion he, with another officer and a few men, put up a desperate hand-to-hand combat with the raiders and so allowed time for the company to rally and show a united front. His quickness of perception and courage have been of the greatest assistance to his C.O. on many critical occasions.

CROCKER, JOHN TREDINNICK, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut., Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of four machine guns he broke down two strong enemy attacks, holding on from 10 a.m. till dusk, when infantry and reinforcements arrived. The following day he maintained his position till outflanked, when he stood up between two of his guns and directed their fire on the enemy, who were within 30 yards, then covered the withdrawal with bombs and rifle fire, killing many himself at close range. Took up a fresh position until almost surrounded again, when he again went out with bombs. His example throughout was magnificent.

CUBBON, JOHN FREDERICK, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a field company during a retreat lasting many days and under most trying conditions. He manoeuvred his company with great skill from position to position, covering the retirement of artillery and transport. Later, he was suddenly placed in command of an infantry brigade and ordered to cover a position. This he did in a most able manner at great odds and under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire. Finally, it was owing to his skill and courage that the retirement of a division was successfully conducted.

DEANE, LANCELOT COLIN WILLIAM, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went up to the front line in every operation, displaying an entire disregard of personal safety and a very quick appreciation of the ever-changing tactical situation. At a most critical period he organized a counter-attack, which he led himself, thereby checking the enemy's advance.

DELAHAYE, JAMES VINER, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the retirement of a brigade. It was largely due to the manner in which he led and inspired his artillery that it was possible to extricate the bulk of the infantry from a serious situation. He constantly remained with the rearmost gun, firing into the enemy at the shortest range. He fought his guns with a coolness of nerve and light-hearted gallantry beyond praise.

DE PASS, GUY ELIOT, Second Lieut., Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions during lengthy operations, notably carrying out a most difficult and valuable reconnaissance, and when in command of an advance troop establishing posts in a position abandoned earlier by our troops, rallying stragglers, and with them and his own men engaging the advancing enemy, thus enabling a counter-attack to develop, being subjected the whole time to severe artillery and machine-gun fire. His one desire has been to engage the enemy, and by his courage and skill he has invariably been able to do so with success.

DIXON, ROBERT SPEIR, Capt. (Temporary Major), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He conducted a daring reconnaissance, clearing up a difficult situation, and afterwards was of great assistance in organizing and rallying men of other divisions during the battle. When his commanding officer fell he took command, continued the counter-attack, and drove the enemy out of the area. Later, he led his men with great determination and courage against vastly superior numbers, thereby materially assisting the retirement of the whole division.

DREW, CHARLES DOUGLAS, Major, Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout ten days of severe fighting. In command of a very small party of battalion headquarter details he, on two occasions, attacked large enemy parties advancing to attack, driving them back, and materially assisting in the successful defence of a bridge, and subsequently on the withdrawal of the battalion. His fine example of courage and energetic initiative was an inspiration to all ranks with him.

DYER, HYDE RIDGWAY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Indian Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In the face of heavy fire he led his men in successful charges with great dash and ability. He twice had his horse shot under him. He proved himself a very able and gallant leader.

FLETCHER, EDWARD KEELING, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Marine Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when, by a personal reconnaissance, which proved to be invaluable, he discovered that a gap had been made on the right flank of his battalion, and he dealt with the situation promptly; and again, on the following morning, when he led a successful counter-attack, which regained all the lost ground.

FREER, NIGEL WILLIAM WYNN, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His promptness in running up howitzers into the open enabled fire to be opened on hostile infantry who unexpectedly appeared on a flank. His arrangements and personal supervision of the withdrawal of his guns enabled the move to be carried out without a casualty.

FURSE, RALPH DOLIGNON, Major, King Edward's Horse. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack when he held, for over five hours, 900 yards of a system with 100 men and a weak company of infantry, ultimately withdrawing in good order in spite of hand-to-hand fighting in the trenches. His skill and courage were most marked.

GELL, EDWARD ANTHONY SYDNEY, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He had just arrived on leave in England when he heard his division was engaged. He hurried back, and after much difficulty got to them. Within half an hour of arrival he collected about 100 stragglers and attached them to the remnants of his own battalion, his vigour and fearlessness putting fresh life into the defence. Next day, when the line was being driven back, he led a counter-attack with splendid dash under very heavy machine-gun fire.

GRACEY, ROBERT LLOYD, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of defensive positions. By his courage, skill, and tenacity he greatly delayed the hostile advance causing heavy enemy losses. For several days he and his men were subjected to a very heavy bombardment, and only his personal example of gallantry and coolness checked the retirement of disorganized bodies of men and maintained the defence.

GRAY, HENRY PHILIP TWELLS, Capt., Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a battalion holding 800 yards of line he beat off three attacks made by the enemy in greatly superior numbers. He held the line intact all day, arranging for supply of ammunition and sending back valuable information to brigade headquarters. The following day, although both flanks were exposed and the enemy were 2,500 yards behind his line, he held on till 3 p.m., when he extricated the battalion, supervising the withdrawal, although wounded in the face.

GREENWOOD, HARRY, M.C., Temporary Major, Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during two heavy attacks, made under cover of mist. They were repulsed, but a hostile machine-gun detachment, which succeeded in getting within 50 yards of the line, suffered severely, and an officer and two men ran back to cover. The battalion being very short of machine gunners owing to casualties, he, with a N.C.O., rushed out with the greatest daring, found the officer and men hiding in a hollow with a heavy machine gun, and made them carry it back, being all the time under intense fire. The gun was used later on the enemy with great effect.

GREGORY, FREDERICK CHARLES, Major, Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By the skilful handling of the battalion under his command he kept the line intact throughout the whole action, and successfully supported the line on his left. On two occasions he organized counter-attacks and drove off the enemy with severe loss. Throughout the action he displayed leadership of a high order.

GRIFFIN, JOHN ARNOLD ATKINSON, Capt. (Acting Major), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his C.O. was wounded he took command, and displayed the greatest courage and skill in operations lasting several days, in maintaining positions, leading counter-attacks at every opportunity, and by his splendid personal example encouraging all ranks to do their utmost during a most critical period.

GROVER, ALBERT, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Bedfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great courage and skill in collecting stragglers and organizing them into a fighting force to enable him to hold a most important line, which was subsequently repeatedly and unsuccessfully attacked. When at length ordered to withdraw he conducted a most skilful rearguard action, personally collecting machine guns and directing their fire until the remainder of his force had taken up their next position. Finally, when severely wounded, he continued to direct operations from a stretcher, refusing to be evacuated until he had explained the situation to another senior officer.

HARCOURT, HARRY GLADWYN, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Lieut. and Acting Major), Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during two days of intense fighting, when he visited and located all the machine guns under his command, under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, and then on horseback led a limber down the line, dropping ammunition and water at each gun. Later he organized defensive points, which he held to the last possible moment, covering troops withdrawing. His actions had incalculable results: firstly, the timely supply of ammunition to the guns; secondly, the defeat of the enemy's attempt to cut off certain valuable positions; and thirdly, successfully covering troop withdrawals.

HARVEY, MARTIN MOREMONT, M.C., Temporary Capt., Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a withdrawal, when his company was on the left flank of the battalion, which was "en l'air." The enemy, perceiving the advantage, established machine guns and snipers on a ridge and enfiladed the whole battalion with great accuracy. He at once appreciated the situation, organized and led a party which drove the enemy off the ridge, and saved the situation. By his initiative and courage he set a wonderful example to all ranks.

HENDERSON, ERNEST JAMES, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his C.O. was wounded he took command of the battalion, and handled it with great judgment and success. He invariably displayed the utmost courage and disregard for personal danger, although frequently exposed to heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, and his fine example inspired all ranks with him. Ultimately he was wounded.

HIGGINS, EDWARD LAWRENCE, M.C., Capt., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was on leave in England when he heard his division was engaged and promptly rejoined them after considerable difficulty. He then went straight into the fight with a composite company whom he so cheered by his fine spirit that they more than once successfully counter-attacked and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

HILDITCH, VICTOR CADIFOR, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer engaged the enemy with his battery over open sights, under rifle and shell fire, holding them up long enough to enable the infantry to take up fresh positions. He then brought up teams, and got the guns away safely, covering their withdrawal with his own Lewis guns. He was indefatigable in keeping up touch with the infantry.

HODGE, ARTHUR, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his support company. Troops of other units in a front line withdrew, as also did those on each flank of his company. In spite of this, he maintained his isolated position under heavy shell and machine-gun fire until ordered to withdraw 12 hours later. His gallantry and example were such that not one of his own men joined the shaken troops from the front line, who passed through his position to the rear.

HOWITT, HAROLD GIBSON, M.C., Capt., Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. On many occasions he rallied troops when they were falling back. He displayed complete fearlessness in moving about in the open, under heavy fire, in order to clear up obscure situations. When trying to re-establish the front line, he was once taken prisoner, but after a few hours made good his escape. His leadership and example were of the greatest value.

HUMBY, HOLGATE JOHN BRITTNELL, Second Lieut., Royal Garrison Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at forward observation posts during long hours, and in maintaining communications and despatching invaluable reports under intense shell and machine-gun fire. When the observation post was attacked by low-flying aeroplanes, he drove them off successfully by rifle fire. On one occasion, when communications failed, he went through a heavy barrage alone with a signalling lamp and established visual communication. Though often engaged in the most daring and enterprising undertakings, he always emerged successful. His services throughout the operations were beyond praise, and his courage a splendid example to all.

ILLINGWORTH, ROBERT LESLIE, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took over command of a partly-trained composite battalion from a wounded officer. With great skill he maintained the line, organized local counter-attacks, and drove the enemy back. It was in great measure due to his good leadership and courage that the battalion, which was in the heat of the fight, rendered such a good account of itself, both then and again on a subsequent occasion.

INGLIS, JOHN, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when he ably handled his battalion at a very critical moment. Under heavy fire he made many personal reconnaissances, and was always thoroughly in touch with the situation, sending back most valuable information. His leadership enabled difficult rearguard actions to be fought successfully for seven days.

JACK, JAMES CHARLES, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While his battery was being heavily gas shelled he superintended the removal of his guns to higher ground clear of the cloud of gas, and continued to fire heavily throughout the bombardment. Another day, when the enemy got close to the guns, he withdrew his guns without losing one. His fine courage and initiative throughout were a splendid example to the men.

JAGO, HENRY HARRIS, M.C., Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Devonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when leading the first wave of his battalion, through heavy machine-gun fire, in a counter-attack and assisting to press the attack home. Having reached the objective, he was largely responsible for the rapid re-forming of companies and consolidation of the line. His courage and fine example greatly inspired all ranks with him.

JAMES, ERNEST, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when the force he was with was heavily attacked and forced to retire in some confusion. He ably summed up the situation, organized a rearguard with part of his battalion, enabling the remainder to get into position, and only withdrew the rearguard when almost surrounded.

JEFFRIES, WILLIAM FRANCIS, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although suffering from the effects of gas poisoning at a time when a portion of the line was penetrated, he mustered all scattered troops, and with skilful leadership led them forward and restored the line. His example of courage and contempt of danger had the most inspiring influence on the men.

JEWELS, CHARLES EDGAR, M.C., Temporary Major. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding a battalion during an enemy attack. His personal example and excellent leadership enabled the battalion to hold on, with both flanks in the air, and in a subsequent counter-attack to inflict severe losses on the enemy. Throughout the operations he displayed great ability and courage.

LABOUCHERE, ARTHUR MAXWELL, Temporary Major, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his battalion. At a time when a retirement was in progress he showed marked ability and coolness, and it was due to his fine handling of his men that the enemy were checked. His cheerfulness and disregard of danger did much to inspire his men.

LATHAM, STEPHEN GREY, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northamptonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a long period of active operations. He handled his battalion with great skill and forethought, and by his total disregard of personal danger he set a splendid example to all under his command. It was greatly due to his courage and untiring energy that severe losses were caused to the enemy, and that his battalion was cleared from difficult situations with the minimum casualties.

LAWRENCE, THOMPSON BROOK, M.C., D.C.M., Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in skilfully withdrawing his battalion, when ordered, without a casualty from close contact with the enemy. Also for gallant defence of his H.Q.'s in the support line, when he personally shot a number of the enemy.

LAWSON, ARTHUR BERTRAM, Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in action. On several occasions he handled his men with marked ability, and largely contributed to successful defence, when most heavily attacked by very superior forces. Throughout the operations, he showed great initiative and courage.

LORD, ARTHUR JOSIAH, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Fusiliers, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company forward in perfect order during a heavy barrage from the reserve to the support line, personally directing his men to the most advantageous positions. Later, he was personally responsible for an orderly withdrawal, his company being the last to leave the line. The same night he established a line in old trenches and shell holes, closing a gap left by the brigade on his flank.

LOWE, WILLIAM DOUGLAS, M.C., Temporary Major, West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was indefatigable under all conditions throughout heavy fighting. After the Brigadier and Brigade Major were casualties, and the brigade was without communication to the rear, he shouldered the whole responsibility until touch was regained.

LOWRY, AURIOL ERNEST ERIC, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during many days of very fierce fighting, when he led counter-attacks against overwhelming odds, and restored situations after the enemy had broken through; and finally, when surrounded on all sides, he cut his way out, being personally the last to cover the withdrawal. He was overpowered and captured, but during the night escaped from his escort, and made his way back across many miles at the greatest personal risk. His fortitude and indomitable courage throughout a memorable 12 days were beyond all praise.

LUMSDEN, WILLIAM VERNON, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During recent operations he handled his battalion with great skill. His personal example and coolness under heavy fire contributed largely to the stout defence put up by his battalion.

MABEN, HERBERT CARTEIGHE, M.C., Temporary Capt., Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. His commanding officer being wounded, he took charge at a most critical time during a hostile attack, reorganizing and allocating new positions under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire, and by his personal gallantry and coolness so encouraging all ranks that the enemy advance was checked, until he was ordered to withdraw, which, owing to his skill, he successfully accomplished with few further casualties.

MACDONALD, DONALD RAMSAY, M.C., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On various occasions he was the last to withdraw his battery, and his handling of a sub-group placed under his command enabled the infantry to prolong the defence by many hours. His courage and skill were admirable.

MACKENZIE, KENNETH WILLIAM, M.C., M.B., Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps (late Capt., Indian Medical Service). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the forward evacuation, when he kept in touch with the retiring infantry, continually searching for and collecting the wounded. It was largely due to his great energy, skill and foresight that so many of our casualties were so successfully evacuated.

MARCHMENT, ALAN FREDERICK, M.C., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his battalion. He directed the operations from the top of his dug-out, and though under heavy artillery, machine-gun and rifle fire during the day he continued to organize and direct his men with the utmost coolness, in spite of many direct hits. On more than one occasion he organized battalion headquarters details for counter-attack. He set a fine example of fearlessness and soldier-like qualities.

McCULLOCH, ANDREW JAMESON, D.C.M., Capt. and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout many days of severe fighting. His courage, energy and unfailing cheerfulness contributed in a most marked manner to the various successful withdrawals of the battalion, and were a magnificent example to his men, whose confidence he gained in the highest degree. Later, in command of a mixed force, his skill and coolness in difficult operations were worthy of the highest praise.

McKENZIE, CYRIL, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his company from position to position with uniform success. Five times attacked, he maintained his position until the end. He three times counter-attacked and gained his objective.

MITCHELL, JOHN DOUGLAS, Temporary Major, Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during long operations, when by his great personal courage and powers of leadership he assisted to hold the battalion together under most trying conditions. After the C.O. had been wounded early in the operations, he assumed command of the battalion, and the success and praise it earned were to a great extent due to the splendid example of energy and devotion set by him.

MOORE, ROBERT FRANK, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during lengthy operations. After his C.O. had been killed, he took command of the battalion, which he handled with great skill and judgment, beating off several determined attacks, and when finally compelled to withdraw, doing so in a masterly manner, and with a minimum of casualties. His conduct throughout the operations set a fine example of courage and leadership, and was of great value in maintaining the high morale of the battalion.

MORLEY, FRANCIS JOSEPH, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Dorsetshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a company in the front line, he inflicted heavy losses on the advancing enemy, and obtained information of great value to a subsequent operation. Later, he took command of the battalion, and conducted a retirement with great skill, showing much coolness and gallantry, and being wounded when retiring with the last line.

MOSBY, JOHN EDWARD GEORGE, Temporary Lieut., Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst on an artillery patrol. He was attacked by the enemy machines, two from the front and one from the rear. He engaged and drove off the latter but was hit in the abdomen, and when he turned to engage the others his pilot was hit and instantly killed. Although his machine fell out of control from 3,000 feet to 1,000 feet, he continued to engage them, and was again hit in the abdomen. But he succeeded in driving them off, and though his machine again became out of control he righted it and safely landed it at his aerodrome. He showed indomitable pluck, both during an unequal contest and in determining to land his machine without injury, although nearly unconscious from loss of blood.

NEILSON, DONALD FRANCIS, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of a company he met an enemy break-through by forming a defensive flank, and checked it. With much cheerfulness and courage he organized several bombing attacks, and held his original trenches intact. Subsequently, during the retirement, he was conspicuous for good leadership, carrying out difficult operations with complete disregard for personal danger. Later, he held an exposed forward position completely isolated from his brigade, and the stubborn resistance he made was of incalculable value to the success of the operation.

NORTON, EDWARD FELIX, M.C., Major, Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has earned distinction on many occasions, and invariably handled his battery under heavy fire with great skill; on one occasion fighting a rearguard action with remarkable ability and coolness.

O'KELLEY, ANDREW NOLAN, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King Edward's Horse, seconded Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to his skill and foresight his Tanks rendered the most valuable assistance to the infantry in carrying out local counter-attacks and covering their withdrawal. When his Tanks became derelict, and his men were organized into Lewis gun groups, he held the line against repeated attacks, showing splendid energy, and inflicting severe casualties on the enemy.

ORR, NORMAN CHARLES, Major, Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of his battalion during an enemy attack, when he displayed initiative, coolness, and power of command of a high order. He exposed himself fearlessly during personal reconnaissances, and the extrication of the battalion from a critical situation, with both flanks exposed and a river behind, was mainly due to his courage and skill.

PAGE, CHARLES ALEXANDER SHAW, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during many days of intense fighting, in which, by his high standard of military leadership, he kept his battalion together under the most difficult circumstances. He held river crossings in face of furious attacks, and although on one occasion his flank was turned he offered a desperate resistance against great odds, and finally withdrew, under orders, as a forward body, in spite of heavy losses. Throughout the operations he exposed himself fearlessly, and his magnificent example maintained to the end the high morale and fine spirit of his battalion.

PAGE, CHARLES HENRY, Temporary Major, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when, with good leadership, he commanded the rearguard of his battalion during a retirement, and enabled the battalion to get away with few casualties, whilst it inflicted heavy ones on the enemy. Also for making many personal reconnaissances of doubtful spots, and obtaining valuable information.

PARISH, FRANCIS WOODBINE, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the line was forced back this officer, collecting all the available men, led three counter-attacks, restoring the situation, and then, moving about exposed to intense fire, calmly reorganized the battalion.

PERY, THE HONOURABLE EDMUND COLQUHOUN, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer went forward and assisted an infantry regiment in a very difficult withdrawal. He then went and brought in a T.M.B. and a M.G. Coy., who had not received orders to withdraw. He then went and assisted the O.C. of an Infantry Regiment to withdraw. All this took place under very heavy fire, and in close contact with the enemy. His conduct and courage throughout the operations has been magnificent.

PITTS, ARTHUR THOMAS, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He established a dressing station in a forward and very exposed position. During two days and two nights he remained under continuous and terrific shell fire, dressing wounded and evacuating them. His courage and endurance under most trying conditions saved many valuable lives.

POOLE, LEOPOLD THOMAS, M.C., M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack. Hearing that a large number of wounded were uncollected, owing to normal communications having been cut by the attack, he proceeded at once to the area, which was subjected to a sustained bombardment, and organized stretcher parties, sending up all his available cars. It was owing to his fine courage and promptitude that upwards of 300 casualties were not left unattended.

RAMSDEN, VINCENT BASIL, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when leading his battalion in an attack. Having reached the final objective, and finding that many of the enemy had been passed over and were firing from the rear, he went back and brought forward his reserve company, which mopped them all up. He killed several of the enemy himself, and forced others to surrender. This success at a critical period was largely due to his personal courage and intrepid enthusiasm.

READ, HERBERT EDWARD, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his commanding officer was wounded, he took command and successfully held his position for some time, surrounded by the enemy. He then organized the remnants of the battalion, and fought a brilliant rearguard action. His behaviour at a most critical period of the battle was worthy of the highest praise.

READE, ARTHUR, M.C., Temporary Major, South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of a composite battalion when the enemy broke through a portion of the line. Calling on 30 men to follow, he led a counter-attack, driving the enemy back, capturing 20 prisoners and seven machine guns and killing about 60, with a loss of four killed and six wounded. He handed over the position intact when relieved on the third night.

REID, DENNIS WHITEHORN, M.C., Temporary Capt., Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great dash in the face of machine-gun fire, and on entering the outskirts of a village captured single-handed 14 enemy, and assisted in the taking of five machine guns. On the following day he consolidated and held a position with a mixed body of troops, short of officers and N.C.O.'s. He always set an example of coolness and courage and was to the fore in all the actions in which his battalion took part.

ROME, CHARLES LESLIE, Capt. (Acting Major), Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions in action, and notably when he constantly visited a front line during an intense bombardment, supervising the defences, and by his courage and example encouraging the men. On the occasion of a hostile attack, he personally disposed of three of the enemy, including an officer who was in a car with important documents, and was instrumental in capturing several prisoners. His splendid example has been most inspiring to both officers and other ranks.

RUSSELL, VALENTINE CUBITT, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a period when the situation was critical, the front having been forced in and the flank in the air, he took charge as the parties fell back and organized a fresh defence line, under heavy fire, which he held for several hours. Later, when forced again to withdraw, he was the last to leave, and then only when the enemy were within 40 yards SHINER, HERBERT, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battery, in an advanced position, was subjected throughout the day to heavy shelling, and at times to bombing from low-flying aeroplanes, but he kept it in action the whole time, and finally brought out his six guns intact. On another occasion one of his guns got badly ditched, but he took back some men and extricated it. When an ammunition waggon, loaded with shells, was set on fire by the assistance of a N.C.O., extinguished the flames.

SIME, ARCHIBALD WILLIAM HEPBURN, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut., Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, while in charge of four Vickers' machine guns. One night he suspected the close proximity of an enemy party, organized a patrol, and destroyed them. Next day he caught a prisoner with maps showing enemy's objective, and worked his guns so ably during the day that he greatly hampered the enemy's advance. He showed great courage and ability.

STEVENSON, DONALD FASKERN, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Yeomanry and Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when carrying out low-flying reconnaissances and contact patrols, under very heavy machine-gun, rifle, and anti-aircraft fire. In his patrols, often lasting many hours, and in bad weather conditions, he attacked enemy infantry, transport and batteries from a low level, using his machine gun and dropping bombs, frequently returning with his machine riddled with bullets, and the information he obtained was quite invaluable. His cheerful spirit, consistent dash, and fearlessness, and his magnificent work have set a splendid example to all in his squadron, and greatly encouraged them at a time when the casualties in it were extremely heavy.

STEWART, FREDERICK NAYLOR, M.C., M.D., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He collected and dressed cases under the most intense shell fire, and on two occasions, by remaining behind after the order to withdraw had been given, succeeded in evacuating all the stretcher cases. He set a high example of courage and self-sacrifice. He was wounded in the face and thigh.

STEWART, JAMES LENNOX, M.C., M.B., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although his aid post was in the open, a few yards behind the front line, he remained there, caring for the wounded, and through his efforts they were all dressed and evacuated. He was the only Medical Officer of the Brigade left.

STILLWELL, WILLIAM DIGBY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the brigade was under heavy fire all day, and two battery commanders out of three became casualties, he reconnoitred new positions and superintended the withdrawal of his batteries, his signal officer being killed beside him. He was the last to leave the battery positions. The reports which he sent back enabled prompt and effective action to be taken.

STRINGER, CHARLES HERBERT, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of an advanced dressing station. Owing to the whole force retreating, the collection and evacuation of large numbers of wounded, who were lying in thick woods, was a task of extreme difficulty in view of the rapid advance of the enemy. Although subjected to heavy fire, he remained behind till the enemy were almost up to his position, and by skilful organization he succeeded in evacuating practically all the wounded. His magnificent courage and devotion saved many wounded from falling into the enemy's hands.

SUTCLIFFE, RICHARD DOUGLAS, Capt. (Acting Major), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations, when he led his company under heavy shell fire, and expelled the enemy from an important position. Later, after his Colonel had been wounded, he assumed command of the battalion, holding on to the position until forced to fall back owing to the flank being turned. Throughout the five days of operations his gallant leadership inspired all ranks with confidence, and was worthy of the highest praise.

SUTTON, GEORGE WILLIAM, Capt., Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when his commanding officer being wounded he commanded the battalion, and led a most successful counter-attack. His behaviour throughout the day was most gallant.

SWIFT, NEVILLE CROPLEY, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his battalion in a counter-attack, which was completely successful. He continued to set a splendid example until severely wounded.

TAYLOR, JOHN ALEXANDER CHISHOLM, Capt., Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of the company on the right flank, to which he added some 300 men collected from other divisions. By a prompt counter-attack he defeated the enemy's attempt to envelop the right flank. His coolness, promptitude and personal gallantry were a great incentive to his men.

UTTERSON-KELSO, JOHN EDWARD, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Scots Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Organized counter-attacks, leading his men with great skill and daring throughout prolonged fighting. Though twice buried by shell bursts and badly concussed, he remained at duty, setting a fine example, until his battalion was relieved.

VANNER, JAMES CHARLES, M.C., Temporary Capt., Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of two companies during a withdrawal. He made a block in a railway cutting and caused the demolition of two bridges over the railway while the enemy were crossing. His fine conduct throughout.

WALKER, JAMES, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great skill and coolness, and conducted counter-attacks against the enemy successfully when the situation was precarious. At one time he procured the services of a Tank to help in holding the line. All through the operations he set an example of coolness and resource.

WARD, JOSEPH HUGH, M.C., M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of a cavalry field ambulance. During two days of intense fighting, in spite of the enforced moves of his unit, he continued to keep an A.D.S. open until the last possible moment to deal with large numbers of wounded, only retiring when all had been evacuated and when ordered to do so. Throughout this period he showed an example of pluck and determination beyond all praise.

WARDLE, MARK KINGSLEY, M.C., Capt., Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By a daring reconnaissance during a withdrawal he located the exact extent of a gap between our troops, and ascertained the position, strength and movement of the enemy. His report was of the utmost value to the brigade commander and to the Higher Command. All through the operations he displayed great courage and enthusiasm.

WATKINS, JAMES WILLIAM, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion and repelling an attack. His personal example of courage and cheerfulness, and his attention to all the details of the measures for assisting the defence, were undoubtedly responsible for the very fine fight made by his battalion at a very critical period, and for the ultimate success of the defence.

WATSON, FRANCIS SHULDHAM, Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He moved his battery under very trying conditions with great skill. At one time the enemy were within rifle fire of the position, and the roads were being shelled, but he withdrew his guns and all his stores successfully, and then came into action again. On previous occasions and in subsequent operations he has proved himself a very capable battery commander with judgment and resource.

WEDGWOOD, GILBERT HENRY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire and Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion. He denied an important locality to the enemy by the promptitude and rapidity of his movements. For three days he beat off heavy attacks, without losing a yard of ground, and the fighting spirit shown by him was a fine example to his men.

WHITWILL, MARK, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his telephone lines were cut, he repeatedly passed through a heavy barrage, in order to keep in touch with the brigade headquarters. He made personal reconnaissances to the posts in front, and on one occasion assumed command of some troops, organized defences, and held the posts until relieved. He constantly exposed himself to heavy fire, and by his coolness and example kept troops together when there was serious danger of their becoming disorganized.

WILLIAMS, EVELYN HUGH WATKIN, Major, Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led a mounted charge along the hostile line, after the infantry line had broken back, taking the line in flank, and in the face of the heaviest machine-gun fire he carried out the manoeuvre successfully, sabring nearly 100 of the enemy, and taking 100 prisoners, although his own troop was only 150. His fine action rallied the infantry, who advanced, and recovered over 3,000 yards in depth of the whole line.

WILLIAMS, ROGER LLEWELLYN, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations, when, with the C.O. and Adjutant, he was the last to withdraw. Shortly after the C.O. was severely wounded, but, with the assistance of another officer, he carried him away for over half a mile under intense machine-gun and rifle fire at close range. Afterwards he continued to dress the wounded, including the Adjutant, under the most intense fire, and throughout the withdrawal he showed the utmost energy and devotion to duty.

WILLIS, HERBERT GEORGE, M.B., M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a bearer division of the Field Ambulance throughout ten days' fighting, he kept all in order by visiting the R.A.P.'s and Ambulance Relay Posts, and when the trolley line was destroyed by shell fire he reorganized the system of evacuation, going round the posts and making the necessary arrangements at great personal risk. By his action he ensured the clearance of the wounded.

WILSON, PERCY PHILLIPS, Major, Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during recent operations. He showed great coolness and skill while commanding the battalion, particularly on one occasion when the brigade on his right was forced back. Also he stayed in the trenches for four days after being wounded in the foot. He was a fine example to his men.

WOLFE-MURRAY, ROBERT ALEXANDER, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When it became necessary to occupy a new shell-hole line, to prevent the enemy massing within striking distance, this officer led two companies across the open under heavy shell and machine-gun fire, and organized the line.

WOOD, JOHN BRUCE, M.C., Temporary Capt., Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a hostile attack. When the front line was lost, he organized a line of defence, and by his courage in face of heavy artillery and machine-gun fire he so inspired his men that he was able to hold up the enemy for a considerable time. Later, when his battalion had taken up a fresh position, he displayed the greatest coolness and courage under most trying conditions, and it was largely owing to his untiring efforts that the enemy was prevented from forcing the line.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BENSON, FREDERICK MERRETT, Major, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout a long period of intense fighting, when he commanded his battery with the greatest courage and skill. Although the battery was constantly subjected to heavy machine-gun fire, and from as many as seven low-flying aeroplanes at once, he continually kept up a heavy fire, covering the retirement of the infantry and the remaining batteries of the group. His magnificent example to his men was of the greatest value.

NICHOLSON, WILLIAM CEDRIC, M.C., Capt., Canadian Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, with his motor machine gunners, was successful time after time in holding up large masses of the rapidly advancing enemy. He personally tended to wounded men, and sent them back in his motor transport. Later, he had his right arm taken off, and while waiting to be evacuated cheered his men by his courage and grit.

REID, JOHN GARNER, Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Overseas Railway Construction Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Without awaiting orders he arranged to maintain the railway and operate signals. Again he organized parties to maintain railways when labour companies were removed without notice, and also organized demolition parties and a service of runners. By example he encouraged both officers and men under heavy shell fire, and the satisfactory results obtained were largely due to his skill and untiring endeavour.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

ADAMS, WILLIAM GEORGE, M.C., Capt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on several occasions. When his battalion was moving up to support the front line, through a heavy barrage, his control and leadership averted many casualties. After digging in, he went forward and found another company being surrounded by the enemy; he extricated them, and held a position further back for two hours against heavy odds. His courage and judgment throughout the operations were beyond praise.

AHRENS, CHARLES, M.C., Capt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He moved his company forward by night, established contact with the enemy and dug in, supervising the siting and construction of the posts under constant sniping and machine-gun fire. The next night, after a daring reconnaissance, he manoeuvred his company to within 30 yards of a strong enemy post, compelling them to withdraw. On another occasion he led his company against a strongly-held crest line, capturing 73 prisoners and four machine guns. On several other occasions his splendid handling of his company caused heavy losses to the enemy at small cost.

COLLINS, ARCHIBALD JOHN, M.C., Major, Australian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the evacuation of wounded during intense fighting. Although the A.D.S. in which he was located was subjected to heavy enemy artillery fire, by his splendid energy, coolness and courage, he was enabled to evacuate safely several hundred casualties. His magnificent example inspired all who came in contact with him, and stimulated junior officers and exhausted stretcher-bearers to further efforts.

DUNCAN, WALTER JOHN CLARE, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding a company. Troops on his left were being pressed back, but his fine dash and accurate fire caused the enemy to withdraw, leaving him in an excellent defensive position. Later in the day, he led his company in a counter-attack in conjunction with the cavalry, and again drove the enemy back, inflicting heavy casualties. Early next morning, his company made an advance of 600 yards, and materially improved the position. He kept headquarters constantly informed with useful information.

TAYLOR, HARRY, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When at dawn a large party of the enemy were seen approaching, this officer went out alone with a Lewis gun and dispersed them, killing many. When the enemy attack developed in overwhelming force, he worked along the whole of his sector, bombing, sniping, and using captured machine guns; for 3½ hours not a single enemy could get within 10 yards of his line.

YOUNG, CHARLES EUSTON, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When two divisions attacked our front line in force, with field guns at close range, this officer's company, under his supervision, held on for 3½ hours, saving the situation. Field guns at 250 yards opened fire on his headquarters, but he sniped the gunners. Later, he crawled out and knocked out a machine gun with rifle grenades. Throughout attack and defence he kept his company well in hand.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

MILES, REGINALD, M.C., Major, New Zealand Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He fought his battery until the enemy were within 500 yards and his ammunition exhausted, at the same time rallying infantry stragglers and manning a fire trench. Then made a reconnaissance into a wood, sending back valuable information. He was finally wounded by rifle fire at close range.

VERCOE, HENRY RAY, Capt., Auckland Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his company commander was wounded he took command and led the company successfully under very heavy machine-gun fire. Next day he carried a wounded man into safety under heavy fire, and the following day, when some of his men were buried by a mine-thrower he went to the spot and saved the lives of two by digging them out with his bare hands. This officer was a fine example of courage and determination.

London Gazette, 27 July, 1918.—"War Office, 27 July, 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for distinguished service in connection with military operations in East Africa. Dated 3 June, 1918. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

HOY, CHARLES NORMAN, D.S.O., Major, Cape Corps.

ROSE, RICHARD AUBREY DE BURGH, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Colonel), Worcestershire Regt., attached Gold Coast Regt., West African Field Force.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

COWELL, WILLIAM RALPH, Major, Cape Corps.

GORDON-GRAY, GORDON, M.C., Capt., South African Field Ambulance.

GREEN, ALEXANDER McWATT, Capt. (Acting Major), South African Medical Corps.

SMYTH, TEMPLE, Lieut.-Colonel, South African Medical Corps.

London Gazette, 3 Aug. 1918.—"Air Ministry, 3 Aug. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the undermentioned rewards on Officers of the Royal Air Force, in recognition of gallantry in flying operations against the enemy. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

MANNOCK, EDWARD, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.) (formerly Royal Engineers). This officer has now accounted for 48 enemy machines. His success is due to wonderful shooting and a determination to get to close quarters; to attain this he displays most skilful leadership and unflinching courage. These characteristics were markedly shown on a recent occasion when he attacked six hostile scouts, three of which he brought down. Later on the same day he attacked a two-seater, which crashed into a tree.

(The announcement of award of Distinguished Service Order, and First Bar thereto, will be published in a later Gazette.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

GILMOUR, JOHN, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.) (formerly Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders). He is a most inspiring patrol leader who has destroyed 23 enemy aircraft, and shot down eight others out of control. While leading an offensive patrol he shot down one enemy biplane in flames and drove down a second. A short time afterwards he, with four others, attacked about 40 enemy scouts. He himself destroyed one in the air, drove another out of control and a third in flames, successfully accounting for five enemy machines in one day.

McCALL, FRED ROBERT, M.C., D.F.C., Lieut., (formerly Alberta Regt.). A brilliant and gallant officer who has accounted for 14 enemy machines. On a recent date he destroyed four during a patrol in the morning, and another in the evening, in each case closing to point-blank range with his opponent. His courage and offensive spirit has inspired all who serve with him.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order for gallantry and distinguished service in operations in Mesopotamia:

TENNANT, JOHN EDWARD, M.C., Major and Temporary Lieut.-Colonel (formerly Brevet Major, Scots Guards).

London Gazette, 7 Aug. 1918.—"Admiralty, S.W., 7 Aug. 1918.—Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Light Cruisers which attacked Norwegian Convoy on 17 Oct. 1917. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour, decoration and medals to the undermentioned Officers and men in recognition of their gallantry in the action between H.M. Torpedo-Boat Destroyers Mary Rose and Strongbow and three German light cruisers which attacked a convoy on 17 Oct. 1917." Included in award: To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order:

BROOKE, EDWARD, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. In command of H.M.S. Strongbow, fought a gallant action against overwhelming odds in endeavouring to protect a convoy. He was severely wounded during the engagement.

"Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

PULLEYNE, RICHARD IVOR, D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Navy.

TOTTENHAM, CHARLES LOFTUS, Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve.

"Honours for Services in Mesopotamia and the Persian Gulf.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

SUTER, ROY NEVILLE, Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), R.N. In recognition of the zeal and ability displayed by him as Flag Commander to the Rear-Admiral, Persian Gulf and Mesopotamia, from June, 1917, to May, 1918. Lieut.-Commander Suter has served in the trying climate of this station for five years, and took part in many actions whilst in command of H.M.S. Lawrence.

"Honours for Miscellaneous Services.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

BENSON, CYRIL HERBERT GORDON, Commander, R.N. In recognition of great gallantry displayed in carrying out specially dangerous mine-sweeping operations.

London Gazette, 16 Aug. 1918.—"War Office, 16 Aug. 1918. With reference to the awards conferred as announced in the London Gazette dated 4 March, 1918, the following are the statements of service for which the decorations were conferred. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BAKER, SIR RANDOLPH LITTLEHALES, D.S.O., Bart., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his regiment with great skill and intrepidity under shell and rifle fire, which resulted in a strong enemy counter-attack on the flank being repulsed and the position secured.

CRIPPS, THE HONOURABLE FREDERICK HAYWOOD, D.S.O. (name Haywood corrected to Heyworth), Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed much skill in a reconnaissance, previous to charging the enemy's position, during which he led his regiment, afterwards returning to direct the rear squadron over bad ground, under heavy shell and rifle fire.

GILMOUR, JOHN, Jun., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion in an attack. He led his battalion with great skill, and his courage and example contributed largely to the success achieved.

GODWIN, CHARLES ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Cavalry, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attacked and captured an enemy position in the face of heavy shell, machine-gun and rifle fire. Later, he directed the attack by his brigade on a strong enemy position, and by his skill and determination contributed largely to the success of the operation.

MOORE, LANCELOT GEOFFREY, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a time when the situation was very obscure, he led his battalion under heavy fire of all kinds with great skill and courage to its objective. His able disposition of his companies and quick grasp of the situation enabled a dangerous gap in the line to be closed, and prevented the village from falling into the hands of the enemy. He held his position against repeated attacks for over 48 hours under very heavy shell fire, himself remaining the whole time in the front line. His personal courage and example were of the greatest value in keeping the line intact.

ST. JOHN, WILLIAM EUSTACE, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was ordered to relieve another unit, which at the time was heavily engaged with the enemy. By his able handling of the situation the relief was successfully accomplished and the fight carried on. During the following days the enemy made repeated attempts to capture the high ground held by his battalion, but they were driven back on every occasion. His gallantry and example were undoubtedly responsible for the determined resistance made by his battalion.

SEGRAVE, WILLIAM HENRY ERIK, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the troops on his flank were pressed back, a gap in the line occurred, and the enemy were on the point of breaking through owing to the heavy casualties of his battalion. He therefore collected all the personnel of his headquarters, and personally led them against the enemy, and succeeded in forming a defensive flank. By his fine example of coolness and total disregard of personal danger, when under intense fire, he restored complete confidence, and undoubtedly saved a very critical situation.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

McCARROLL, JAMES NEIL, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Mounted Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out an attack on the flank of the enemy's position with great skill. When heavily counter-attacked he showed splendid ability in meeting the enemy's attack, altering his dispositions several times to meet the changing circumstances, and drove back the enemy with heavy loss. He set a fine example to his men.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

BAKER, BRIAN EDMUND, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Whilst on patrol he engaged nine Albatross scouts, five of these being driven down, two of which he accounted for. On another occasion, whilst leading his flight on an offensive patrol, he dived alone on a formation of six enemy scouts, driving one down out of control. During the course of his patrol work he has brought down 10 enemy machines, and his work on all occasions has been magnificent. He is a dashing patrol leader, and inspires all with the greatest keenness.

BATTERSHILL, LIONEL WARMINGTON, M.C., Temporary Lieut., Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He, realizing the critical situation, brought up two machine guns to the reserve line under an intense enemy barrage. Owing to the heavy casualties amongst his gun crews, he worked one gun himself, and although four times wounded, continued to fire, inflicting heavy casualties upon the enemy, until he was in a fainting condition and unable to carry the gun away. His courage and determination were of the highest order.

BLACKWOOD, ALBEMARLE PRICE, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He conducted a most successful raid on a village in the enemy's lines, which resulted in the capture of 55 prisoners and heavy casualties to the enemy. The success of the enterprise was due to his forethought and skilful handling of his command.

BUCKLE, ARCHIBALD WALTER, Temporary Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a battalion detailed to counter-attack, he carried out a daring reconnaissance, under extremely heavy artillery fire, enabling him to form sound dispositions, which resulted in the recapture of an important position. Throughout the day his coolness and example inspired all ranks.

DONALDSON, HERBERT, Temporary Sub-Lieut., Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in charge of a company in the front line which was subjected to several intense bombardments, after which the enemy attacked six times. They were driven off on each occasion, and the position was held intact, although one flank was in the air. He worked continually, getting the shattered line into a state of defence, and set his men a magnificent example of courage and determination. When the enemy attacked with liquid flame and forced back his flank a short distance, he led a counter-attack which re-established the position and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

FREW, MATTHEW BROWN, M.C., Temporary Capt., General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On one occasion when leader of a patrol he shot down an enemy aeroplane, two others being also accounted for in the same fight. On a later occasion he destroyed three enemy machines in one combat, all of which were seen to crash to the ground. Immediately after this combat he had to switch off his engine and make an attempt to glide towards our lines five miles away on account of his machine having received a direct hit. Owing to the great skill and courage he displayed in the handling of his damaged machine, he succeeded in bringing it safely to our lines. He has destroyed 22 enemy machines up to date.

HARRIS, WALTER KILROY, M.C., Temporary Lieut., Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked under an intense bombardment and captured his trench, he directed repeated bombing attacks until he had regained half the trench and established block, which was hotly contested all day. Towards evening he led a bombing attack along both sides of the trench, which regained the whole position and resulted in the capture of five enemy machine guns. Throughout the day he led his company with great courage and determination under heavy fire, and set them a magnificent example. It was entirely due to his efforts that the position was re-established.

LLOYD, LEMUEL, Temporary Major, Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy, after a heavy bombardment, succeeded in penetrating the front line, he at once went to the scene of the fight and organized a successful counter-attack. During the following days, when the enemy again succeeded in entering our positions, on two occasions, under heavy gas-shell bombardments and supported by liquid flame, he organized counter-attacks, which each time drove the enemy out, and completely restored the position. He showed magnificent determination and skill, and his courage and energy were of the greatest value during a period of stubborn and difficult fighting.

MARSHALL, FREDERIC ADRIAN JOSEPH EVANS, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked and broke through the front line he at once grasped the situation and led his company, which was in reserve, to form a defensive line under heavy fire. He collected men of other units, organized the defence, and held up the enemy. He then led his men in a counter-attack, recaptured part of the lost ground, and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. By his courage and resource he undoubtedly saved a critical situation.

MORGAN-OWEN, MORGAN MADDOX, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On the occasion of the enemy attack, when his battalion was in reserve, he moved it up to resist the attack, and held on to the position for two days, though the troops on his flank were pressed back. His steadfast determination to hold his ground against repeated attacks and under heavy fire largely contributed to restoring and keeping in hand the critical situation which had arisen.

PECK, ARTHUR HICKS, M.C., Temporary Capt., General List and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During two months aerial fighting he has never hesitated to attack the enemy when they were in superior numbers. On one occasion, when piloting a scout, he engaged a hostile formation consisting of four scouts and two two-seaters, completely dispersing them and driving one down out of control. His dash, resourcefulness and skill have been most marked.

POLLOCK, HENRY BRODHURST, Temporary Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great fearlessness and ability in handling his battalion in a most difficult situation during an attack. Under very heavy shell fire he personally superintended the reorganization of his line, and inspired his men by his example of coolness and gallantry.

READY, JOHN MILNER, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Berkshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked he was holding the line on the extreme flank of the division. Realizing that the safety of the battalion depended on holding on until the last possible moment, he organized and led bombing sections against the enemy, holding them up for three hours, in spite of their superior numbers. When ordered to withdraw, he conducted a very successful withdrawal, which enabled him to hold a very important portion of the defence system for two days until relieved.

SALKELD, HAROLD YORKE, Major, Lancers, Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his squadron forward with great skill under heavy fire, and seized a commanding position. He then led a dismounted attack on a further enemy position, which he captured and held against the enemy, although surrounded on three sides. He set a splendid example to his men.

London Gazette, 22 Aug. 1918.—"War Office, 22 Aug. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Distinguished Service Order to the undermentioned Officers for distinguished service in the field, and in connection with the Campaign in German South-West Africa, 1914-15. To date 1 Jan. 1916."

ANDERSON, JAMES, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Knowing that reliable information regarding a ford was urgently required, he, accompanied by another officer, proceeded on his own initiative to this point. Though the ford was guarded by three hostile machine guns in a trench 100 yards from the water, they swam out to sea, and turning parallel to the shore, attempted to cross the mouth of the river. Finding themselves on their own side of the river mouth, they made a second attempt, and finally succeeded in reaching the enemy's side of the river mouth. There they ascertained both the depth and breadth of the ford, information which proved to be of inestimable value to subsequent operations. The success of this reconnaissance was due to their coolness and resource.
 FORTH, NOWELL BARNARD DE LANCEY, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his personal courage and example he inspired the greatest confidence in all ranks. Though his position was most difficult and subject to an intense frontal and enfilade machine-gun fire, he continually moved from position to position, cheering his men. It was largely owing to his fine leadership and great gallantry that this critical position was held all day.

FARQUHAR, JAMES, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when supporting an infantry attack. He led a section of one of his batteries across the open and got it into action close behind the firing line. His gallant conduct was an inspiration to all.

FORBES-ROBERTSON, JAMES, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great dash and determination in a successful attack. Later, during continual enemy attacks, though he was wounded in the eye and unable to see, he was led about by an orderly among his men in the front line, encouraging and inspiring them by his magnificent example of courage and determination.

REES, JOHN GORDON, D.S.O., Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With a company barely 100 strong he surrounded and captured a village at dawn, where he found an enemy force of between 500 and 600 strong. Owing to heavy machine-gun fire he was unable to send back the whole of the enemy force as prisoners, but succeeded in sending back 300 of them. Subsequently, on being counter-attacked, it was owing to his able leading and daring gallantry that he was able to withdraw his company under heavy fire, though it was practically surrounded.

ROMANES, JAMES GERALD PAGET, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great skill and courage in a night attack. Under his leadership the battalion captured all its objectives without a check, inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, captured over 50 prisoners, and consolidated all the ground won under intense shell fire.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

BARBER, THOMAS PHILIP, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He, seeing that the enemy were taking up a position, rushed to the front, shot two of the enemy with his revolver, and leading his men forward compelled the hostile force to withdraw over the ridge. Further, when he noticed that the enemy were still wavering, he led his men forward again, and drove the enemy back on to another ridge in rear. Throughout the day he showed the greatest contempt of all danger, and set a magnificent example to his men.

BOWMAN, GEOFFREY HILTON, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Warwickshire Regt., Special Reserve, and Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has recently destroyed six enemy aeroplanes and driven down others out of control. He has at all times shown splendid courage and determination, and by his leadership and good example has contributed largely to the success of his squadron.

BRAND, DAVID ERNEST, Major, Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in a bayonet charge on an enemy position in the dark without a previous reconnaissance. He captured the position which dominated the crossing of a river, and thereby secured the crossing for the remainder of the troops. After holding his ground during the night, he captured a further enemy position on the following morning. He showed splendid leadership and skill.

CANTRELL-HUBBERT, GEORGE ALBERT JESSOP, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By the gallant and rapid manner in which he led his men and charged the advancing enemy he stopped the hostile attack and thus prevented the flank of the whole line from being turned. His dash and initiative were most meritorious.

CHANNER, GEORGE KENDALL, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the defence of the ridge his position was subjected to heavy artillery bombardment and repeated and determined enemy attacks, which had as their object the envelopment of his left flank. These attacks were only frustrated by heavy counter-attacks, led by himself, and although he was wounded on two successive days he continued to command his battalion, personally directing and organizing the defence. By his total indifference to danger, cheerfulness and splendid example he maintained the spirits of his men and enabled them to hold out.

COOK, JOHN BLAIR, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Scots Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great determination in an attack. He continually pushed forward, and eventually gained his objective, and consolidated a captured village with great skill. His coolness and courage were most marked.

CREWE-READ, RANDULF O., Capt., South Wales Borderers, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By bold and skilful handling of his company he gained a position in rear of the enemy, and captured two field guns and a number of prisoners. On another occasion he manoeuvred his company to a flank, under heavy fire, and captured a position from which the enemy was enfilading the advance. He showed splendid initiative and skill.

DEAKIN, ERNEST BETTON, M.C., Capt., Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His company having for its objective a certain redoubt, he found that through an error this redoubt was being attacked by another company, which should have attacked a strongly defended field work. He immediately changed his objective, and attacked and captured this work. He showed remarkable decision and presence of mind, and by his resource and initiative saved what would undoubtedly have been a very serious situation.

DRUMMOND, ROY MAXWELL, M.C., Capt., Royal Flying Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While escorting a reconnaissance, on three hostile planes being encountered he at once attacked and drove down one of these, although he was being himself attacked in the rear by the remaining two. Drawing these latter away from the reconnaissance machine, he turned, attacked and followed one of these down to a lower altitude, despite heavy anti-aircraft fire. This machine was then seen to strike the ground and turn over. He then attacked the third machine, and, after a long burst of fire at close range, both wings of the enemy plane were observed to collapse in the air. The whole action was characterized by the great skill and daring of this officer.

GLAZEBROOK, PHILIP KIRKLAND, Major, Yeomanry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When, by the capture of a neighbouring height, the enemy had rendered the position of two companies most precarious, owing to the fact that they now came under concentrated machine-gun fire from their left rear, he immediately went to the most threatened spot, and by his courageous bearing and great coolness was responsible for the safe withdrawal of these companies. The unflinching energy and resolution shown by this officer were most noticeable.

HAWKINS, EDWARD BRIAN BARKLEY, Capt. (Temporary Major), West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Boldly attacking a superior enemy force, he inflicted severe casualties on them, thus diverting them from their objective, and being instrumental in causing their subsequent surrender. He has at all times shown the greatest courage and initiative, and has afforded a most inspiring example to the troops under him.

HAY, ARCHIBALD ASHWORTH BAILIE, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in connection with a raid on the enemy's trenches. By his accurate judgment and observation and his skilful preparation he contributed largely to the success of the raid.

HIND, HUGH WILLIAM, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having conducted a reconnaissance at great personal risk, he returned to battalion headquarters to find that his commanding officer had been killed. Taking command of the battalion, then heavily engaged, he led it through the remainder of the action, displaying a marked grip of every situation, and inspiring all ranks by his coolness and self-confidence under very trying circumstances.

HUNT, DOUGLAS ALEXIS, Temporary Capt., King's African Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of the firing line, through his personal courage and example he was largely instrumental in repelling several enemy counter-attacks, which were launched against him by very superior forces. On these occasions of danger and difficulty his courage, coolness and determination were of the highest order, only equalled by his courageous conduct on all other previous occasions.

INNES, WILLIAM KEDIE, Capt., King's Own Scottish Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked and penetrated into a village in our lines he at once organized and led a bombing party, killed and captured several of the enemy and forced them back. He then organized more parties and quickly cleared the enemy from the village. His prompt and determined action saved a critical situation.

LANDSBERG, HERBERT VALENTINE, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When observing fire from a position in the open, he and his battery came under prolonged and heavy shell fire, several casualties being inflicted on men and horses, which necessitated the withdrawal of the teams and the man-handling of the guns to the rear. He, however, remained in his position in the open and brought effective fire to bear on the enemy, rendering great assistance in the capture of the ridge. His courage and devotion to duty were most commendable.

LINDSAY, ERIC LAWRENCE, Temporary Capt., King's African Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With forty men he succeeded in repelling an enemy attack made with greatly superior forces and in inflicting severe casualties on them. Later, when surrounded, he extricated his party with the greatest skill and determination, himself accounting for twelve of the enemy, and succeeded later in joining up with his main body. His conduct in action has always been characterized by courage and resource.

NOEL, HAROLD ERNEST, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His personal example inspired and encouraged his men on what seemed an impossible task, that of making a pathway for the guns under the most difficult and dangerous conditions. Having got his battery in action in time to render material aid in repelling an enemy attack, he remained in the open with a section, which was being subjected to heavy shell and machine-gun fire, displaying marked gallantry, and by his contempt of danger did much to inspire his men with confidence.

SMITH, RONALD KING, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Wiltshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a raid on the enemy's positions he led the raiding party on a long march by compass bearing over very difficult country. When he encountered a redoubt strongly held by the enemy, he led the charge which captured the position, inflicting heavy casualties upon the enemy. He showed marked courage and resource.

URWICK, FRANK DAVIDSON, Major, Somersetshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After the capture of the village by his battalion, on the enemy putting down an intense artillery and machine-gun barrage, he moved his headquarters from a position of cover over this shell-swept zone and, keeping his signallers with him, established in the village the sole means of communication between the two advanced battalions and brigade headquarters. On reaching the village, where he found that the enemy were developing a strong counter-attack against his right flank, he immediately collected a miscellaneous party of men, organized the defence, and succeeded in repulsing the hostile attack. Throughout he displayed the utmost indifference to danger, and set a magnificent example to his men.

WRAY, EDWARD MILLARD GRUBB, Second Lieut., Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although in the second wave of the attack, noticing that his company commander had become a casualty, he at once went forward and took command, leading the attack which cleared the trenches of the enemy. Having vigorously supervised the consolidation, he volunteered to return and report the situation to his commanding officer. Finding on his way his company commander, who was unable to move, he brought him under cover despite a heavy fire. Later, he volunteered to get in touch with the battalion on the flank, and succeeded in establishing communication with it. His conduct throughout was exceptional, and by his utter disregard of danger and by his cheerfulness he did much to encourage his company.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BOWIE, DOUGLAS BAIN, Major, Dragoons. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a raid on the enemy's trenches. He led his party with great coolness and courage and cleared three lines of the enemy's trenches on a wide front, killing or capturing the whole enemy garrison in that area.

PRICE, EVAN EDWARD, M.C., Lieut., Dragoons. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led forward parties and blew gaps in two belts of the enemy's wire before a raid. His accurate reconnaissances on the three previous nights, and his splendid courage and initiative on the night of the raid, contributed largely to the success of the enterprise.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

LORCH, ARTHUR EDWARD, Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great courage in boldly reconnoitring forward positions for his battery, whereby he was able to bring his battery into effective action very rapidly. He afforded a splendid example of indifference to danger throughout this reconnaissance, which was carried out under heavy rifle fire.

London Gazette, 28 Aug. 1918.—"Admiralty, 28 Aug. 1918. The following despatch has been received from Vice-Admiral Sir Roger J. B. Keyes, K.C.B., C.M.G., C.V.O., D.S.O., Commanding the Dover Patrol:

"Fleet House, Dover,
 24 July, 1918.

"Sir,—With reference to my Despatch No. 2305/003 of 15 June, 1918 (not published), I have the honour to bring to the notice of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty the names of the following Officers . . . who performed distinguished service in the second blocking operation against Ostend on the night of 9/10 May, 1918.

"2.—Aerial photographs taken prior to the operation clearly showed that the enemy had made special preparations in anticipation of a renewed attack.

"3.—The operation was carried out in mined waters in the face of a tremendous fire, and the greatest credit is due to those who so readily volunteered for hazardous service in the Vindictive and in motor launches detailed for rescue work, and to the crews of the numerous craft which covered and screened the approach of the Vindictive, led her to her objective, and rescued the survivors of her crew after she had been blown up between the piers of Ostend Harbour.

"The following Officers . . . performed specially distinguished service in action on the night of 9/10 May, 1918."

ALLEYNE, SIR JOHN M., Bart., D.S.C., Lieut., R.N. Volunteered from a monitor of the Dover Patrol for service in the Vindictive. He rendered valuable service in refitting navigational arrangements which were destroyed in Vindictive on 23 April, and on the actual night of the operation was invaluable on account of his local knowledge. He showed great coolness under a very heavy fire, and most skilfully navigated the Vindictive to the entrance to Ostend harbour. He was severely wounded and rendered unconscious when his captain was killed.

BURY, WILLIAM A., Engineer-Commander, R.N. This gallant officer greatly distinguished himself in Vindictive on 23 April, and as soon as he knew another operation was contemplated, volunteered, begging to be allowed to remain in charge of the engine-room department of that vessel. He worked most energetically to fit her out for further service, and on the night of 9/10 May he again rendered invaluable service, setting a fine example to his men. He remained in the engine-room until the last possible moment, and when everyone was clear he blew the bottom out of the ship by firing the main and auxiliary after charges. He was very severely wounded.

PARRY, REGINALD ST. P., Commander, R.N. Commander Parry commanded a destroyer, and handled his vessel with skill and decision, performing a most valuable service under difficult conditions.

WELMAN, ARTHUR E. P., D.S.O., D.S.C., Lieut., R.N. The part played by the coastal motor boats during the operation was all-important. Lieut. Welman organized and led them in a coastal motor-boat in a most spirited manner. He encountered an enemy torpedo boat near the entrance to Ostend, which switched on searchlights and opened fire. He at once closed with her, and engaged her with Lewis guns to such good effect that she withdrew and left the channel clear for the approach of the blockships.

HOARE, KEITH R., D.S.O., D.S.C., Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Commander), A.M., Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. Volunteered for rescue work at Ostend in command of M.L. 283. He was ordered to follow astern and assist two other motor launches which were detailed for rescue work. He remained at the Stroom Bank Buoy position until Vindictive had passed and then followed her, patrolling east and west within a quarter of a mile of the shore under heavy pom-pom and machine-gun fire, searching for survivors until 3.20 a.m., when all hope of finding anyone had passed.

WATSON, WILLIAM W., Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. Was in command of M.L. 105, and was of the greatest assistance to Capt. Benn in arranging and supervising the smoke screen. This involved going from end to end of the line and taking his vessel close inshore several times, when he came under heavy barrage fire. He showed great courage and coolness throughout the operation.

SAUNDERS, RAPHAEL, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. This officer volunteered for rescue work at Ostend in command of M.L. 128. In company with M.L. 283 he went in after Vindictive to look for survivors. When near the shore he came under heavy fire—his signalman was killed and Lieut. Brayfield and one of the crew wounded. This officer showed great coolness, setting a fine example to his men throughout, and was of the greatest assistance in organizing the smoke screen.

DAYRELL-REED, ARCHIBALD, D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve. Was in command of a coastal motor-boat, and carried out a successful attack on the pier ends, afterwards laying and maintaining good smoke screens close inshore throughout the remainder of the operation under a heavy fire.

MIÉVILLE, JEAN S., Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. Was in command of M.L. 280 and leader of a smoke-screen unit. He led his unit with skill and judgment in a very exposed position, and it was largely due to him that the screen was so extremely successful in his section.

WATTS, ARTHUR G., Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. This officer was in command of M.L. 239 and leader of a smoke-screen unit. He led his unit with skill and judgment in a very exposed position, and it was largely due to him that the screen was so extremely successful in his section.

"Admiralty, 28 Aug. 1918. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of honours to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of the distinguished services mentioned in the foregoing despatch. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

PARRY, REGINALD ST. PIERRE, Commander, R.N.

WATSON, WILLIAM WORDIE, Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

BURY, WILLIAM ARCHIBALD, Engineer-Commander, R.N.

MIÉVILLE, JEAN LOUIS, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

WATTS, ARTHUR GEORGE, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

SAUNDERS, RAPHAEL, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

ALLEYNE, SIR JOHN MEYNELL, Bart., D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Navy.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

HOARE, KEITH ROBIN, D.S.O., D.S.C., Lieut.-Commander, A.M., Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

WELMAN, ARTHUR ERIC POLE, D.S.O., D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Navy.

NEWTON, P. I., Capt., Royal Garrison Artillery.

PARKIN, J. F., Major, Indian Army.

OPERATIONS IN RUSSIA AND RUMANIA.

ROWLANDSON, M. G. D., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry, Indian Army.

London Gazette, 6 Sept. 1918.—"War Office, 5 Sept. 1918. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards for distinguished and gallant services rendered on the occasion of the destruction or damage by enemy action of hospital ships, transports and storeships. Dated 3 June, 1918. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

GIPPS, ALEXANDER GEORGE PEMBERTON, F.R.C.S., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Army Medical Corps.

HOLMES, THE REV. CECIL FREDERICK JOY, Temporary Chaplain to the Forces, Third Class, Army Chaplains' Department, Territorial Force.

PURVES, ROBERT BLACK, M.B., F.R.C.S., Major, Royal Army Medical Corps, Territorial Force.

London Gazette, 14 Sept. 1918.—"Admiralty, S.W., 14 Sept. 1918.—Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers for services in action with enemy submarines. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

NORTH, OLIVER, Lieut., R.N.

BARNISH, GEOFFREY HOWARD, Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

DO'OLY-HUGHES, GUY, D.S.O., D.S.C., Lieut., R.N.

"Honours for Services in Action with the Goeben and Breslau in Jan. 1918.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers in recognition of their services on the occasion of the sortie of the Goeben and Breslau from the Dardanelles on 20 Jan. 1918. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

NEWELL, JOSEPH BERNARD, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. (H.M.S. Tigress). For the great skill and gallantry displayed by him in handling his ship in the presence of a greatly superior enemy force and under heavy fire. He performed most efficiently his main duty of shadowing the enemy and reporting his movements. He proceeded into the mine-field to engage a superior force of enemy destroyers and drove them back to their base. He again entered the mine-field at great risk to his ship, and gallantly rescued 102 survivors of the Breslau whilst still being fired on from shore batteries.

OHELSCHLAGER, NORMAN ALBERT GUSTAVE, Lieut., R.N. (H.M.S. Lizard). He showed great skill and gallantry in handling his ship in the presence of a greatly superior enemy force and under very heavy fire. He performed most efficiently his main duty of shadowing the enemy and reporting his movements. He proceeded into the mine-field to engage a superior force of enemy destroyers and drove them back to their base. He again entered the mine-field at great risk to his ship, and gallantly rescued 162 survivors of the Breslau whilst still being fired on from shore batteries.

"Honours for Miscellaneous Services.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

ROSE, JOHN MARKHAM, Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Marine Artillery. For the manner in which he organized and commanded the Royal Marine Artillery unit in German South-West Africa during 1914.

London Gazette, 16 Sept. 1918.—"War Office, 16 Sept. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BIRT, CHARLES WILLIAM HOWARD, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During six days' hard fighting by his great personal courage and the fine example he set his men he repeatedly saved the situation at very critical times. During most of the time he was present in the front line, and being on the spot he was able to keep hold of his men and control the situation in his part of the line, so that any movement that became necessary was carried out in the best manner possible under the circumstances. On one occasion, in particular, when our flanks had been forced back, he covered their withdrawal and then skilfully extricated his battalion from an untenable position, and re-established it in a position in rear.

(1st Bar gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

GREEN, WILLIAM, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Highlanders, attached Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion during ten days' heavy fighting. His successful withdrawal of his battalion was a brilliant performance. During a counter-attack, and subsequently in defence, he rendered most valuable services, setting a fine example and showing a complete disregard of personal safety.

(1st Bar gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

HALLIDAY, WILLIAM JOHN FREDERICK, D.S.O., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He kept his battery in action till the enemy were within 800 yards, getting his guns away under rifle and machine-gun fire, and bringing them into action again in another position under very heavy fire from hostile field guns. He went forward and brought back valuable information, and subsequently covered the retirement of other troops. He commanded his battery with remarkable coolness and ability.

(1st Bar gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

KNOX, ROBERT SINCLAIR, D.S.O., Temporary Major, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He held a position against superior enemy forces until relieved, and made dispositions which held up the enemy for a considerable time. He handled his men under heavy machine-gun fire with coolness and skill, setting a fine example to all under him, and inspiring them with confidence.

(1st Bar gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

PEIRS, HUGH JOHN CHEVALLIER, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in defence of a village, when he fought until surrounded, and then made his way back under cover of a fog. It was entirely due to his great courage and fine leadership that the enemy offensive was delayed for nearly two days.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)
(1st Bar gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

RAIKES, GEOFFREY TAUNTON, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the remnants of two brigades, formed as one battalion. Though both flanks had gone he held on, encouraging his men, and repelling frequent enemy attacks. When the situation was critical he inspired his men by his brilliant example, and it was due to his absolute disregard of danger, capacity for command, and powers of organization that the line held to the last.

(1st Bar gazetted 4 Feb. 1918.)

ROBINSON, HUGH THOMAS KAY, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding a composite battalion. He handled his battalion in such a way as to prevent the enemy entering a gap in the line, and so turning the right flank of the division. Later, when in command of another battalion, he, by skilful leadership and courageous example, caused the enemy's advance to be checked at a critical moment with heavy loss.

(1st Bar gazetted 17 Dec. 1917.)

WOOD, EDWARD ALLAN, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When ordered to withdraw he handled his brigade with marked ability and successfully covered the withdrawal; he next day organized a counter-attack, which inflicted severe losses on the enemy. A fortnight later, when his men were being forced back by superior numbers of the enemy, he personally directed the collection and reorganization of his troops on the battlefield under very heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. He then formed his men up, and in conjunction with another division delivered a successful counter-attack, which he personally led. This counter-attack regained a portion of the ground lost in the morning, and he remained on the recaptured ground with the remnants of his brigade until relieved next morning. He did splendid work, and set a fine example to all under most difficult circumstances.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)
(1st Bar gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

ALLARDYCE, JOHN GRAHAME BUCHANAN, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an evening attack, and subsequent forced retirement this officer commanded his brigade with great ability under most difficult circumstances. Under continuous shell fire and gas he remained in a forward headquarter, covering the initial withdrawal of the infantry. It was largely owing to the way in which he handled his brigade on this and other occasions that the enemy advance was delayed and heavy losses inflicted.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

BALFOUR, GEORGE BOYD, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy entered his trenches he ejected them with heavy losses, and completely restored the line. This occurred after his battalion had suffered from a long and heavy bombardment. His courage and ability inspired his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

BARKER, AUGUSTINE, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. For four hours before attacking the enemy tried by gas and high explosive shell to destroy this officer's battery. One officer being killed and another wounded, he was during the worst two hours alone with the guns. He was himself wounded in the leg, but limped about encouraging the men. As stragglers came back he collected them and got them into action. When the enemy got within 500 yards it was decided to withdraw the guns, three being got away without loss, the fourth having all six horses hit. He got the three guns into action about 1,000 yards in the rear. He was then put on a horse and rode up to the front collecting information and rallying infantry. In the evening, having reorganized his battery and salvaged two guns of another battery, he again rode up to the front to encourage the men, being unable to get off his horse.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

BASTARD, REGINALD, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his battalion throughout a week's fighting with untiring energy and skill. On the first night he reoccupied a village after a sharp struggle with the enemy, and for the five following days his battalion beat off all attacks on the trench line and established a complete superiority over the enemy in "No Man's Land." On the last day, when his battalion was in brigade reserve, he delivered a counter-attack at very short notice and reached the first objective.

(D.S.O. gazetted 28 April, 1915.)

BATEMAN, CHARLES MALCOLM, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst commanding his battalion during a heavy enemy attack. His fine example of courage and his skilful handling of his men resulted in the total repulse of the attack.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

BENFIELD, KARL VERE BARKER, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, especially on three occasions: (1) He continued firing with his battery under machine-gun fire until the enemy came in view, when he personally supervised the withdrawal of his guns. (2) He kept his battery in action till the last moment while the infantry were retiring through his position. (3) When his battery came under heavy fire with direct observation he continued firing on the advancing enemy with open sights until his ammunition was expended, and then successfully withdrew his guns.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Nov. 1916.)

BLACKWOOD, WILLIAM, D.S.O., M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in charge of the evacuation of casualties from the Divisional front during an enemy attack. When communication with the advanced dressing-station was cut by enemy barrage he re-established communication and personally visited the posts under his administration. Throughout the fighting he visited the forward area daily, and his indefatigable energy and exceptional organizing ability were invaluable to the division.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

BRANSON, DOUGLAS STEPHENSON, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great skill and courage while commanding his battalion, and it was largely owing to his personal influence that his battalion did so well. When wounded he reorganized his battalion and other troops in a new position, personally reporting his dispositions at brigade headquarters.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

BRIGHTEN, GEORGE STANLEY, D.S.O., Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Liverpool Regt., attached Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He was commanding the battalion in reserve, and employed it with such advantage that the attack was held up and the enemy repulsed with heavy loss, many prisoners being taken. His clever disposal of his forces and his fine example of coolness did much to restore the position.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Nov. 1917.)

BUCKLEY, ALBERT, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion throughout a week's fighting. At the commencement of the fighting his battalion was holding the front line and was heavily attacked when its left flank was in the air. He continually visited the posts, and made personal reconnaissances, keeping his men in good heart. He organized and carried out two successful counter-attacks, and it was greatly due to his leadership that the line was maintained when the enemy broke through on the left.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

BUTLER, BERNARD ARNOLD BARRINGTON, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy appeared unexpectedly within a few hundred yards of the guns, this officer with his staff opened rifle fire on them. He afterwards turned one of the guns on to some enemy who had got round, driving them back. The following night he organized the withdrawal of guns which had been left in "No Man's Land," and got in all except two, which were in the enemy's hands. By his coolness and initiative he established a new front firing line.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

CLARE, OLIVER CECIL, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He promptly counter-attacked with his battalion and caused a position to be held. Throughout he showed fine leadership and coolness under heavy machine-gun and shell fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

CLARKE, BOWCHER CAMPBELL SENHOUSE, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great skill and energy throughout ten days' operations under very heavy shell fire. He personally went forward and reorganized the troops on his flank under very heavy fire. It was due to his continual supervision that a most difficult situation was kept in hand.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1917.)

COX, CHARLES HENRY FORTNOM, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his brigade throughout nearly a month's critical operations.

On all occasions he handled it with ability, especially during an enemy attack on an important village, when his headquarters received a direct hit, causing many casualties.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

CRAWFORD, EDWARD WILLIAM, D.S.O., Temporary Major, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a week's heavy fighting he did fine work. He twice led successful counter-attacks, and repeatedly rallied his men and took up defensive positions. His courage and energy set a fine example to all.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

DAVIDSON, THOMAS, D.S.O., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The Colonel of the brigade, having been captured, this officer took command, and after succeeding in withdrawing two battalions, he came into action with one gun of his own battery in defence of an important bridge over a canal. Although within 300 yards of the bridge, and in full view of the enemy, he held on for about an hour under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire until reinforcements arrived.

(D.S.O. gazetted 27 Oct. 1917.)

DEANE-DRUMMOND, JOHN DRUMMOND, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led machine gunners, armed with rifles, in a counter-attack, and coming on an enemy machine gun, he managed to put gun and team out of action with his rifle, being wounded in so doing. He showed fine courage and determination.

(D.S.O. gazetted 17 Sept. 1917.)

EVANS, LEWIS PUGH, V.C., D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in a three-days' battle. On the first day he was moving about everywhere in his forward area directing operations, the next day he personally conducted a reconnaissance for a counter-attack, which was carried out on the third day. It was largely due to his untiring energy and method that the enemy were checked and finally driven out of our forward system.

(D.S.O. gazetted 24 July, 1917.)

FISHER, HERBERT GEORGE, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his brigade. He conducted a retirement with masterly calm and determination, and on several occasions, by his prompt movement of batteries and by his reconnaissances and selection of positions, he inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. Throughout the entire operations he set a magnificent example of cheerful optimism combined with a dogged and determined courage.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

FORSTER, HAROLD THOMAS, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Berkshire Regt., attached Northamptonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He assumed command of his battalion when his colonel was killed, and by his coolness and skill extricated it from a critical situation and formed a defensive flank of the utmost importance. For three days and nights, by his pluck and energy, he set an example to his men of inestimable value under adverse conditions of continuous and heavy shell fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

FRIZELL, CHARLES WILLIAM, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Berkshire Regt., attached Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during recent operations, and especially when the battalion under his command took part in a very successful counter-attack. The success of the operations was chiefly due to the skilful dispositions and fine leadership of this officer. Throughout the operations he rendered very valuable services.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

GAYER, AUBREY VIVIAN ARTHUR, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his battalion during an enemy attack. Six times in one morning, owing to his fine example, the battalion repulsed enemy attacks with heavy loss. Next evening, when ordered to withdraw, he did so skilfully, with few casualties. He did fine work.

(D.S.O. gazetted 10 Nov. 1917.)

GREENE, JOHN, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Dragoon Guards, attached Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his battalion. During a withdrawal his arrangements and dispositions were so cleverly carried out that he was able to give most valuable assistance to another battalion, and enable it by covering fire to withdraw from a very critical position. Throughout a most trying period he set a fine example of cheerfulness and gallantry.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

HARTY, THOMAS ERNEST, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. For nearly a month this officer was in charge of the evacuations of the wounded on the front of a whole division. His initiative, courage and resource during much heavy fighting resulted in the successful clearing of all wounded in the forward area, which he frequently visited during heavy shelling to see that his orders were being executed properly, and also to inspire confidence. He never spared himself in his efforts to arrange for the wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

HEELAS, PERCIVAL JOHN BERESFORD, D.S.O. Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his brigade through over three weeks' heavy fighting, showing great skill in withdrawing when positions became untenable, with only those losses which were caused by hostile shell fire, and keeping his control so firm that fresh positions were easily organized and heavy losses inflicted. He always held on until the last moment, going round his command under heavy fire and inspiring those under him by his example.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

HESSEY, WILLIAM FRANCIS, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Reserve of Officers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. For 24 hours he remained in the firing line, rallying and organizing men and checking the enemy, and then conducted a withdrawal with great skill. He personally led a counter-attack, and temporarily regained 1,000 yards of ground. Two days later, after maintaining his position for 36 hours, he withdrew without leaving a wounded man behind. He set a fine example of energy and good leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

HIGGINSON, HAROLD WHITLA, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his brigade. In 14 days' fighting the losses of the brigade exceeded 70 per cent., but owing to his able leadership and the fine example set by him their fighting spirit was in no way impaired. The courageous stands made by them were of great assistance to other brigades.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1918.)

HILL, MURRAY VICTOR BURROW, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers, attached Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during enemy attacks. He organized and personally led a counter-attack against a body of the enemy who were threatening to envelop the right flank of the brigade, and forced them to withdraw. He set a high example of cheerfulness, determination and good leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Aug. 1917.)

HOPKINSON, JOHN OLIVER, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion when ordered to fill a gap which was known to exist in the front line. He carried out his orders with great ability, and in spite of continuous and severe shelling maintained his positions until relieved. By his leadership and courage throughout the operations he inspired the utmost confidence in all ranks.

(D.S.O. gazetted 22 Sept. 1916.)

HOWLETT, REGINALD, D.S.O., MC., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout a week's fighting. On the first night he led his battalion, which was very short of officers, to a position on the enemy side of a village, driving back enemy posts on the way and successfully establishing his line. The next day, by quickly moving up a reserve company to a threatened flank, he maintained his position. It was not until the end of the week that he was forced to give way, when practically surrounded and severely wounded himself.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

IRONS, ARTHUR INNES, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under very heavy rifle and machine-gun fire he collected and rallied men and reinforced the line. By his personal example of coolness he encouraged his men to hold their positions and inflict heavy casualties on the enemy.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

KEMP-WELCH, MARTIN, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With his battalion he repulsed four enemy attacks on a village. The battalion suffered heavy casualties, but, thanks to his skilful dispositions, courage, and untiring energy, they successfully held the position.

(D.S.O. gazetted 20 Oct. 1916.)

KEWLEY, EDWARD RIGBY, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty and fine leadership in repelling the initial hostile attacks, and subsequently during the withdrawal. His battalion fought to the last moment prior to each withdrawal, and it was entirely due to his magnificent personal example and great courage that these engagements were successful.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

KING, CHARLES FRANCIS, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion. He organized the defence of a village, held it against heavy attacks, and over and over again led forward his small reserve to drive out bodies of the enemy who had obtained a temporary foothold. Throughout the subsequent withdrawal he was the life and soul of the defence, and his example and complete disregard of danger instilled the greatest confidence in his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

LATHAM, FRANCIS, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer set a fine example of coolness and fearlessness to all ranks under his command, and encouraged and steadied his men under heavy fire. The splendid defence made by his battalion was to a great extent inspired by his fine example of personal courage.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

LAWSON, ARTHUR BERTRAM, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Hussars, attached Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battalion attacked a village and captured 120 prisoners and nine machine guns. The position was consolidated in spite of a heavy bombardment, and the next morning the enemy launched a determined counter-attack, which was completely repulsed and another 80 prisoners taken. He superintended the whole of the operation, fearlessly exposing himself to all kinds of fire, and its success was largely due to his courage and ability.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

LOYD, LEMUEL, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion with great skill and initiative, and his was the leading battalion in a most successful counter-attack. This success, which was largely due to his fine leadership and fighting qualities, drove the enemy back 2,000 yards and restored a critical situation.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 March, 1918.)

LOVE, STUART GILKISON, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding remnants of three field companies during a withdrawal. He displayed tactical ability of a high order, and considerably delayed the enemy's advance. Throughout the operations he showed extraordinary energy, great skill in placing his men, and utter disregard of personal safety.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

MACOLELLAN, GORDON PONSONBY, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Garrison Artillery, attached Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy advance. He maintained his batteries until the enemy were within 300 yards, and then withdrew them singly without loss of guns. He gave close support to the infantry and assisted them in holding the line. His tactical skill and personal courage under heavy fire were of a high order.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

MANNOCK, EDWARD, D.S.O., Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Engineers and Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In company with one other scout this officer attacked eight enemy aeroplanes, shooting down one in flames. The next day, when leading his flight, he engaged eight enemy aeroplanes, destroying three himself. The same week he led his patrol against six enemy aeroplanes, shooting down the rear machine, which broke in pieces in the air. The following day he shot down an Albatross two-seater in flames, but later, meeting five scouts, had great difficulty in getting back, his machine being much shot about, but he destroyed one. Two days later, he shot down another two-seater in flames. Eight machines in five days—a fine feat of marksmanship and determination to get to close quarters. As a patrol leader he is unequalled.

MARTIN, CUTHBERT THOMAS, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his brigade with great energy and ability through four days' fighting against vastly superior numbers of the enemy on a very extended front. Largely by his personal example the fighting value of the brigade was maintained when they had had very heavy casualties and were very tired.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

MCCARTHY-O'LEARY, HEFFERNAN WILLIAM DENIS, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was wounded, but refused to be evacuated, and during the severe fighting which ensued he remained in action in command of his battalion until again severely wounded. He displayed marked ability in encouraging and handling his troops, and showed great cheerfulness and total disregard for his own personal safety.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

MCCULLOUGH, ANDREW JAMESON, D.S.O., D.C.M., Capt. and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Dragoon Guards, attached Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a most critical time he handled his battalion with great skill and gallantry, and blocked the enemy's advance. While making a valuable reconnaissance he was gassed and wounded, but continued his command of the battalion for another two days until the situation was righted. He showed fine leadership and determination.

(D.S.O. gazetted 28 July, 1918.)

MENZIES, ALEXANDER HENRY, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding a battalion. Throughout six days' fighting he set a marked example of coolness and courage, and by so doing greatly stimulated all ranks under his command in their determination to hold out in spite of the fact that other troops were falling back.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

METCALFE, HERBERT CHARLES, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northamptonshire Regt., attached Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, whereby the ground was stoutly held against enemy attacks. Under very heavy machine-gun fire he set a splendid example to his men and inspired all with confidence till eventually severely wounded.

NADEN, FRANK, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Cheshire Regt., attached Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. For three days he successfully kept the enemy out of a village, twice organizing counter-attacks after losing ground under constant and intense bombardments. It was largely owing to his personal gallantry and coolness that the village remained in our hands at the end of the enemy attacks.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Nov. 1917.)

NOSWORTHY, FRANCIS POITIER, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He constantly visited every part of the fighting line, and was of great assistance to regimental officers, brigade commanders, and Divisional headquarters. He organized the defence of a new line, on which the division fell back. He set a high example of energy and courage.

(D.S.O. gazetted 8 March, 1918.)

ODDIE, WILLIAM, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his battalion. When the enemy had got between his front line and battalion headquarters he fought his way back to the support and reserve lines with his headquarters, and covered by his fire the headquarters of another battalion by refusing his flank. He held on to his reserve line long after his right flank had been turned. Next day he kept a large body of the enemy back, inflicting heavy casualties on them with only his headquarters and a few other men he had collected. He did fine service.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

PEEL, EDWARD JOHN RUSSELL, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in command of the brigade during ten days' operations. Although the enemy were close up to him in a village he kept his batteries in action under a ridge, handling them with consummate skill. It was owing to his personal influence with the brigade that the guns were saved, being withdrawn from under the nose of the enemy one by one as opportunity occurred by night. Throughout the operations he kept the men together and cheerful, and they fought splendidly.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1915.)

PEEL, WILLIAM RALPH, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Regt., attached Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout two days' very hard fighting he displayed great courage and marked ability in dealing with situations of considerable difficulty, going out under extremely heavy fire of all descriptions to select sites for machine guns and to assist advanced posts of the companies of his battalion. On receiving orders to withdraw he directed the operation with great ability, remaining himself in the front line until the last of the troops had retired and all the wounded were evacuated. Throughout the operations his cheerful disregard of all considerations of personal safety was an example to his men, which inspired them with confidence and resolution.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

PILKINGTON, WILLIAM NORMAN, D.S.O., Major, South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in command of two companies, and showed such marked ability and grasp of the situation that he was put in command of the whole of the defence system manned by three companies. He was most energetic in visiting the line and organizing the defence of posts by day and night under heavy fire. He arranged and led a counter-attack which resulted in the capture of 21 prisoners and two machine guns. The positions he held included a defensive flank, and were of great tactical importance.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

PORTER, JAMES HERBERT, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), North Staffordshire Regt., Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy had succeeded in reaching his front line, which was on high ground, this officer at once personally led forward his two support companies to counter-attack through heavy shell and machine-gun fire. The attack was perfectly successful, and the posts were then pushed forward again.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

POTTER, COLIN KYNASTON, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), North Lancashire Regt., attached Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion during a week's fighting. At the commencement of the fighting his battalion was in the front line, where it maintained its positions, being stimulated by his frequent visits under heavy fire. He organized and carried out a successful counter-attack, followed shortly after by another one, in which several hundred prisoners were captured.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

PRIOR, JOHN HARVEY, D.S.O., Major, Royal Engineers, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action, when he volunteered to attack himself and his company to a battalion which was threatened by an outflanking movement. By his personal courage and excellent handling of his company he was successful in holding the enemy and in assisting the battalion to withdraw at a very critical moment.

(D.S.O. gazetted 27 Sept. 1901.)

RANSOME, ALGERNON LEE, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Dorsetshire Regt., attached East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during recent operations. He displayed great skill and courage in defending positions, and handled his battalion with great ability under most difficult circumstances. His sound judgment, combined with his cheerful confidence and personal gallantry, inspired all ranks in the brigade.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

RICHARDSON, GEORGE CARR, D.S.O., M.C., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a fortnight's operations he was constantly in the forward area, and throughout one night he went from battery to battery, bringing them to positions where they could cover a gap that had been made in the line. His work has been of an exceptionally high standard.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

RICKMAN, ARTHUR WILMOT, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers, attached East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion, covering the retirement of the brigade to a new position after both flanks had been turned. He displayed great courage and judgment. The following day he held an extended front against three determined attacks, and when the troops on his right flank were driven in he rallied them under close fire, and formed a defensive flank with them.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

ROBINSON, FRANCIS, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, attached Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of a battalion in a successful counter-attack at a critical moment, and on another occasion, after the line on his left had been broken, he countered with such energy and determination that he drove the enemy back 1,500 yards, capturing two machine guns and 50 prisoners. He was wounded during this attack.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

RUSSELL, ALBERT, D.S.O., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. Under a series of heavy bombardments lasting over several days he handled the men under his command with great ability and successfully repulsed all attacks. He set a fine example of courage and leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

SADLER-JACKSON, LIONEL WARREN DE VERE, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Lancs. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout recent operations he proved himself a bold leader of men, and under all conditions full of energy and fine fighting spirit. He personally organized and led most successful counter-attacks, in one of which he recaptured a village and took 150 prisoners and eleven machine guns. He did splendid work under very difficult conditions.

(D.S.O. gazetted 27 Sept. 1901.)

ST. JOHN, EDMUND FARQUHAR, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During 14 days the brigade under his command fought with great effect. None of their guns had to be abandoned, nor were any captured. It is not too much to say that his example of courage and his skill were in a very great measure responsible for this fine result. Under heavy enemy shell-fire he kept all his batteries in action, affording all the support possible to the infantry.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

SANDFORD, DANIEL ARTHUR, D.S.O., Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the enemy offensive, especially on the first day, when he succeeded in bringing successfully out of action his three widely-separated sections, and later in the afternoon, under shell and machine-gun fire, he kept his battery at work until 7.30 p.m., when the enemy were within 1,000 yards of his position. On the following day, after sending his battery back, he went forward into a village and stayed there till noon, bringing back valuable information.

(D.S.O. gazetted 2 Feb. 1916.)

SPENS, HUGH BAIRD, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy had penetrated the line, this officer, at short notice, was ordered to counter-attack and retake the position. This involved an advance of nearly four miles in artillery formation over very difficult ground, in full view of the enemy, with a change of direction in the final stages of the attack. Although there was little time for reconnaissance, and the final advance was under heavy barrage, the counter-attack was quite successful, the enemy declining to await the troops advancing with the bayonet. The success was largely due to his leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

SPILLER, DUNCAN WILFRED LAMBERT, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding a group throughout operations extending over a fortnight. He was always in front carrying out personal reconnaissances, visiting the infantry, and helping his batteries. His contempt of all personal danger, combined with his capable handling of his guns, was an invaluable example to all near him.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1917.)

STOCKLEY, ERNEST NORMAN, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the situation was critical, owing to a gap between two divisions, this officer led the three companies under his command, who were at work on a rear line, up to the threatened point, taking up a defensive position in touch with the troops on right and left. This position was held under heavy shell and machine-gun fire, and against repeated attacks, until he finally withdrew according to instructions, bringing his men out in good order.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

TUCK, GERALD LOUIS JOHNSON, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Suffolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion during an enemy attack, and his reports from personal observation were invaluable. When the situation was critical he restored it. By his personal example of coolness and energy he retained positions against largely superior enemy forces.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

TWEEDIE, JOHN LANNOY FORBES, D.S.O., Major, (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battalion was heavily attacked in front and flank, the enemy penetrating the line in several places and also working round the flank. By the effective counter-measures which this officer took, he restored the situation completely. His cheerfulness and confidence throughout an anxious day were largely responsible for the fine defence put up by his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

VIGNOLES, WALTER ADOLPH, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, North-umbrian Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a heavy enemy attack. He organized and led a successful counter-attack at a point threatened by the enemy. Thanks to his promptitude and his gallantry under heavy bombardment, a serious situation was rectified and the line re-established.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

WARDEN, HERBERT LAWTON, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout several days' fighting this officer, in command of a battalion, by his personal example several times restored the situation. One morning early, when the enemy had broken through a village, he was ordered to attack. As it did not get on fast enough, he went forward himself and cleared the village. For three days the enemy made continuous efforts to get by another village, but largely owing to his leadership and example they were all frustrated.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 Feb. 1918.)

WENYON, HERBERT JOHN, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He organized defences against heavy enemy attacks and held vastly superior numbers of the enemy at bay, inflicting heavy losses on them. He set a very fine example of courage and good leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Oct. 1917.)

WHITTALL, PERCIVAL FREDERICK, D.S.O., Temporary Major, Royal Engineers (Capt., Reserve of Officers). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a retirement through a village, he showed great resource in occupying the houses and walls on the front edge, delaying the enemy's advance considerably. He eventually retired fighting at close quarters, under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, his company being the last to withdraw. He showed great coolness and complete unconcern for his personal safety, moving about the village and disposing his men to the best advantage, though the enemy's fire was severe. On another occasion, at the crossing of a river, he was of most valuable assistance to our troops, owing to the manner in which he was able to retard the enemy's advance by his dispositions.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

WILSON, PERCY NORTON WHITESTONE, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. Seeing men wavering on the right flank, he ran 400 yards through heavy machine-gun fire, rallied the men, and re-established the line. This act of gallantry was of great value at a critical moment.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

WYNNE, RICHARD OWEN, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Bedford Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He personally led an attack against some enemy machine guns and succeeded in driving them off, himself killing the officer leading the enemy. At all times he commanded his men with great skill and courage and showed complete disregard of his own safety.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

CARTER, ALBERT DESBRISAY, D.S.O., Major, New Brunswick Regt. and Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as a fighting pilot. In three and a half months he destroyed 13 enemy machines. He showed the utmost determination, keenness and dash, and his various successful encounters, often against odds, make up a splendid record.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

ROSS, ALEXANDER, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion, when he carried out a most successful operation, resulting in the capture of a number of prisoners, five machine guns, and a trench mortar, and inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. He planned every detail and supervised the withdrawal, which was carried out with difficulty and under a heavy barrage. His personal courage and able leadership were largely responsible for the success of the undertaking.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

CHRISTIE, ROBERT, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion in a difficult night operation. The battalion, having already marched six miles, was ordered to counter-attack and recover a village. The ground was strange to everyone, and there was no time for reconnaissance, but the approach march and deployment were carried out without a hitch, and the attack was a brilliant success. He moved about amongst the troops encouraging them, and finally established his headquarters in an open trench under heavy shell fire, from which he could see and control his battalion to the best advantage.

(D.S.O. gazetted 17 Dec. 1917.)

LAYH, HERBERT THOMAS CHRISTOLPH, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion in a counter-attack. At the last moment the orders on which he had based his plans were altered, and he had to make entirely fresh arrangements, which he explained so clearly to his officers that the movement was successful. When he found that the task allotted to other units was not proceeding satisfactorily he detached a portion of his battalion to assist, which proved the turning point, and resulted in the capture of several hundreds of the enemy, 120 machine guns, six trench mortars, and four minenwerfers. Whilst consolidating the position, he pushed out patrols in the most energetic manner, getting into touch with other units.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917) (Christian name Christolph corrected to Christoph [London Gazette, 15 Oct. 1918].)

MARSHALL, NORMAN, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion in a night counter-attack on a village, which was completely successful. At an early stage in the advance in the dark the column lost direction, owing partly to the ground being soaked by enemy gas, necessitating a detour, and to sunken roads and corpses, but owing to his personal exertions he got on the move again in the right direction. As soon as the battalion had reached the final objective he supervised its consolidation, and then organized an attack on some strong posts on the left of his line, capturing seven machine guns.

(D.S.O. gazetted 19 Nov. 1917.)

MURPHY, GEORGE FRANCIS, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He received information that the objective had been gained, but that all but one of the officers in his left company were casualties, and that the position on the left of the brigade sector was doubtful. He went forward in company with one N.C.O., and, noticing that an enemy machine-gun post with seven men had been left undestroyed, he and the N.C.O. rushed this post across 100 yards of open country and captured it entirely. He then went along the whole of the new front and assisted in the consolidation. His fine courage and cheerfulness under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire were a great example to all ranks.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

SALISBURY, ALFRED GEORGE, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion in a difficult night operation with great ability. The battalion, having already marched six miles, was ordered to counter-attack and retake a village. The ground was strange to everyone, and there was no time for reconnaissance, but the approach march and deployment were carried out without a hitch, and the attack was a brilliant success. This officer moved about amongst the men, encouraging and directing them, and finally established his headquarters in an open trench well forward, which was heavily shelled, but from which he was able to see and control his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

SCANLAN, JOHN JOSEPH, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded a battalion in a counter-attack on a village. The battalion formed the right of the attack on the first and second objectives, and the village, being strongly held, it was necessary to mask the advance of the troops between the two objectives by facing part of them to the right. They had thus to advance into a pocket in which they were enclosed on three sides by the enemy. When the troops were checked by heavy machine gun fire, he urged them forward in an irresistible rush, gaining the second objective with few casualties, but inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. The masking movement was ably carried out, and enabled another unit to pass through to the third objective.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order :

ALDWORTH, WILLIAM, Capt. (Acting Major), Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in clearing a village of a strong force of the enemy. He himself led an attack on a group of houses strongly held by the enemy, who were supported by machine-gun fire. He had only 17 men, and the operation was successful, resulting in the capture of 60 of the enemy and three machine guns. It was entirely due to his great skill and gallantry and splendid courage that the village was cleared.

ALLSOPP, JEROME BOILEAU, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), South Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By skilful organization and cool handling of his battalion he restored the situation on more than one occasion when the troops on his flanks had been driven in. On one occasion the gallant stand made by his battalion, for which his courage and example were largely responsible, materially helped to save the situation by giving time for the reorganization of the line.

ANDERSON, CHARLES, M.C., Temporary Major, Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He, on his own initiative, constructed a pontoon bridge across a river, enabling guns to be saved from falling into the enemy's hands. He showed an utter disregard of danger at all times, and set a fine example to all.

AUBIN, JEHU FOSBROOKE GERRARD, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The battalion was holding a village, covering the retirement of another unit, when it was attacked by the enemy, and withdrew, leaving one company as rearguard under this officer. He remained with his rear platoon under machine-gun fire and sniping, and beat off the attack while the rest withdrew. Later, three companies were ambushed in the marshes, and he collected almost all the men, organizing a rearguard, so that each company in turn could cross by a bridge, he himself being the last to cross. A few days later his company was in support, when the three forward companies began to fall back. He went up under intense fire, rallied them, and re-established the front line. His grasp of the situation saved the battalion from what might have been annihilation.

BAINES, JOHN CECIL, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Leicestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded the battalion during a week's fighting with great skill in difficult circumstances, having only joined it the day before. He was constantly in touch with them all, and kept the brigade well informed of the situation, besides filling up gaps with his reserve companies. On one occasion when the line was bent back he counter-attacked at once, restoring the situation. Owing to his close liaison with other units the relief of the brigade was much facilitated.

BARE, ALFRED RAYMOND, M.C., Capt., North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under cover of a heavy barrage the enemy attacked, very quickly surrounding a strong point, where this officer had his company headquarters and one platoon. In face of superior numbers, he put up a stout resistance until forced to retire on to another strong point, where the position was very critical, the officer in charge having been killed. He took command, and after a stiff fight, drove back the enemy. He was twice wounded during the fight.

BELL, JOHN JOSEPH JAMES, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during about a week's operations, especially on one occasion when he kept his battery in action until the enemy was within 600 yards, and then skilfully extricated the whole battery. Throughout the fighting this officer has set a splendid example to all, and has time after time withdrawn his guns under rifle and machine-gun fire.

BICKMORE, DAVID FRANCIS, Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Norfolk Regt., attached Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion during an enemy attack. When portions of the line showed signs of wavering, he rallied the men, and in spite of an intense fire, restored the situation. Later, during a critical period, before his battalion was required to attack, he went forward and made a reconnaissance, returning under heavy shell fire, with a valuable report and a clear plan of action. He showed great courage and leadership throughout the operations.

BLIGH, THE HONOURABLE NOEL GERVASE, Capt. (Temporary Major and Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in command of his battalion when it was heavily attacked. He went along the front line under intense artillery barrage, encouraging his men by his fine example. When the troops on his right were forced back, he led up a support company in full view of the enemy and formed a defensive flank. When forced to retire he kept his battalion well in hand, and contested every inch of the way.

BOSTOCK, LANCELOT, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Northamptonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during enemy attacks. He commanded his company with great skill and ability under very heavy and machine-gun fire, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy and temporarily checking his advance. His brilliant leadership and fine courage were an example to all.

BOYLAN, EDWARD THOMAS ARTHUR G., M.C., Capt., Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When directing the fire of his battery from a railway truck he was seen by the enemy and heavily shelled for over an hour. Though he was knocked off the truck, and the truck itself was hit several times, he continued to direct the fire, and by his fearlessness took a heavy toll of the enemy. Later, a haystack from which he was directing the fire was hit repeatedly and he was knocked off it and badly shaken, but he continued to fire into the enemy until the infantry retired past the guns. His gallantry and coolness were beyond all praise.

BOYS, STANLEY, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a week of fighting, especially when in command of the left flank company, which was attacked by dense masses of the enemy. This officer organized his company and various units of other brigades and formed a defensive flank, working unceasingly along his company front and driving off an enemy attack in eight waves with loss. At night he withdrew across difficult country, and took up another defensive position. The following day he was enveloped, but by maintaining control of his men, and collecting stragglers of other units, he extricated them, being the last to withdraw. It was due to his energy and zeal that the retirement was successfully conducted.

BRATTON, ALLEN BASIL, M.C., Capt., North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the two companies in the front line had suffered heavy casualties from enemy bombardment and attack this officer in command of the support company organized and led counter-attacks. Although outnumbered by the enemy in both men and machine guns he succeeded in driving them back 500 yards and reoccupying the main line of resistance. He then with one man bombed down a trench for 300 yards, and joined up with the next company. His splendid example enabled very good work to be done by very few men.

BREBETON, DAVID LLOYD, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his battalion. He personally assisted in a bombing attack and established a block, driving the enemy back and capturing four machine guns. Throughout the operations he set a fine example to his battalion.

BRODIE, PATRICK TAIT, M.C., Temporary Capt., King's African Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was told to take a hill with a platoon. When he got within 50 yards of the top he was fired on by a Maxim and some 30 rifles. Only two of his men stood fast, and with them he bombed the enemy off the hill. By his dash and gallantry in taking this hill he deprived the enemy of a most advantageous point from which to deliver destructive fire on his men. He did very fine work.

BROWN, GEORGE LANGFORD, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of his battalion. He held up the enemy's advance all night, and next morning only withdrew with the last company when surrounded. He showed splendid grit and determination against heavy odds.

BROWN, WILLIAM ERNEST, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his battalion. He held a position successfully with very few men. His fine example of courage and cheerfulness under heavy fire was mainly responsible for the retention of the ground.

BROWNE, LORD ALFRED EDEN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During successive withdrawals under orders, this officer displayed great skill in artillery rearguard actions, remaining in action until the last moment, running it very fine on three occasions, and then withdrawing by batteries or sections at a time. He was always cool, and showed great power in keeping in touch with both the infantry and the C.R.A. of the division.

BRUCE, GEORGE JAMES, M.C., Temporary Capt., General List. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He rallied a company and rode in front as it once more advanced and took a village. Next day he galloped to two companies under heavy fire, and directed them. When the brigade withdrew he was the last to leave, and covered the withdrawal with Lewis gun sections under his personal supervision. Throughout he displayed high qualities as a Staff Captain, with total disregard for personal safety.

CARPENTER, PETER, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has destroyed nine enemy machines, and driven three down out of control. He has led 46 offensive patrols. On one occasion 12 enemy aircraft were attacked, and on another he led two other machines against 19 of the enemy, destroying six of them. He has at all times shown a magnificent example.

CHADWICK, FRANK, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), King's Royal Rifle Corps, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was placed in command of the battalion on the death of the Commanding Officer. He led it with great skill throughout the operations, especially in a counter-attack on a village, into which he penetrated, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy and capturing a number of prisoners. Taken in rear by enemy machine guns, he was wounded in the act of withdrawing his battalion.

CHAPMAN, GORDON PATRICK, Second Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in charge of a forward gun, and under heavy shelling of high explosive and gas, continued to defend his front with gun fire until all his ammunition was exhausted. He then man-handled his gun back to the battery position and sent his detachment for a team to withdraw it, meanwhile holding off the enemy by himself with a machine gun. He showed great courage and resource.

CRUMP, JOHN ARTHUR, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Where the enemy penetrated our line and his headquarters were under continuous shell fire, and at one time attacked with bombs, this officer directed the fight with great coolness, which resulted in the enemy being driven off with loss, many prisoners being taken, and the line in his battalion sector completely restored. He set a fine example to all ranks.

DANBY, SILAS, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Riding Regt., attached Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in beating off continuous enemy attacks. He displayed fine courage and skill in commanding his battalion and inflicted severe casualties on the enemy.

DEBENHAM, GERALD ANTHONY, M.C., Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Norfolk Regt. and King's African Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of a patrol. With great ability and dash he personally led the charge against an enemy company capturing their two machine guns, ammunition, and baggage, and completely dispersing them.

DENNY, ERNEST WRIOTHESLEY, Major, Hussars (Reserve of Officers). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a week's fighting this officer was acting as brigade major to the brigade. When it was difficult to obtain definite information, he visited every company in the front line held by the brigade, in spite of shell and machine-gun fire, sending in a comprehensive report as to the situation. His personality did much to encourage the young soldiers during a trying time for officers and men who had only just been sent to the division, and the majority of whom had not been under fire before.

DE QUETTEVILLE, ROBERT GEORGE, M.C., Temporary Capt., Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In advancing to recapture part of a trench from which the enemy had driven some of our troops, he had to lead his men over some 700 yards of open ground swept by artillery and machine-gun and rifle fire. His skilful dispositions enabled the object to be obtained with fewer casualties than might have occurred. During the night the troops on his flanks, having been withdrawn, he found himself almost surrounded by the enemy, as orders for his own retirement had not reached him. However, with great resource and most energetic leadership he withdrew from the trench he had captured and extricated his company from a difficult position and led them eventually back to the battalion, taking three of the enemy prisoners on the way. Throughout the operations his initiative and skill were not less conspicuous than his great courage, and his good leadership saved many casualties.

DESPARD, CHARLES BEAULIERK, M.C., Temporary Capt., Dragoons. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During five days of retirement, while as second in command of the battalion, he throughout displayed very high qualities as a leader. While in command of the rearguard the gallantry and determination with which he disputed the ground was largely responsible for the safe withdrawal of the rest of the main body.

DUFF, HUGH JOHN, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Yeomanry, attached Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He commanded his company with marked ability, and at a critical time sent back valuable information to battalion headquarters. He showed courage and cheerfulness under heavy fire.

ELLIOTT, ARTHUR, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut., Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He ran over under heavy machine-gun fire and rallied men on the right flank who were being driven in, inflicting very heavy losses on the enemy by firing a Lewis gun himself. He covered the withdrawal of his party with nine or ten men, later ordering the main body of his men back and with one man covering their withdrawal. The right flank being again driven in he nevertheless held on to his line for three more hours, practically surrounded and under heavy enfilade fire. He then made a dash with his men for our lines, attached himself to another unit and continued to fight for the rest of the day. His action is worthy of the highest praise.

ELLIS, LYLE FULLAM, Second Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in charge of a sector during an enemy attack. He kept his guns firing to the last possible moment, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy, and scattering one of their batteries altogether. He showed great coolness and determination under heavy fire.

EMINSON, RALPH FRANKLIN, Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When two companies who had made a counter-attack and reached a village, were obliged to fall back 150 yards, suffering heavy casualties, whom it was impossible to rescue owing to the accurate machine-gun and rifle fire from the village, this officer went himself, regardless of fire, and in full view of the enemy, across "No Man's Land" many times, and carried and assisted back the wounded, who would otherwise have been left.

ENTWISLE, FRANK, M.C., Capt., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Having led his company through an intense machine-gun barrage, he established himself on a hill, which became practically isolated owing to all approaches being commanded by the enemy. For three days and two nights he fearlessly exposed himself, organizing the position, which was of vital importance, and encouraging his men, who were continuously under heavy shell and machine-gun fire. After three most determined counter-attacks had been driven off, he was the only unwounded officer of the two half battalions. Assuming command, he rallied the men and beat off a fourth attack. Then clinging to the lower slopes of the hill until dusk, he withdrew with all the wounded and every Lewis gun, having first destroyed any material which had to be abandoned.

ETCHELLS, THOMAS, M.C., Major, Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took over the battalion after the Officer Commanding had been badly wounded, and greatly added to its efficiency by his energy and leadership. He organized a series of patrols under difficult circumstances, and gained valuable information of enemy movement.

FAILES, GERALD WATSON, M.C., Temporary Capt., Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed good initiative in promptly moving all his Lewis guns to meet the direction of an enemy attack, breaking their attack up. He also led a bombing squad successfully, rallied and reorganized stragglers, and by his fine example greatly conduced to the splendid resistance made by his men.

FEARY, STEPHEN, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With two sections he attacked and captured a farm strongly held by the enemy, killing thirty and capturing eighteen, as well as three machine guns. An enemy officer broke his arm with a revolver bullet; he shot the officer and then established his position. He displayed fine courage and determination.

FIELD, EDWARD, Temporary Second Lieut., Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a section of guns during repeated enemy attacks. For eight hours he fired his guns with great judgment under heavy machine-gun and artillery fire. The enemy poured out of a valley in large numbers, and the guns fired with terrific effect. The enemy was held for seven hours. Then, reinforced, they advanced to within 100 yards of the guns and bombed the positions from the right rear. He ordered his guns to cut their way to new positions while he helped their retirement by throwing the remainder of the bombs. In getting back he was shot through the body. His determination and fearlessness were magnetic. Throughout the day he fought magnificently.

FRASER, HERBERT CECIL, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his men when heavily attacked by the enemy. By his skill in handling his battalion he greatly helped in the holding of a village and in repulsing subsequent enemy attacks.

FULTON, GEORGE KOBERWEIN, Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in handling his battalion in a most skilful manner. He set a splendid example of courage and disregard of danger, and was indefatigable in arranging the battalion dispositions, and personally supervising its movements. At all times when the situation was critical he was up in the front line encouraging the men and taking part in the fighting.

FYSH, CHARLES EDWARD, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion in action. He displayed great capabilities for organization, rallying men of other units and leading them forward through heavy fire to posts, from which they were able to inflict severe loss on the enemy. He made repeated reconnaissances to the front and flanks, regardless of his own safety, and on one occasion it was mainly due to his good work that the enemy failed to effect a crossing over a canal.

GARTHWAITE, ALEN, M.C., Temporary Capt., Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Though twice wounded, he refused to leave. He assumed command of his battalion, and remained with it until it was withdrawn. He showed a magnificent spirit, and his work in reorganizing scattered units was of the greatest value. His great gallantry and complete disregard for his own personal safety were a fine example to his men.

GILES, ARTHUR HARRY ASHFIELD, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding a company. He showed great coolness under heavy fire, led a successful counter-attack, and held his position against heavy odds. Later, when he took over command of his battalion, he showed ability and great determination, setting a fine example to all.

GODBY, CHARLES, C.B., C.M.G., Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. A large ammunition dump was blown up by hostile shell fire, and considerable casualties occurred. He at once went to the dump and personally organized parties to remove the wounded. With the assistance of another officer he succeeded in extricating two officers who were buried under fallen debris, although the adjacent stock of ammunition was on fire and explosions taking place. During the whole time he was at the dump ammunition was still exploding. His courage and determination in the face of considerable danger resulted in the saving of several lives.

GREEN, WILLIAM WYNDHAM, M.C., Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under cover of a heavy morning mist, the enemy came up unperceived close to the battery of which this officer was in command. He armed the Lewis gunners of the battery with rifles, and by skilful dispositions held off the enemy until the guns had been blown up and the detachments withdrawn. On another occasion he helped to cover the removal of a heavy howitzer battery, delaying the advance of the enemy with the fire of his Lewis guns and rifles and inflicting heavy casualties. He fought all day on foot, until the line had been established. His behaviour throughout was marked by great coolness under difficult circumstances and unconcerned courage.

GRICE-HUTCHINSON, CLAUDE BROUGHTON, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battery with great skill, handling it so as to obtain the maximum fire effect on the enemy, then, when absolutely necessary, withdrawing to another well-selected position. His reports and messages were of great use both to the infantry and his brigade. All this work was carried out under fire of every description.

HALL, CECIL CHARLES HATFIELD, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a call was made by a neighbouring unit for reinforcement, he got together some 20 men, with a Lewis gun and machine gun, and led them forward over an embankment and across a road which was being badly sniped and machine-gunned. He subsequently brought forward more men, and conveyed an important message from Brigade Headquarters. His cool and brilliant example at a very critical time inspired all with confidence.

HANSEN, PERCY HOWARD, V.C., M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He volunteered to carry out a reconnaissance, and brought back valuable information obtained under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, which had been unobtainable from other sources. Throughout he did fine work.

HAYBITTEL, LESLIE MCGOWAN, Temporary Capt., Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great coolness and determination during a heavy enemy attack. He did great execution with his gun, holding off and destroying numbers of the enemy and capturing a machine gun and four prisoners.

HAYLEY-BELL, FRANCIS, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in assisting to repulse several enemy assaults. He repeatedly went out from his Battalion Headquarters through artillery barrage to visit and encourage the companies in the front line. In the afternoon he was hit in the jaw by a sniper, but carried on until orders were received in the evening for his battalion to withdraw. His personal efforts and presence amongst the men largely contributed to the successful defence.

HAYNE, SYDNEY SPENCER, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northamptonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with marked ability and skill, and when surrounded by the enemy he led a successful counter-attack, thereby relieving the pressure on other troops. He set an example of courage and cheerfulness under most trying conditions.

HESLOP, THOMAS BERNARD, Capt. (Acting Major), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While commanding a battalion holding an outpost line, all the officers except three subalterns and himself were killed or wounded by shell fire. It was entirely due to the personal hold which he had over his men that, with their left flank enveloped, they stood their ground fighting to the last.

HILL, FRANCIS ROWLEY, Temporary Major, Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a determined enemy attack on our line this officer saw some of our troops withdrawing. With prompt initiative he rallied the men and reorganized them under heavy fire, and led them back to their original positions, which they held. A very critical situation was thus restored. Throughout the engagement his untiring energy and his devotion to duty were a fine example to all ranks, and his coolness and fine courage worthy of the highest praise.

HODSON, WILLIAM, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of his battalion. His coolness under heavy fire and his skilful disposition of his men greatly assisted in checking the enemy's advance.

HOLDEN, VERNON, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy advance. When his battalion was surrounded he withdrew his company with marked skill through the enveloping enemy, and collected men near him and formed a new line of defence. Throughout his fine leadership and coolness under most difficult circumstances were of a high order.

HOUSE, HARRY WILFRED, M.C., Temporary Major, Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, originally in charge of a company, had to take command of the battalion on the second day of the fighting, owing to casualties amongst the senior ranks. He commanded it for a week of heavy fighting with marked success. His energy and disregard of danger throughout were an inspiration to his men, especially when he hung on to the front line with a small party of the regiment until completely surrounded, only getting out by his pluck and judgment after dark.

HUSKISSON, GEOFFREY, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On reaching his observation post through a very heavy barrage of high-explosive and gas shells he proceeded to mend the wire to his battery, which had been cut, sending back valuable information to group headquarters at a time when there was no other means of communication available. When the enemy had advanced nearly up to his observation post he fought them with a Lewis gun, and, when this jammed, with a rifle, until he was nearly cut off, all the while under very heavy fire of all descriptions, being himself wounded in the cheek. He afterwards collected some parties of infantry, and, organizing a defence, held a position of importance for nearly two hours. During seven days' severe fighting he commanded his battery with conspicuous success, and his courage under fire and cheerfulness under all circumstances were a fine example to his men.

HUTCHISON, GRAHAM SETON, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, attached Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of three companies of machine gunners. He drove off four heavy enemy attacks with great slaughter. He handled his guns excellently, and displayed great determination and initiative under the hottest fire.

HUXTABLE, CHARLES HUBERT ANTONY, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the whole of three weeks' operations. On one occasion, when his battery was in the thick of a heavy barrage, he kept his gun firing despite casualties. He directed the evacuation of the wounded and himself worked one gun single-handed. He kept touch with Brigade Headquarters during the whole time, and found a new position, less exposed, where he swiftly moved his guns during a lull.

IRONSIDE, WILLIAM STEWART, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. For seven days of continuous fighting he kept his battery together splendidly, in spite of heavy casualties. Throughout these trying days and sleepless nights, he set throughout the finest example to his battery in getting up thousands of rounds of ammunition to his guns in action, as well as getting all his own wounded, and several wounded of other units, safely away.

JACK, FREDERICK CHATER, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After withdrawing his battery across a canal under close-range fire, this officer brought his last gun into action in full view of the enemy, who had rushed the bridge, and occupied a house, by his accurate fire compelling them to evacuate it, and recross the bridge, where they were kept in check for an hour.

JACKSON, ERNEST, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy broke into a village he organized and led a completely successful counter-attack. Although wounded he remained at his post, and when again the enemy broke into the village he continued to direct his company with the utmost courage under intense fire until severely wounded a second time. It was largely due to his courage, coolness and devotion to duty that this important point remained in our hands.

JAMES, LIONEL, Lieut.-Colonel, King Edward's Horse. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He rallied and reorganized troops and put them in position with great skill, showing indifference to heavy machine-gun and artillery fire. His brilliant handling of his men checked the enemy's advance.

JOYCE, JOSEPH, M.C., Temporary Major, Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a machine-gun company. It was due in a great degree to his magnificent example and great courage that a position was enabled to be held for so long. Later, he collected a party of stragglers, and, with two of his guns and two trench mortars, he held up a hostile advance. During this defence he was severely wounded, but refused to leave his post, and it was not until the enemy had almost surrounded him that he withdrew to a fresh position, being himself the last to leave. His courage and ability throughout were deserving of the highest praise.

KEET, HUBERT GORDON, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer did good work as second in command during four days' operations. He was continually round the lines cheering officers and men, keeping touch with the situation and superintending the maintenance of supplies. One afternoon, hearing that a village in the line had fallen into the hands of the enemy, he organized and led a counter-attack, recapturing the position under heavy fire. His fine fighting spirit was an example to the men.

KERMODE, EDGAR MARSDEN, M.C., D.C.M., Second Lieut., West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in carrying out several daring reconnaissances under heavy fire. On one occasion he led his party forward with the greatest courage, and gained a hostile outpost, capturing many prisoners and a machine gun. Before withdrawing, he entirely destroyed the position by placing boxes of the enemy bombs in the entrance and lighting them. His courage and fine leadership inspired his men with the utmost confidence, and enabled his operations to be entirely successful.

KETTLEWELL, EDWARD ALEXANDER, Lieut.-Colonel (Brevet Colonel), Indian Army. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of reinforcement camps, and was ordered to fill a gap in our line with such forces as he could collect. Realizing the emergency, he had already reorganized the reinforcements and such stragglers as he could collect into a battalion, and at an hour's notice personally led them forward to a section of the line which he held for two days until relieved. During this period he beat off several attacks, and by his personal example inspired his men with confidence and assurance.

KIRKUP, PHILIP, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While in command of his battalion, holding two bridgeheads, was attacked six times by the enemy in mass. It was due to his courage, tireless energy and initiative in organizing counter-attacks in the face of enormously superior numbers that time was allowed for reserves to come up and prevent a break in the line.

LAMBERTON, JOHN ROBERTSON, M.C., Capt., Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As second in command of his battalion he was constantly on the move organizing local counter-attacks. When placed in command of a composite battalion, he held up the enemy advance with great skill, withdrawing his men when ordered to a new line, which he then commanded and held against successive enemy attacks.

LAWLESS, FRANCIS, Temporary Capt., Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his commanding officer became a casualty he took command of the battalion and remained as such during the whole of the ensuing week's operations. He fought his battalion magnificently, and his conduct was the admiration of the troops adjoining. His cheerfulness and coolness had a wonderful effect on his men, and his efforts undoubtedly on several occasions caused heavy losses to be inflicted on the enemy and retarded his progress.

LEWIS, LEWIS HEWITT, M.C., Temporary Major, East Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On many occasions, while in command of the rearguard during two days' hard fighting, the conspicuous services of this officer were of the utmost value. His organization of patrols undoubtedly saved a very difficult situation. On one occasion the non-commissioned officer and two runners who were with him having become casualties, he was left alone, but, with great determination, he was able to carry out the orders given to him. Later on, under heavy machine-gun fire, he was able by his energy and fine example to arrest a retirement that might have assumed serious proportions, but with great courage, in spite of difficulties, he rallied the men, and, collecting the stragglers, he put them into good positions, which he consolidated, and thus restored a very critical situation.

LOW, WALTER ROBERT, M.C., Temporary Capt., King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout the operations in which his battalion took part, especially on the following occasions: (1) He directed flanking rifle fire and established a forward Lewis-gun post, which caused the enemy severe casualties. (2) When the troops on his left had been disorganized by a hostile attack he organized some scattered details and counter-attacked, covering the withdrawal of his battalion. (3) He took command of the battalion when the commanding officer was killed, leading counter-attacks on three separate occasions under heavy fire and re-establishing the line.

MANNOCK, EDWARD, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Engineers, attached Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during recent operations. In seven days, while leading patrols and in general engagements, he destroyed seven enemy machines, bringing his total in all to 30. His leadership, dash and courage were of the highest order.

MASTERS, GODFREY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Owing to his quick grasp of the situation and prompt action at a critical time, often under shell fire, the infantry brigade, covered by his guns, was enabled to hold its part of the battle zone until ordered to withdraw. He handled his brigade with skill, coolness and courage throughout the retirement.

MATHESON, WILLIAM MURRAY, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer brought his battery into action in the open in front of a railway embankment during a sudden retirement, and remained until the infantry formed up behind him. His timely assistance was of great value to the infantry, who were exhausted and short of officers. A fortnight later, while his battery was firing a protective barrage, it suddenly came under very heavy and accurate fire, so he cleared the detachments to a flank, and, with thirty volunteers, two of whom have since died of wounds, kept two guns in action to maintain the barrage.

McLACHLAN, THOMAS, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his commanding officer became a casualty he brought the remnants of the battalion out of action after two and a half days' continuous fighting. Through his untiring energy and good leadership, both in counter-attacking and organizing successive lines of defence, very heavy losses were inflicted upon the enemy, and their advance was materially checked.

METCALFE, HERBERT CHARLES, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northamptonshire Regt., attached Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical moment this officer was ordered to take a portion of the army line. Advancing with his battalion, he was just in time to repel a formidable counter-attack by the enemy. He remained in the firing line throughout the day and during the next two days and the night he repelled furious attacks made on our positions. He personally led many counter-attacks, and his complete disregard of danger was a most inspiring example to his men, and his able leadership imbued all ranks with great confidence and a firm determination to hold up the enemy and save the line.

MILLER, ALBERT BASIL, Temporary Lieut., South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. After his senior officers had become casualties he led the battalion with great dash and determination, killing a large number of the enemy and taking 70 prisoners. When withdrawal became necessary, he got his men back to the front line in perfect order. His courage and leadership were of a high order, and he turned a doubtful situation into a brilliant success.

MILLER, JOHN ALEXANDER, Lieut. (Acting Major), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The line on his left flank having been penetrated, he handled his battalion with great skill, selecting defensive positions, rallying his men, and by his fearless behaviour and inspiring presence saving an awkward situation. He, later, reconnected the line to his left, linked up, and got the various parties into touch with each other, and took the whole situation in hand. His example and skill were an outstanding feature during the operations, and encouraged all with whom he came in contact.

MODERA, FREDERICK STEWART, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers, attached Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He did fine work in reorganizing lines of resistance during a withdrawal, and in counter-attacking. He showed marked ability and disregard for danger.

MOIR, ROBERT GIFFORD, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in temporary command of a battalion. Both in attack and defence he has done consistently well, and kept his battalion up to a high standard of fighting spirit, so that they have not lost a position.

MOODIE, PETER ALEXANDER, Lieut., Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when sent with his company to support another unit. He rallied men who were being driven in, and although wounded held on, stopping the enemy advance. Later, when outflanked and enfiladed, although wounded on the second time, he organized an orderly withdrawal. He made another stand, and received his third wound. Although weak from loss of blood, he waited till all was quiet, and handed over his company. His conduct throughout was magnificent, and preserved the line from being broken through.

MOORE, HENRY, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went through heavy machine-gun and rifle fire to a dressing station which was being evacuated, and cleared a large number of wounded. He also took cars to battery positions which were being shelled, and removed the wounded to safety. At the dressing-stations during enemy bombardment he remained to the last, and saved many lives by his courage and devotion to duty.

MORGAN, HAROLD DE RIEMER, Capt. (Acting Major), East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion with ability and energy during a trying time. Against heavy odds he stubbornly maintained positions, and showed fine leadership.

MORLIDGE, ARTHUR, Capt., Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer set a magnificent example of leadership under very heavy bombardment and in the face of a powerful enemy attack. When the enemy had penetrated the line on his right, capturing battalion headquarters, he assumed command of the battalion, collected detached parties, and maintained a stubborn resistance, inflicting heavy casualties, until compelled to withdraw, which he did in good order, reorganizing his command at each successive position.

MOSS, WILLIAM, Temporary Capt., Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In an attack on a trench this officer organized and directed the whole of the mopping up. On reaching the second objective, he directed operations skilfully and with coolness under heavy fire, maintaining communications with the rear. Although counter-attacked more than once, he held on until his supply of bombs gave out and his rifles were clogged with mud, when he carried out the withdrawal in a very able manner. Over 100 prisoners and three machine guns were brought back, 22 machine guns being destroyed, and no fewer than 80 dead being counted in one trench. He did splendid work.

MULQUEEN, FREDERICK JAMES, M.C., Temporary Major, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was sent up with his company to reinforce the line at a very difficult time. He was of the greatest assistance to the defence. His fearless bearing and gallantry stimulated all ranks and enabled the positions to be held for a long time, though repeatedly attacked by overwhelming numbers.

MUNRO, DAVID CAMPBELL DUNCAN, M.C., D.C.M., Capt. (Temporary Major), Gordon Highlanders, attached Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion most efficiently throughout a week's operations. At a time when his men were suffering heavily from the bombardment, he was constantly among them encouraging them. It was due to his initiative that an important unoccupied post was seized, and later every attempt to retake it was frustrated. Another of his companies, after being shelled for two days, recaptured in a dashing manner a post of great importance.

MURDOCH, CLIVE, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yeomanry, attached Hampshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion with the greatest skill and coolness while withdrawing; he held on to positions as long as possible, and inflicted heavy loss on the enemy.

NICHOLLS, ERNEST PULESTON, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his battery during an enemy attack. Under most difficult circumstances he fought off the enemy all day, and in the evening withdrew his battery with the loss of only one gun, which had been destroyed by shell fire. He showed great ability in command.

OAKDEN, THOMAS HENRY, Temporary Second Lieut., Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led attack after attack against enemy bombers with such success that his unit was able to maintain its position against great odds for over five hours, after the right flank had become enveloped. Subsequently he went forward with another officer to regain touch with troops on his right. When the officer with him was wounded he took charge of the party and successfully withdrew them to another line. Although given orders to withdraw as soon as relieved, he, without food or water, maintained his position for 36 hours, refusing to withdraw until relieved. He was wounded in the foot. His example of courage was exceptionally high.

OSBORNE, LEONARD ALFRED, M.C., Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Somersetshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded a support company in the attack. Seeing that the leading companies were held up by machine-gun fire he led forward two of his platoons, and started section rushes, carrying the whole line forward by his example. He was the first to reach the objective, and the companies being then very mixed he took command of the whole, organizing and consolidating the defence. Later, his skilful dispositions enabled a counter-attack to be broken.

PARK, GODFREY WILLIAM ALAN, Temporary Capt., East Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in charge of the left forward flank of the line, where he displayed the greatest ability in reorganizing the details and stragglers from other divisions, which were being absorbed as they came along by the composite battalion with which he was serving. Under most difficult circumstances, his tireless energy and cheerful courage were an invaluable example to all ranks of his command, exhausted as they were with prolonged fighting. At a critical moment, though twice wounded, he rallied his men, and led them forward to restore the front after a personal reconnaissance under heavy shell fire, and he remained directing his command until relieved on the following morning. His courage and resource under most trying conditions were admirable.

PARKIN, FRANK LESLIE, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Light Infantry, attached West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of a rearguard action. He showed exceptional ability in withdrawing his command under difficult conditions, with very small loss under intense shelling and machine-gun fire.

PEARCE, CLIFFORD JAMES, Capt., Somersetshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer led his company in an attack in a wood, which was a mass of broken branches and tangled wire. He captured his first and second objectives, taking many prisoners and killing large numbers. Counter-attacked on his second objective, he for a long time made a determined resistance, but realizing the position was becoming untenable, withdrew, reorganized, and again forced his way forward by bombing attacks. His dash and skill throughout had a great effect on the men.

PEARSON, JOHN HESKETH, M.C., Temporary Major, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. At a critical period he led a successful counter-attack, driving back the enemy and capturing four machine guns and some prisoners. By his prompt action and gallant leadership he restored the situation.

PEARSON, NOEL GERVIS, M.C., Temporary Major, South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in organizing several minor counter-attacks and in carrying out many daring reconnaissances by night, when he invariably brought back valuable information. His cheerful spirit and courageous example inspired great confidence in all on many critical occasions.

PERCIVAL, ARTHUR ERNEST, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Essex Regt., attached Bedfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during recent operations. He handled his battalion cleverly, showing power of command and knowledge of tactics. He set a fine example during several critical periods.

POWELL, GEORGE, Second Lieut., Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer in command of a company fought a skilful rearguard action, enabling the battalion to take up a fresh position. On several occasions he went out to reconnoitre, gaining important information, and once, when out with only three men, brought back four prisoners. A few days later, when all other officers had become casualties, he led the battalion in a brilliant attack, gaining the objective, and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. His example throughout ten days' fighting was of inestimable service.

PRICE-WILLIAMS, HAROLD, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a critical period he went forward under intense fire of high-explosive and gas shell to ascertain the situation, and then returned to encourage his men to deal with the charging enemy with open sights. He showed fine courage and leadership.

PRITCHARD, RALPH BROOMFIELD, M.C., Temporary Capt., Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the battalion was ordered to fill a gap in the front line, this officer, in charge of the advanced guard, acted with such dash that it was mainly through his fine work that the battalion was able to do so. Later, he again advanced and occupied the old line, getting into touch with the flanks, and capturing three men of an enemy patrol. He held the line for the next four days under heavy fire, and finally was severely wounded when leading his company in a counter-attack as it gained its first objective.

PUGH, MERVYN PHIPPEN, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his Commanding Officer was killed, this officer assumed command of the battalion, and in difficult and intricate situations withdrew from position to position, always keeping it intact and ready for further fighting. When, after four days, the battalion was relieved, he personally reorganized the four companies, nearly all the officers having become casualties. His determination and leadership carried the battalion safely through several critical phases.

RAIMES, ALWYN LESLIE, Major, Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer organized and led a counter-attack, and, although wounded by a rifle bullet in the thigh, he continued to carry on, holding the enemy up for some hours. Until the success of the attack was assured, and the line re-established, he refused to leave his battalion. While in command of the battalion his example to the men had a great effect.

REID, CHARLES, Capt. (Temporary Major), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While commanding a battalion in the outpost line, during a heavy bombardment with gas shells, although affected by the gas, remained in command, and reorganized the line under shell and machine-gun fire. During prolonged fighting, though practically without sleep, his confident bearing and disregard of danger gave encouragement to all under his command.

REID, HORACE ARTHUR, M.C., Temporary Major, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when commanding his company. He held his position against heavy odds until ammunition was practically exhausted. Seeing a wounded officer lying in a shell-hole in front of the line, he went forward, and, with the assistance of a N.C.O., brought him in under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. He showed fine courage and determination.

ROBERTS, JOHN PRICE, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He several times reconnoitred enemy positions under heavy shell and machine-gun fire. By his gallantry, determination and unflinching energy he encouraged all ranks.

ROBERTSON, GEORGE RAYMOND GILDEA, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer fought his battery under an exceedingly heavy and continuous barrage to the last; the two remaining serviceable guns were then put out of action, and the remaining cartridges burnt. He then withdrew his men and reported to the infantry. His coolness and cheerfulness throughout the day encouraged the men to carry out their arduous duties successfully.

SAINT, EDWARD TWELFTREE, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Cambridgeshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty covering a period of ten days' operations, during the first seven of which he showed marked initiative in organizing lines of defence, especially in front of a town, where he held up the enemy advance, enabling the guns to be withdrawn. When the officer commanding another battalion became a casualty, he assumed command of both battalions. Later, when the officer commanding brigade became a casualty, he took command of the brigade, organizing a counter-attack at a critical time, and reoccupying the line. He kept the men splendidly together when nearly all the officers and non-commissioned officers had become casualties.

SANDERSON, AYMOR EDEN, Capt. and Brevet Major, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer has repeatedly galloped forward from brigade headquarters to the front line rallying and organizing men of various battalions. On one occasion, when the necessity for a counter-attack was pressing, he galloped forward with orders to two battalion commanders, enabling the attack to take place at the right time. Both going and returning, and while delivering the orders, he was under heavy shell and machine-gun fire.

SCRIMGEOUR, GEOFFREY CAMERON, M.C. Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After a heavy enemy bombardment of gas and high-explosive shell had knocked out all his guns, together with two officers and eight non-commissioned officers, he collected all remaining personnel and manned the trench in front of his battery. With Lewis guns and rifles he held this position till nightfall. He showed fine courage, and set a splendid example to his battery.

SHARP, ROBERT RICH, M.C., Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He remained in command of his trench mortars till all ammunition was expended, then he organized a party of men and took up a defensive position. Although under continuous short-range fire, he so organized the defence and encouraged his men, that in spite of repeated enemy attacks the position was still holding out six hours later. His timely and gallant action prevented the enemy from pushing a wedge into our lines. Subsequently he carried out a very long and arduous reconnaissance under very severe fire, sending back very valuable information. His good work was conspicuous, and his personal courage and energy were alike remarkable.

SHARPE, ALFRED GERALD MEREDITH, Capt. and Brevet Major, Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a week's operations. When the enemy had launched a heavy attack, and driven back the brigade on the right, laying open the right flank, this officer went forward under heavy fire to clear up the situation, selected positions, and led up reserve companies to form a defensive flank. He also rallied leaderless men of other units and led them forward into the line. He gave a clear and accurate report of the situation on his return to brigade headquarters.

SIMMONS, JOHN AYNSCOUGH, M.C., Temporary Major, Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He led his battalion with fine dash and leadership, and gained his objective. Owing to both flanks being in the air, he was obliged to order a withdrawal, which he covered, together with 20 men. He eventually personally got in touch with his flanks and organized a defensive position. He displayed courage of a high order, and set a splendid example to all.

SLATER, HARRY ANDREW, Temporary Lieut., Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. With a few men he protected two light trench mortars, and enabled them to inflict heavy casualties on the enemy. He led successful counter-attacks with great gallantry. In the evening he reconnoitred the enemy's position, which enabled him to lead another successful counter-attack and bring back two enemy trench mortars. He set a fine example to all.

SMITH, ROBERT ARTHUR, M.C., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battalion. When his right flank was exposed, with a few men he had collected and the personnel of his own battalion headquarters, he formed a defensive flank which successfully held up the enemy's advance. Under heavy fire he personally superintended another successful operation, in which his men had to fight their way back through a village. His indomitable courage and personality at a critical moment saved a very difficult situation. His calmness and absolute disregard of danger under fire were an example to all ranks.

SMYTH, GEORGE OSBERT STIRLING, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under heavy shelling he went along the battery and helped to put out ammunition that had been set on fire, and with three remaining guns fired on the approaching enemy with open sights, inflicting heavy casualties. Next day, by collecting men near him and machine guns, he held up the enemy for hours.

SPENCER, FRANCIS ELMHIRST, M.C., Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under heavy shell and machine-gun fire he used his guns with great effect, destroying numbers of the enemy and materially assisting the infantry. He showed fine dash and leadership.

SPURRELL, WILLIAM JAMES, M.C., Temporary Major, Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He personally made a reconnaissance of the ground for a counter-attack, giving orders for the disposition of the men under very heavy shell and machine-gun fire. Although wounded, he insisted on carrying on, and gathering every man from battalion headquarters, until he received a second wound. Throughout the whole time he commanded the battalion his example and gallantry were of a very fine order.

STEPHENSON, MARMADUKE BASIL, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), East Yorkshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in maintaining an isolated position with his company against several attacks by the enemy in superior numbers. By his determined courage and resolution he inspired his men to hold their line for four days until relieved.

STITT, WILLIAM HEWITT, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Irish Fusiliers, attached Royal Dublin Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the battalion was entirely surrounded by the enemy, this officer carried out a personal reconnaissance of the bridge-heads, which were both occupied by the enemy. He ascertained the enemy's password and dispositions, and then led the column over the bridge, killing one of the sentries himself. Further, on finding the enemy in possession of a village, he again reconnoitred, and ascertained their dispositions, getting his column safely through and rejoining our line, bringing with him some 10 officers and 350 other ranks.

STONE, WILLIAM ALFRED COLLIS, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Suddenly called upon to command the brigade owing to casualties, he did so with complete efficiency during a withdrawal. At a critical period he displayed courage and leadership which inspired confidence in all ranks of the brigade.

STONE, GERALD JOHNSTON LIPYEATT, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He maintained his battalion headquarters in a village for many hours after the greater portion of that village had fallen into enemy hands. By doing so he undoubtedly delayed the enemy's subsequent advance, and inflicted heavy casualties on him. His brilliant example of gallantry and tenacity had a special value in greatly stimulating the courage of all ranks.

TEMPERLEY, ERIC, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Commanded his battalion throughout four days' continuous fighting, both in attack and defence. By his skilful handling broke up all enemy attacks, inflicting heavy losses, and set a fine example of courage and determination.

THOMPSON, WILLIAM DOUGLAS BAIRD, M.C., Lieut., Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Showed great courage and determination in holding the line, which was the left flank of the battalion, and not in touch with any other unit, beating back every attempt of the enemy to advance. After dusk, when the flank was temporarily driven back, he restored the situation by his energy and fearlessness.

THOMPSON, THOMAS ALEXANDER LACY, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded the battalion for a week, after his commanding officer had been wounded. When the enemy had captured a village on his flank, he led his men in a house-to-house counter-attack, clearing the greater part of the village and re-establishing the line. The following day, in spite of two gunshot wounds in the thigh, after the units on the flank had been driven back, he held on for over an hour until a counter-attack restored the situation.

THOMSON, JAMES ALBERT RAYMOND, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout ten days' fighting this officer has rendered splendid service, inspiring the brigade by his example of cheerfulness and leadership. When the enemy captured a village he established his battalion on some high ground above it, holding on from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., although his right was in the air, and he had neither orders nor information. On a later occasion, after encouraging his men throughout a day of intense shelling, he led a counter-attack in the evening to cover the withdrawal of another division. This was successful, as also was his rearguard action afterwards.

TILLIE, WILLIAM KINGSLEY, M.C., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The personal reconnaissances made by him under very heavy fire were of the utmost value. His energy and fearlessness in going amongst his men at critical periods at great personal risk set a fine example and inspired great confidence. The determination with which he handled his machine guns was largely responsible for defeating many hostile attacks.

TOD, DAVID, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Mounted Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer handled his battery with great skill during five days' operations, inflicting many casualties and capturing many prisoners. With marked boldness he rescued two officers from the enemy at a point nearly 50 miles from the nearest supporting troops.

TONG, THOMAS BARLOW, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He personally led a fighting patrol against a number of snipers and machine guns established in a village. In the face of heavy fire he thrust his way to the far edge of the village and established a strong post there. He then returned and brought up reinforcements, and repeated this operation several times. It was very largely due to him that the enemy was prevented from getting possession of the village.

TONSON-RYE, HUBERT BERNARD, Major, Royal Munster Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the troops on his flanks were withdrawn, and his battalion completely cut off, he held on till dark, counter-attacking and driving the enemy from his flank with machine-gun and rifle fire. During the night he succeeded in leading the remainder of his battalion through the enemy's outpost line, and rejoined his brigade. On another occasion, when the troops in the front line were overwhelmed, he led a counter-attack, driving back the enemy, and reoccupying the trenches.

TORTISE, HERBERT JAMES, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal West Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during enemy attacks. When his commanding officer was wounded he assumed command of the battalion, rallied and reorganized other troops with them, and led them in attack. He showed fine courage and powers of command.

TRAILL, ROBERT FRANCIS, Major, Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion, when he counter-attacked, and after capturing his objective was compelled to withdraw, owing to the failure of the attack on the left flank. He executed the retirement with great skill and judgment. Later, he organized a counter-attack and drove the enemy from the line.

TYSOE, WILLIAM, Temporary Second Lieut., Bedfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great skill and ability as the only company officer left, in organizing and consolidating the line after a successful counter-attack; and when next day the enemy again attacked he drove them back, inflicting heavy casualties on them. He showed fine dash and leadership.

WALKER, ARTHUR, Capt. and Brevet Major, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in establishing forward dressing stations and continuing to work in them until forced to move by the immediate proximity of the enemy. He was repeatedly working in the open under heavy fire, no protection being available. He undoubtedly saved many lives which would have been lost but for his courage and initiative.

WESTMORLAND, HERBERT CAMPBELL, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Hampshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed an absolute disregard of danger and great skill and energy in supervising his battle front under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire and during many withdrawals. He personally rallied and reorganized men, and under heavy fire re-established the line at a time when the situation was very critical.

WILL, ROBERT ROSS, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In addition to commanding his battery throughout six days' fighting, he showed great resource as brigade commander in arranging nine successive withdrawals, without losing any guns or ammunition. He broke up, by the fire of his brigade, heavy enemy outflanking attacks on the left, for four hours on end directing and controlling fire on the enemy in the open.

WILLIAMS, HUGH LLOYD, M.C., Temporary Major, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in temporary command of a battalion. His flank being exposed, with a quick grasp of the situation he threw back a short defensive flank and then, collecting troops of various units, personally led three counter-attacks against the advancing enemy. His gallant action checked the enemy and allowed his own troops to form a new line. His complete disregard of personal danger set a fine example and inspired the men with the greatest confidence.

WILLIAMS, WALTER ELLIS, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt., attached Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under very heavy artillery and machine-gun fire he reorganized his battalion, got into touch with troops on either side, and successfully held his position.

WOODRUFFE, JOHN SHELDON, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in commanding his battalion in a very difficult situation, and under heavy fire during ten days' operations. On one occasion he personally rallied and reformed troops under heavy shell fire, and led them to the attack, re-establishing the line at a very critical moment. He showed great gallantry in handling his command.

WOOLLETT, HENRY WINSLOW, M.C., Temporary Capt., General List, attached Royal Air Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during recent operations. In two days during three patrols he destroyed eight enemy machines, making his total 22. His leadership, dash and courage were of the highest order.

WRATHALL, WILLIAM PARKER, M.C., Capt., Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer took over temporary command of the brigade at a time when it was much depleted after 48 hours' fighting, and consisted of small parties of various battalions, holding a line of over 5,000 yards, covering two battalions of another division who were digging. For the best part of three days he was untiring in his efforts, collecting scattered parties and organizing the hastily occupied and extended line. In particular when Brigade Headquarters had been rushed by the enemy and nearly surrounded, it was due to his energy that the personnel was extricated with little loss. His personal reconnoissances and unfailing resource in dealing with difficulties were the mainstay of the line.

YOUNG, JOHN ALLEN, M.C., Temporary Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Under heavy enemy bombardment he kept his battery under control and firing. When the observation post was cut off, he went under heavy machine-gun fire to a neighbouring ridge and thence directed fire till the enemy were close upon him. He then returned to the battery, put up a most spirited resistance till dusk, and then safely got all his guns away. He set a very fine example to all.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BARBER, HORACE GREELY, Major, Canadian Railway Troops. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while supervising light railways. Under his supervision valuable stocks of light railway material and coal were saved, maintenance work was carried out, and railway lines patrolled up to the last possible moment. The good work performed by his men was largely due to his coolness, perseverance and inspiring example while frequently under fire night and day.

BLACKBURN, REGINALD VERNON, M.C., Capt., Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He successfully led his company in a raid under heavy fire. During the operation he rushed a machine-gun post single-handed, and killed two and captured three of the enemy and the gun. A splendid performance.

MUSGROVE, GEORGE HENRY, Major, Canadian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. In the preparatory stages of a raid on the enemy defence, he, by his personal courage and example, inspired all ranks, and was able to develop an intensity of observation and a patrol reconnaissance, which was largely responsible for the clear appreciation of the ground gained. Later, under the handicap of only one arm, the other having been lost in previous operations, he personally supervised the forming up of assaulting parties under heavy fire, and returned to his post, keeping the battalion headquarters fully informed as to each stage of the fighting. His keen sense of duty, fearless conduct in the open, and great energy in all preparations contributed in a large measure to the success of the operations.

PULLEN, ERNEST FLEETWOOD, Major, Canadian Railway Troops. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The energy and devotion to duty which this officer has displayed while commanding his company throughout the operations have been a conspicuous example to all his men, whom he has led, and whose work he has organized in the forward area. On two different occasions he rallied considerable numbers of stragglers from other units, and, leading them back to the front, placed them again under their officers and warrant officers, and their services, when badly wanted, were instrumental in defeating the enemy. His complete disregard of personal safety had a most inspiring effect on his men, and his intelligent dispositions, often under heavy fire, enabled him to keep his line open as long as it was required, and much material was saved.

TIMMIS, REGINALD SYMONDS, Major, Canadian Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in successfully leading a counter-attack at a critical moment, giving sufficient time for the withdrawal of other troops who were surrounded. Later, he conducted a most able rearguard action. Thanks to his energetic and prompt action, a successful withdrawal in face of strong bodies of the enemy was accomplished.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BURDUS, STANLEY GEORGE, Lieut., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When sent forward with his company to secure the ground held by another company which had suffered heavy casualties, he showed excellent leadership. He reorganized the details of this company and established a good line of posts. Seeing two machine guns which were causing him heavy casualties he single-handed rushed them and shot the crews with his revolver at point-blank range and captured the guns, thus enabling his men to advance.

EDGERTON, ERIC HENRY DRUMMOND, M.M., Lieut., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Before dawn on the morning of an attack this officer with two men reconnoitred the track from the assembly point to a bridge over the river, across which he had to lead his platoon at zero. Early in the attack he mopped up a post by bombing. Pushing on, he and another man rushed a machine gun, shooting two men with his revolver and capturing the remainder. After clearing several dug-outs, he established a post on his objective, dispersing an enemy attack. In the afternoon he outflanked a machine-gun post, and followed it up by shooting five men with his revolver and capturing one officer and one man. He then bombed a third machine gun, killing the crew. His energy was an inspiration to all.

MATTHEWS, LESLIE WILLIAM, Major, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion in an attack, previous to which he had reconnoitred the jumping-off ground, and thought out all the arrangements and dispositions. During the attack he moved about under heavy fire, keeping in touch with the situation, directing and controlling the men, and by prompt action in altering dispositions, minimized the losses from shell fire.

METCALFE, JAMES BEVERLEY, M.C., Major, Australian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In a village under heavy bombardment of gas and high explosives, this officer, with practically no protection, tended the wounded for four and a half hours. When the advanced dressing-station had been moved to a new site, he remained with four men evacuating odd cases which continued to come in until two shells came right into the dressing-room, severely wounding him. His cheerfulness and coolness throughout encouraged all around him.

RONALD, HARRY, Capt., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in command of a company on the left of the line, when the enemy, who had broken through a gap on the right, attacked it from front and rear, effecting a lodgment after severe fighting in his trench. He promptly organized a strong counter-attack, dislodging the enemy, killing about sixty, and taking about fifty prisoners. His quick initiative did much towards the success of the operation.

RYRIE, HAROLD STEWART, Capt. (Temporary Major), Australian Light Horse Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his squadron during an attack. Although the enemy was in a strong position, with a great number of well-concealed machine guns, and were threatening to envelop his flank, he led his men forward with the utmost courage. Under a terrific machine-gun fire, he handled his squadron to the best advantage, and set a splendid example of coolness, until he was himself severely wounded.

SMITH, PHILLIP JAMES, Second Lieut., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in charge of a party for mopping up, after the capture of a village, and had to swim two creeks to reach his objective, coming under direct fire of an enemy strong post. Without a moment's hesitation, he rushed it, capturing one officer and 11 men. He then rescued one of his men who was lying wounded under fire in the street, then, closing his party round another strong post, he shot one man, and overpowered an officer with his fists, the rest surrendering. Though greatly exhausted, he concluded by dashing across 70 yards of open ground by himself and capturing a party of nine of the enemy.

TASSIE, LESLIE GEMMEL, Major, Australian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer set a fine example of coolness in going about amongst his stretcher-bearers directing and encouraging them. Day and night he visited the regimental aid post and loading posts, rearranging bearer relays, and supervising the evacuation of wounded. Hearing there were several wounded in a village which was being heavily shelled, he organized parties and cleared the village.

WHITHAM, JOHN LAWRENCE, C.M.G., Lieut.-Colonel, Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion in a difficult night operation with great ability. Following an enemy advance, in which a village was lost, the battalion, which had already marched six miles, took part in a counter-attack. The ground was strange, and there was no time for reconnaissance, but the approach march and deployment was carried out without a hitch, and the attack was a brilliant success. He moved about encouraging and directing his troops, and established his headquarters well forward in an open trench, from which, though under heavy fire, he was able to control his battalion.

WILES, HAROLD JOSEPH, Lieut., Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, especially in leading fighting patrols to gain information. On one occasion, when within striking distance of the enemy, he engaged a party and killed five; then, as machine-gun fire and Very lights held up his men, he crawled forward and brought back the required information himself. On another occasion, with a fighting patrol, he rushed an enemy standing patrol, killing one, and chasing another man to within 30 yards of his post, when he took him prisoner and brought him back under heavy fire. The man had his rifle and bayonet, while this officer only had an empty revolver.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

MASSEY, FRANK GEORGE, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), New Zealand Rifle Brigade, attached Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During two days' hard fighting, until severely wounded, commanded the battalion in a most efficient manner, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy, at small cost, largely owing to his resource and grasp of the situation.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

GREENE, LOVELL, M.C., Temporary Capt., South African Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer led his company in a counter-attack, securing his first objective, including a strong point, and organizing and consolidating under heavy fire. The next morning, his Commanding Officer becoming a casualty, he took command of the battalion. During heavy enemy attacks our troops were forced back. He immediately went forward, rallying and encouraging them, and, thanks to his efforts, the enemy was beaten back. His work, both as company and battalion commander, was splendid.

London Gazette, 20 Sept. 1918.—"Admiralty, S.W., 20 Sept. 1918.—Honours for Services in the Auxiliary Patrol, Minesweeping and Coastal Motor Boats, between 1 Jan. and 30 June, 1918. "Honours for Miscellaneous Services.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

DORLING, HENRY TAPRELL, Commander, R.N.

London Gazette, 21 Sept. 1918.—"Air Ministry, 21 Sept. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the undermentioned rewards on Officers of the Royal Air Force, in recognition of gallantry in flying operations against the enemy. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

COLLISHAW, RAYMOND, D.S.O., D.S.C., D.F.C., Lieut. (Temporary Major) (late Royal Naval Air Service). A brilliant squadron leader of exceptional daring, who has destroyed 51 enemy machines. Early one morning he, with another pilot, attacked an enemy aerodrome. Seeing three machines brought out of a burning hangar he dived five times, firing bursts at these from a very low altitude, and dropped bombs on the living quarters. He then saw an enemy aeroplane descending over the aerodrome; he attacked it and drove it down in flames. Later, when returning from a reconnaissance of the damaged hangars, he was attacked by three Albatross scouts, who pursued him to our lines, when he turned and attacked one, which fell out of control and crashed.

(D.S.O. gazetted 11 Aug. 1917; D.S.C. gazetted 20 July, 1917; D.F.C. gazetted 3 Aug. 1918.)

SMART, BERNARD ARTHUR, D.S.O., Lieut. (Hon. Capt.) (Sea Patrol). Led his flight for 160 miles over sea and land, and destroyed by bombs an important enemy airship shed. This service was carried out under exceptionally difficult circumstances, requiring great skill, and was most creditably performed.

(D.S.O. gazetted 2 Nov. 1917.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

DICKSON, WILLIAM FORSTER, Lieut. (Honorary Capt.) (Sea Patrol). Displayed great skill and gallantry on the occasion of a long-distance bombing raid. He succeeded in dropping bombs on an airship station from a low altitude with destructive effect, and although subjected to severe fire from the enemy obtained valuable information.

STODART, DAVID EDMUND, D.F.C., Capt. (Temporary Major). Whilst commanding a flight of the Royal Air Force the whole of the flying officers had become incapacitated through sickness or wounds, and their duties were then performed by himself, in addition to his administrative work as commanding officer. During this period Major Stodart dropped 115 bombs on the enemy's position, exposed 326 negatives over enemy territory, and acted as observer for 163 rounds of our heavy artillery. In a period of 21 days this officer was 37 hours in the air, performing all the duties of an entire flight, a record which it would be difficult to surpass.

London Gazette, 24 Sept. 1918.—"War Office, 24 Sept. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BARTLETT, ALFRED JAMES NAPIER, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. By his skilful handling of his battalion he maintained his position in spite of the line being penetrated on both flanks, thereby checking the enemy's advance, and enabling the line to be completely re-established by counter-attack. By his courage and coolness he set a splendid example to all ranks.

DAVIDGE, GUY MORTIMER COLERIDGE, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. He handled his battalion in a remarkably cool and resourceful way, and frequently anticipated orders according to the exigencies of the situation in difficult conditions. Again, later, he did particularly gallant and soldierly work, freely exposing himself to heavy fire and maintaining a close grip of the situation. It was due to his fine behaviour that his portion of the line remained intact.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

HOBDAV, RUPERT EDMUND, D.S.O., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of a raiding party of four officers and 120 men. Thanks to his previous reconnaissance, careful organization for the attack, and his gallant leadership during the raid, the operation successfully resulted in the capture of an officer and 41 men. He himself shot four of the enemy, and dashed single-handed at a machine gun, personally carrying in the gun. He brought his party back entire with only one casualty. He set a fine example of courage and determination.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Nov. 1916.)

IRWIN, NOEL MACKINTOSH STUART, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the whole of his battalion front was heavily attacked and all communications with his forward companies were cut, this officer personally organized his headquarters and stragglers, and formed a defensive flank so as to obtain touch with the brigade on the right. This flank he held for eight hours against all attacks, organizing two counter-attacks against the enemy during this period, thus averting a critical situation. It was greatly due to his able conduct that the holding of their battle position by his brigade was possible throughout the day. His courage, energy and quick decision inspired the greatest confidence in his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

JARDINE, COLIN ARTHUR, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy broke through a gap in the direction of his battery, he promptly gave orders for his guns to be dragged out into the open, while he himself took forward a party of his battery to defend the gap while the guns were being moved. His party succeeded in holding back the enemy sufficiently long, and then his guns opened at point-blank range with such effect that the enemy's attack in this part was entirely shattered. His prompt action was decisive in averting a dangerous situation; and throughout the day he showed splendid leadership, and his spirit was an inspiration to all about him of whatever rank or arm.

(D.S.O. gazetted 11 Nov. 1914.)

KING, GILBERT EAST, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, East Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a raid made by two battalions into the enemy's lines. His utter disregard of personal danger, skill and cheerfulness throughout, inspired all under his command and proved him to be a leader of a high order. Throughout the raid he remained exposed to enemy fire in an advanced position which would enable him to control the operations, which he did extremely well. It was due to his indomitable example that his battalion was imbued with a fighting spirit which nothing could daunt.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

KIRKUP, PHILIP, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On the night before a battle opened this officer was sent to the Field Ambulance with a temperature of 103 degrees, but on hearing the barrage he left and attempted to rejoin his unit, which was impossible, so he collected all the men he could and organized a defensive position, which he held on to as long as possible. During the next two days he several times assisted in rallying men and holding up the enemy advance, and when ammunition had almost run out, he rode back and brought up small arms ammunition, riding practically into the front line with it. Throughout the whole period he did much to organize stragglers and keep them in the fighting line, being without sleep, and having little food for five days.

(D.S.O. gazetted 16 Sept. 1918.)

KNOX, JAMES MELDRUM, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion. He kept touch with the situation till ordered by the division to counter-attack when the enemy had broken through. Thanks to his splendid handling of his battalion, this counter-attack was decisive, the enemy were at once held up, and after heavy fighting were driven back with severe losses, several hundred prisoners being captured and the front line restored.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

SAWYER, GUY HENRY, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of a battalion of details of his brigade. At an early period in the day his left flank was completely turned, but by fine leadership and a skilful use of a small reserve, he held his line intact till orders were issued for a withdrawal. Throughout the day, though communications were particularly difficult and the situation obscure, he kept his brigade informed of his position and repelled all attacks of the enemy on his left flank and front. At night, on receipt of orders to withdraw, he successfully extricated his men from a very difficult position, in close touch with the enemy.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BRAZENOR, WILLIAM, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He led his battalion successfully, and supervised, under constant machine-gun and rifle fire, the consolidation of the captured ground. Next day he led a patrol into "No Man's Land" and made a reconnaissance, with the result that the line was pushed forward another 200 yards. Throughout the operation he did fine work.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

BLACK, ALEXANDER MACGREGOR, Temporary Major, Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in rallying broken groups of men in action and posting them in fresh defensive positions. By his personal example and efforts this officer gave the greatest encouragement to his men, and inspired them to a further determined resistance until a withdrawal was ordered.

BRETT, GEORGE ALBERT, M.C., Capt., London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the right flank of the battalion. He repulsed several strong enemy attacks, organized a counter-attack, and drove the enemy out of a portion of the front in which he had gained a footing. When the troops on his right were forced back he formed a defensive flank and held the position till ordered to withdraw. He remained with the rearguard and covered the withdrawal of the battalion in a masterly manner. His coolness and ability greatly helped in saving a critical situation and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

CAREY, JOHN LIONEL ROMILLY, Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. By his example and skilful work he kept his battery in action whilst heavily shelled and gassed. He sent back much invaluable information of the progress of the enemy attack.

CHARLES, ERIC EDMONSTONE, Major, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He kept his battery in action throughout the day in spite of constant and heavy shell fire. He was out of communication with brigade headquarters for practically the entire day, and the valuable work done by his battery was entirely due to his initiative.

CLARK, CHARLES ALFRED, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Major), East Surrey Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during five days whilst commanding his battalion. He fought his battalion most gallantly against great odds till the great majority were killed and the remainder captured. He was himself severely wounded.

COOTE, COLIN REITH, M.P., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. By his personal example and coolness he held his men together during a critical period and personally led two counter-attacks, inflicting considerable casualties and thus staying the enemy's advance and enabling the situation to be reorganized. He did very fine service.

CORSAN, REGINALD ARTHUR, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when the enemy broke through and advanced on the flank of the battery position. He withdrew the personnel, covering the retirement with rifle fire, and from a new position held up the enemy till driven out by close machine-gun fire. He then assisted to get the guns of another battery into action. The whole of the time, some 14 hours, he was under machine-gun and rifle fire at close range, in addition to a heavy gas and high explosive bombardment. His courage and leadership at a most critical period were splendid.

CUNNINGHAME, WILLIAM WALLACE SMITH, Capt. (Temporary Major and Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Life Guards, attached Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the left flank of the battalion was badly enfiladed and driven off the plateau, he rode into the valley in face of heavy artillery and machine-gun fire and rallied the men. Then, with the assistance of two other companies, he personally led an assault and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, while his horse was shot under him, and he continued to lead on foot. Owing, however, to weakness in numbers, the battalion made no headway, whereupon he again reorganized and led a counter-attack, which was quite successful, and enabled his men to dig in on the top of the plateau. He was shortly after wounded, but his courage and capabilities undoubtedly saved the situation.

DAVIS, FRANK, Second Lieut., South Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the left flank of the battalion was in the air, with the enemy working round in great strength, he kept his men steady, and by his coolness enabled an orderly withdrawal to be effected. Shortly afterwards, when the battalion was almost surrounded, he formed a rearguard with the remaining men of his company, and by skilful leadership of his men enabled the remainder of the battalion to withdraw successfully. Next day he hung on to an important position with great ability and resolution, though losing many men from heavy shell fire and being wounded himself. Throughout these two days' fighting his personal courage was most marked, and his skilful handling of his men saved the battalion on two occasions.

GOATER, WILLIAM HENRY GEORGE, M.C., Temporary Major, Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of two companies during an enemy attack. He personally led two platoons forward and checked the enemy working round his left flank, and later, when overwhelmed, withdrew his companies most skilfully. Next day he went forward alone under heavy fire and reconnoitred a position, and then returned and led forward a Lewis gun section to a position from which they could check the enemy's advance. He showed throughout great coolness, and set a fine example to his men.

GUSH, HENRY WOOD, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His battalion was in reserve at the commencement of operations, and was moved up early in the morning to support the line. This line was maintained till the evening, when it was practically surrounded; he then withdrew his command with the utmost skill and coolness from a difficult position. Next day he covered the withdrawal of the brigade, maintaining his position for several hours under heavy shell and machine-gun fire. The steadiness of the men and the tenacity with which they held their positions were largely due to the splendid personal example of this officer, and the stand made by his battalion was of the utmost importance.

HENCHLEY, ALBERT RICHARD, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. In two days he succeeded in evacuating some 1,500 patients. He got away his personnel and lorries under shell and machine-gun fire, and proceeded to a hospital elsewhere from which he evacuated 300 wounded by ambulance trains. His unit was the last to leave the town. His coolness and resource were the means of saving a large number of wounded from falling into the hands of the enemy.

KERBY, ALBERT MAURICE, M.C., Lieut., Royal Field Artillery, Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While his battery was being heavily shelled with gas, shrapnel and high explosives he constantly exposed himself, moving from gun to gun and encouraging the detachments. He then went to the observation post to make a report. Whilst visiting the advanced wagon lines he was severely wounded. It was mainly due to his gallantry and fine example that the battery maintained its rate of fire.

McGIVENEY, PHILIP, Second Lieut., Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He captured the first objective with his platoon. His company was subsequently ejected by a counter-attack. He, with a handful of men, returned to the attack and retook the objective. He was wounded in the face, but went on single-handed and bombed and took prisoners the occupants of three posts. Later, arranging another bombing party, and advancing again, he was badly wounded in the spine and had to be taken away. It was due to his splendid courage and dash that his company recovered from its reverse and succeeded in re-engaging and inflicting severe casualties on the enemy.

MILLIS, CHARLES HOWARD GOULDEN, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He rode up and down the firing line under heavy fire organizing the defence, distributing ammunition and encouraging the men to hold the line at all costs, until, as was inevitable, he was severely wounded. His fine example of courage inspired those around him, and contributed greatly to the holding of the line.

PICKFORD, PERCIVAL, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. Throughout the fight he continually moved between battalion headquarters and the front line, and when the situation was critical he personally took a handful of men and placed them exactly where they were required. But for his courageous example and quick initiative the battalion might several times have been surrounded.

POPE, EDWARD BENJAMIN, Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when an important tactical position was in grave danger. He succeeded in rallying the line and led forward in face of heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy, and the line was re-established in its former position. Throughout he showed the greatest courage and resource.

RAMSDEN, ARTHUR GEOFFREY FRANCIS, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery (Special Reserve). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While his battery was subjected to an extremely heavy bombardment he kept all his guns in action, firing his programme and S.O.S. Finally, with only one gun left, he ran it out of the pit, engaged the advancing enemy over open sights, assisted by rifle fire of his detachment, so holding the enemy off. He managed to get his gun on to a trolley and got it away, and eventually withdrew the survivors of his detachment, after inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy.

RAPSON, GEORGE FREDERICK EDWIN, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in a counter-attack. He first carried out a personal reconnaissance of the ground under heavy machine-gun fire, and then led his men to the attack in a most gallant manner. Several times the attack was driven back by heavy machine-gun fire, which caused many casualties, but he gained and held his objective. His courage and fine leadership set a splendid example.

RHODES, STEPHEN, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when, in command of his battalion, he organized and successfully carried out a counter-attack. Throughout the whole operations he handled his men with great skill, and set a fine example of courage and endurance. The success of local operations was largely due to him.

SUMPTER, GEORGE, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. In the first position he took on the enemy with observed fire coming across the open, causing them very heavy casualties and checking their advance for three hours. During this time, by blowing it up twice, he prevented the enemy building a bridge. Four days later he took on with open sights the advancing enemy infantry and two 7.7 cm. guns. He knocked the first gun out with ten rounds, and soon after knocked the other out. Two days later again he took on an enemy battery in the open and knocked out the four guns. He did splendid service.

WOOD, HENRY GEORGE WESTMORLAND, Capt., Worcestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. Though originally detailed as a support company, he saw that the company he was supporting was held up, and immediately went forward and delivered three organized attacks on the enemy, leading his men with the greatest gallantry. He harassed the enemy continuously during the night, and when the successful advance took place early next morning he cleared a large portion of the front line and consolidated quickly. His company captured 100 prisoners and six machine guns.

CANADIAN FORCE.

DOUGHTY, EDWARD SPENCER, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of a battalion detailed to carry out a raid. A skilful reconnaissance was first made by him, regardless of personal danger; and chiefly owing to his instructions and careful training of each party, the raid was a complete success, many of the enemy being killed and 21 prisoners, three machine guns, and a trench mortar taken. His enthusiasm and energy inspired all ranks to do their utmost. He has previously done fine work.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

CORNISH, CYRIL RICHARD, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In command of a platoon during an attack he rushed two enemy machine guns, killing or capturing the crews, and using the guns in defence of his new position. In a counter-attack by the enemy he led his men in hand-to-hand fighting, and repulsed the attack. Later, the same evening, he led his platoon against an enemy strong point in "No Man's Land," killing many of the enemy and capturing several prisoners and three machine guns. He did splendid service, and set a magnificent example of courage and devotion to duty to his men.

CROMIE, GEORGE LENDRUM, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was severely wounded at the beginning of an attack, but carried on, and when his platoon was held up by machine-gun fire at about 80 yards' range, he rushed straight at the gun, killing all the crew and putting it out of action. He then took charge of the company, the commander having been hit, and worked hard at consolidating the position during the night, being again slightly wounded. Fearing a counter-attack, he refused to go to the regimental aid post, and remained on duty for 30 hours after being first hit.

CROUGHAN, JOHN PHILIP, Lieut., Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He was artillery forward observer, and went forward with the first wave of the infantry to the final objective, where he gave great assistance in reorganizing the infantry and consolidating the position. He also sent valuable information back to his headquarters, and throughout the day did valuable work in directing the supporting artillery fire. His courage, energy and ability were of great service.

DARNELL, AUBREY HUGH, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led the advance to the first objective and sent back important information regarding the progress of the attack. By his skilful handling of his company the position in his sector was gained with slight loss, and many prisoners taken.

ELLIOTT, LESLIE WILLIAM, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His company was detailed to form the right flank and get touch with the brigade. This was an enterprise of great importance and danger, and he was exposed to attack on three sides during the movement. Although slightly wounded early in the operations, he led his company with great dash and gallantry, and consolidated and held his position. Next day he successfully led part of his company against enemy positions, and at night linked up with the brigade. By his courage and initiative he successfully accomplished his difficult task.

GLASGOW, ROBERT, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He was early wounded, but led his men with great dash and ability, reached the first objective, and pushed on. During the consolidation of the ground captured he was of great service; and throughout he showed tactical ability, coolness and determination of a high order.

HARRIS, NORMAN CHARLES, M.C., Major, Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations which resulted in the capture of a village. Under his direction and supervision four bridges were made and thrown over a river under heavy shell fire. This largely contributed to the success of the attack. The coolness and determination of this officer were most marked.

MARPER, GEORGE, Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He led his company with great ability, and headed a rush on an enemy machine gun, shooting three of the enemy himself. He was wounded through the chest and arm, but remained to see the trench mopped up and his company advancing before handing over to his next in command. He showed fine courage and leadership.

REED, ALFRED EFFINGHAM, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion during an attack. After winning his objective he crawled out into No Man's Land, reconnoitred the ground, and pushed his line forward again. Next day he personally directed the mopping up of an enemy post, and under close range machine-gun fire supervised the consolidation of newly-won posts. He set a fine example to his command.

London Gazette, 5 Oct. 1918.—"Admiralty, 5 Oct. 1918.—Honours for Services in the Destroyer Action in the Adriatic on the Night of the 22nd-23rd April, 1918. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

ROBERTS, ARTHUR MILLINGTON, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. In command of one of H.M. Destroyers, engaged a very superior force of the enemy and put it to flight. He handled his ship with skill during a running fight lasting for nearly three hours.

PERSSE, DUDLEY FRANCIS, Lieut., R.N. In command of one of H.M. Destroyers, engaged the enemy, and after his ship had been heavily hit, and though he was himself severely wounded, only relinquished the command after bringing his ship safely into harbour.

"Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

HARTFORD, GEORGE BIBBY, Commander, R.N.

MACCABE, JOHN FRANCIS, Lieut., R.N.V.R.

"Honours for Miscellaneous Services."

(1.)

"The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

LOW, ERNEST EDWARD, Engineer-Commander, R.N.R.

SCOTT, ROBERT ALEXANDER, R.D., Engineer Lieut.-Commander (Acting Engineer-Commander), Royal Naval Reserve.

(2.)

"The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

LE PAGE, GEORGE WILFRED, Engineer Lieut.-Commander (Acting Engineer-Commander), R.N. In recognition of the valuable services rendered by him to the Allied cause in Russia since 1914.

"Additional Awards for Services in the Battle of Jutland on the 31st May, 1916.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following further award in addition to those announced in the London Gazette of the 15th Sept. 1916. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

WHITFIELD, PAUL, Lieut.-Commander (now Commander), R.N. (Prisoner of War interned in a neutral country). In command of H.M.S. Nomad, gallantly supported Nestor and Nicator in an attack on the enemy battle-cruisers. Nomad was badly hit and disabled during this attack, but later succeeded in sinking a disabled German destroyer, and finally fired all her torpedoes at the High Sea Fleet, waiting for the last moment before doing so, though the Nomad was sinking at the time.

London Gazette, 15 Oct. 1918.—"War Office, 15 Oct. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers and Warrant Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

MACDONALD, DONALD JOHN, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Canadian Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded the advance guard regiment of his brigade in an attack. He led his regiment with the greatest determination and with absolutely no regard for his own safety. It was largely due to his splendid leadership that the operation, which resulted in the capture of several miles of enemy territory and large numbers of prisoners and material, was entirely successful.

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

BARTON, CHARLES WALTER, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Northamptonshire Regt. and King's African Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry in leading his column and bold offensive against the enemy, whereby after a desperate fight at close quarters the enemy were beaten off with heavy casualties. In this action this officer was severely wounded for the third time in this campaign. His courage and coolness in action have always been a splendid example to the young native soldier.

(D.S.O. gazetted 27 Sept. 1901.)

COMBE, HERBERT, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Hussars. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership in an attack. This officer commanded the leading regiment of the brigade and handled it all day with marked courage, ability and dash. It was due to his quick grasp of the situation and determined action that the final objective was successfully reached by the brigade, despite the fact that the regiment was under considerable shell and machine-gun fire from both flanks. He did splendid service.

(D.S.O. gazetted 12 Feb. 1915.)

FURBER, CECIL TIDSWELL, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Own Scottish Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The untiring efforts and great ability with which this officer made his preparations for an attack largely contributed to the success of the operation. His gallantry and devotion to duty during the engagement were conspicuous, and when the objective had been gained he supervised the difficult work of consolidation, under heavy fire, with perfect coolness and disregard of danger, setting a fine example which greatly encouraged all ranks of his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 April, 1917.)

GRIFFITHS, ALEXANDER HARCOURT, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry and King's African Rifles. For most gallant and able leadership of his column. By his bold and prompt action when interposing his small force between the enemy rearguard and the main body he inflicted very heavy losses to the enemy in personnel and material.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 April, 1917.)

ING, GEORGE HAROLD ABELL, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During recent operations this officer was in command of the advance guard of the brigade. By riding close up to the attacking infantry and tanks he put himself well in touch with every phase of the advance, and was able to seize the exact moment when to pass through and beyond the infantry, to assist them and to exploit their success. He subsequently led his regiment most gallantly in their attack, capturing several hundred prisoners and many machine guns. He did splendid service.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 July, 1915.)

MENZIES, JOHN, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and ability as a battalion commander. The success gained by his battalion was largely due to his fine courage and leadership. In several instances, when the situation appeared to demand it, he went forward and personally encouraged his men to further advance.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

MILLER, GEORGE SWINEY, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Warwickshire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. The skill with which he made his plans, and his untiring devotion to duty in reconnoitring the position and training his men preparatory to an attack largely contributed to the success of the operation. When the objective was gained, his gallantry and admirable leadership, which had been conspicuous during the engagement, greatly cheered and encouraged his men during the difficult work of consolidation under heavy shell and machine-gun fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

NUTT, ALLAN VAUGHAN, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great skill and resource in making the arrangements preparatory to an attack, and displayed fine courage and leadership during the engagement. When the objectives had been won, with heavy losses to the enemy, he supervised the dispositions against a counter-attack and the consolidation of the captured positions with ability and conspicuous coolness under heavy fire, inspiring his men with great confidence by his example.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

TERROT, CHARLES RUSSELL, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Inniskilling Dragoons. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. When sent forward to exploit the infantry success, he led his regiment rapidly through the attacking waves and beyond the final objective. When checked by heavy machine-gun fire from a village, and unable to manoeuvre on account of wire, he dismounted and fought his way forward with two squadrons, so enabling his flank squadron to gallop round and operate to the rear of the village. Many enemy were killed, five guns and 700 prisoners captured, and the success of the operation was entirely due to the daring and splendid leadership of this officer.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

YOUNG, HERBERT NUGENT, D.S.O., Major, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. When the enemy, assisted by intense bombardment, had penetrated part of the defences, he went round the front line, found out the situation, and established liaison with other troops, which greatly assisted in the organization of the counter-attack. Shortly after, when his Commanding Officer was wounded, he took command and handled the battalion with great skill. His fine personal courage animated all ranks, and as all communication was broken, the battle was fought by the battalion on its own, Major Young having all the responsibility on his shoulders. He performed splendidly.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

McSHARRY, TERENCE PATRICK, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For great gallantry and decisive action during an attack. When the battalion was held up by an enemy strong point, which the artillery and tanks had missed, the situation for a time was critical, as the barrage was gradually moving onwards and the battalion was subjected to heavy machine-gun fire. He at once pushed on to the leading company, where his presence and prompt actions resulted in the capture of the position. When the final objective was gained he supervised the consolidation and reorganization under heavy machine-gun fire.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

BANKS, THOMAS MACDONALD, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. He led his battalion some 5,000 yards through thick fog and against heavy opposition to the final objective, withdrawing most skillfully to the first objective when almost surrounded by the enemy, and consolidating it. Two days later, when adjacent troops were finding difficulties in consolidating their positions, he personally led their outposts some 400 yards forward, and under heavy fire supervised consolidation. Throughout he set a fine example of cool courage to all ranks.

BINGHAM, THE HONOURABLE JOHN DENIS YELVERTON, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Hussars, attached Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and perseverance in supervising the assembly of tanks, which he successfully launched in an attack. He had previously reconnoitred the ground over which the tanks were going to operate, being out daily under all conditions of hostile shelling. He showed the utmost devotion to duty in an enterprise which was particularly successful.

BORTHWICK, EDWARD KERR, M.C., Temporary Capt., King's African Rifles. For most conspicuous gallantry in action. When an enemy maxim had been brought into action at 40 yards' range he seized the opportunity of a temporary stoppage of the gun, went out alone, shot the N.C.O. in charge, drove off the team, and captured the gun. Earlier in the day he had most gallantly assisted in an attack on the enemy's camp, and most skillfully covered the retirement when the enemy counter-attacked in superior numbers. He showed courage, determination and leadership of a high order.

BROWNING, CHARLES ERIC, Temporary Major, South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry in the field. In command of a rallying party he showed great coolness and initiative while directing the wire-cutting under heavy fire, and in plain view of the enemy, owing to their Very lights. He successfully took and occupied the enemy position, while another party went on to carry out a further operation, and finally covered the withdrawal of the latter with great skill. After being the last to leave the captured position, he returned some distance at great personal risk to search for some missing men. Throughout the operation his judgment, gallantry and resource were most marked.

CHAPPEL, WICKHAM FRITH, Major, Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and skilled leadership during an attack. He galloped his squadron and captured a wood, taking one officer and 24 other ranks prisoners, and capturing two heavy guns and four machine guns. The success of this masterly action greatly facilitated the further advance of squadrons on his left.

COBB, WILLIAM GRAHAME, M.B., Temporary Capt., Royal Army Medical Corps, attached King's African Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. For six hours, in the middle of a desperate fight at close quarters, he maintained his dressing station and attended the many wounded. Enemy's fire was coming from three directions, and the only cover was two ant-heaps. He frequently went forward to the firing line and brought in wounded at great personal risk. He undoubtedly saved many lives by his perseverance and determination, all the wounded being safely evacuated under the greatest difficulties.

FLEISCHER, SPENCER RICHARD, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), East Lancashire Regt., Special Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company against a strongly fortified position, which he captured in spite of determined resistance, inflicting severe casualties on the enemy, taking field guns, trench mortars, and large numbers of heavy and light machine guns. He personally rushed one of the guns that was delaying our advance. His capture of this important position undoubtedly made subsequent success possible.

FORDE, GORDON MILLER, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In company with another officer he crawled out about 400 yards from the front line under full observation from the enemy lines, and remained out about seven hours, making a most daring reconnaissance of the enemy's position, and gaining most valuable information, from which he organized a successful raid on the enemy's position. By his personal courage and coolness he set a splendid example to his battalion.

GARTSIDE, LIONEL, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Highland Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and ability to command. For two days he kept up continuous fire on enemy positions in a wood, finally establishing a formed line with his battalion and thereby enabling the right of the brigade to advance. Later, he most ably organized the defences of a new position, and as a result repelled a strong enemy attack. Throughout operations his untiring energy and fine leadership inspired all.

GILL, ROBERT HAWAR, Temporary Major, Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He was in command of his battalion, which was continuously attacked throughout the day. When the enemy penetrated the division on his left, he not only organized a defensive flank extending over 600 yards, but he was the means of enabling other troops to capture a large body of the enemy by cutting off their retreat. It was greatly due to his energy and splendid disregard of personal danger that his line was held intact.

GREENE, JOHN, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. Although his advanced dressing station was heavily shelled and gassed he continued at duty, encouraging all by his courage and resourcefulness. He worked continuously for 30 hours, visiting his bearers' posts under heavy shell fire, and only rested when all wounded had been evacuated. His magnificent devotion to duty saved many lives.

HARDYMAN, JOHN HAY MAITLAND, M.C., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Somersetshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After the enemy had penetrated the line in three places he went forward through a heavy barrage to the forward posts, rallied the garrison, and encouraged them by his coolness and absolute disregard of personal danger to successfully repel repeated enemy attacks extending over two days and three nights. Thanks to his gallant leadership and endurance, the position, which was of great tactical importance, was maintained.

HARTLEY, DONALD REGINALD CAVENDISH, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He first shot two of the enemy who tried to plant a flag on high ground in front of his battery position. Then withdrawing his detachments to the high ground behind, he and two other officers and four men took up a position with rifles, and kept up a steady fire for five hours on the enemy, who were on the high ground in front of the battery. By this action he materially helped to check the enemy's advance and prevented them from entering his battery position. He showed fine courage, initiative and resource, and retained all his guns undamaged.

HORSLEY, BERNARD HILL, M.C., Temporary Capt., King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty and dashing leadership. During a counter-attack by his company he led a bombing party along the trench, killing many of the enemy and bombing them in dug-outs with such determination that they soon began to surrender. He eventually cleared 300 yards of trench and joined up with other troops. His company altogether captured over 100 prisoners, including six officers, and took six machine guns, three of which were immediately put in action against the enemy. It was greatly owing to his perfect handling of his company throughout that the counter-attack was a complete success. He performed magnificent service.

HUNTER, JAMES WILLIAM, Temporary Capt., Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He was in command of a company and held his trench, though his left flank was absolutely exposed, against all attacks throughout the day. Both during the preliminary enemy bombardment and in the hand-to-hand fighting he set a very fine example of courage and coolness to his company.

JAMESON, FRANK ROBERT WORDSWORTH, M.C., Temporary Lieut., Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of the brigade signal section during an enemy attack. Under heavy shell fire he superintended the placing under cover of the equipment and personnel. He then went out with his linesmen to repair communications with both front-line battalions. All day long he kept going round his various lines under heavy fire, and it was entirely due to his courage and energy that communication was maintained for certain periods.

JOHNSON, HENRY HOWARD, Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Sussex Regt., attached Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a long and arduous day's fighting he followed the tanks, of which he was in command, on foot, running from one to the other, directing their operations with the greatest success. He was indefatigable in his efforts, and by his personal reconnaissance of different points was enabled to manoeuvre his tanks in such a manner as to break down the resistance of machine guns which were holding up the infantry advance. During the whole day he was exposed to the heavy fire of artillery and machine guns, and his devotion to duty was the admiration of all who saw him.

KAY, JACK KILBOURNE, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal West Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was commanding the battalion, previous to and during an important attack by our troops, and the skill and ability with which he made the preparatory arrangements were no less marked than his gallantry and soldierly bearing during the engagement.

When the objectives had been gained, hearing that the two senior officers and a large number of men of his left company had become casualties, he immediately went to the spot, and by his coolness and cheerful example of courage inspired the men with his own resolution.

McMILLAN, ANGUS, M.C. (surname corrected to Macmillan), Lieut., Seaforth Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He led his company with great dash, and personally cleared up many obstacles. When the objective was gained he organized parties to deal with machine-gun nests in the houses, and surrounded a château, capturing two officers and 100 men before being forced to withdraw. Later, in order to extricate his garrison from a tight place, he went forward and shot the leading gunner of an enemy machine gun and scattered the remainder of the team with bombs. His courage and skill throughout were an inspiration to all ranks.

MILLAR, JOHN, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, and ability as a battalion commander during an attack. Learning that there was a gap between his battalion and the brigade on his right, he went forward and personally diverted one of his companies to fill this in. By this manoeuvre he succeeded in capturing a large number of the enemy. The success of the battalion was largely due to his fine example of gallantry and good leadership.

MORRISON, WILLIAM, M.C., D.C.M., Capt. (Acting Major), Gordon Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, and fine leadership, particularly on two occasions when he commanded his battalion with marked ability, enabling them to hold their objective in face of heavy shell-fire. Throughout the operations he showed himself to be a most able and determined commander.

PALMER, RICHARD LODGE, M.C., Major, Royal Artillery. During an attack this officer was in close touch with the brigade commander throughout the operations and manoeuvred his battery with the greatest skill. The assistance rendered by his battery to the movements of the brigade were invaluable. Two enemy counter-attacks were stopped, largely as a result of his handling. His quickness in action and clear appreciation of further movement were excellent.

PRIDIE, ERIC DENHOLM, Temporary Capt., Royal Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, and initiative in action. When an attack was held up by a machine gun at close range he led forward a party of men across the open, under heavy fire, and by his most gallant action succeeded in capturing an officer, 12 men and the machine gun. Later, with a revolver in each hand, he again advanced and killed and wounded several of the enemy, causing others to surrender. He behaved magnificently.

ROBINSON, DAVID LUBBOCK, Temporary Capt., Tank Corps (Lieut., Royal Marines). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in charge of two sections of Tanks, which he manoeuvred on foot during a long and arduous day's fighting, with the greatest effect and success. He was quite regardless of his own safety, always well ahead of the infantry, though exposed to the heaviest artillery and machine-gun fire. He undoubtedly saved the infantry many casualties by the way he directed his Tanks to the destruction of machine-gun groups, and his example throughout the day was the admiration of all who saw him.

SMITH, HENRY, Lieut., East Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He advanced his company in daylight, and without artillery preparation, some 500 yards, capturing a new line and taking prisoner one officer, 60 other ranks and four machine guns. He assisted in the capture of strong points and sent back under heavy shell and machine-gun fire most accurate information, which enabled close liaison to be maintained with the flanks. Through his resolution and ability the operation was completely successful, with unusually few casualties.

SPARROW, RICHARD, C.M.G., Lieut.-Colonel, Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry during an advance. Throughout the day he showed the greatest dash and initiative in leading his regiment. His quick appreciation of the situation and the realization of the tactical requirements contributed largely to the success of the operations. Under heavy fire his decisions were masterly and decisive, and showed the qualities of a brilliant leader.

STERLING, GEORGE POMEROY, M.C., Temporary Capt., Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy attack. He was in command of a company, and held his trenches against all attacks throughout the day. On one occasion when the enemy momentarily entered a part of his trenches he led a party and immediately drove them out, killing seven and capturing four. By his courage and coolness he set a very fine example to his company.

TARLETON, FRANCIS ROYLAND, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry, resource and skill as a battalion commander. On more than one occasion when the situation appeared to be uncertain and the advance threatened he personally went forward and led his battalion on. The success of his battalion was largely due to his bold and capable leadership.

WALKER, THOMAS MATHEWSON, Major, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He fought his battery magnificently through an intense bombardment of seven or eight hours. He had two guns knocked out and had 12 casualties among his detachments. Though the battery position was heavily gassed he kept his guns shooting all day. When at the Observation Post he sent in most valuable information, which was of the greatest assistance. He behaved splendidly.

WAUHOPE, GEORGE BOOTHBY, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), York and Lancaster Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of his battalion when making a surprise night attack, the successful result of which was due to the skill and resource with which this officer supervised every detail of preparation. The objectives were captured exactly according to programme, and the casualties of the enemy were heavy, both in men and guns. He supervised the process of consolidation with great coolness and disregard of danger under heavy fire, and his example throughout had a fine and inspiring effect on his men.

WIENHOLT, ARNOLD, M.C., Capt., East African Force. For continuous gallant conduct and endurance under most trying circumstances during a period of six months in the bush. He performed a most arduous march, during which his party were more than once attacked by superior enemy forces, through the unknown country which he had to reconnoitre and report on; and finally succeeded in gaining touch with a column as ordered. He performed many other successful reconnaissances during which he had several encounters with the enemy, and furnished valuable information with regard to their movements. Throughout he showed great courage and endurance, and rendered most valuable service.

WINTERBOTTOM, ARCHIBALD DICKSON, Capt., Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and dash in an attack. This officer led his squadron over a most difficult country with the greatest skill and ability. He judged the pace for a four-mile gallop to a nicety, disregarded all rifle and machine-gun fire, made straight for his objective, and rode over several hundred of the enemy, killing a good number and subsequently making the rest prisoners. Later in the day, he took command of the regiment when his commanding officer was wounded, and carried out his duties most successfully. He did brilliantly.

CANADIAN FORCE.

PYMAN, COLIN KEITH LEE, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in charge of a raiding party of considerable importance, and the success of the operation was largely due to the thorough manner in which he had thought out and supervised every detail beforehand. He directed the operations with a courage and complete disregard of danger that inspired the greatest confidence in the officers and men under his command.

TORRANCE, PERCIVAL VICTOR, Major, Cavalry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded the advanced squadron of the regiment during an attack. His great dash and determination enabled the regiment to capture more than 180 prisoners, several guns, and many machine guns, and to attain its objective. His conduct throughout the day was splendid, and his gallant leadership greatly inspired those under him.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

DAWSON, FORBES CAMPBELL, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and a fine display of tactical skill during an attack over difficult ground covered with undergrowth and deep shell-holes, many of which the enemy had turned into machine-gun posts. He mopped up each post and secured his objective, accounting for 50 killed, 30 prisoners and 10 machine guns. Though wounded he remained at duty for 46 hours. All the captured guns were at once mounted, turned on the enemy, and kept in action during the fight, materially assisting in repelling enemy counter-attacks.

LYNAS, WILLIAM JAMES DALTON, M.C., Capt., Infantry. For remarkable courage and leadership during an attack. He supervised the placing of the men on the "jumping off" line, and though wounded in two places just after zero, he nevertheless led his company to the assault. He was then again wounded, but refused to go back until the position was taken. Of seven machine guns and four trench mortars captured by his company, he took several himself, and personally inflicted many casualties on the enemy.

McLEISH, ROY STANLEY, Major, Mounted Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great courage and initiative in carrying out the difficult task of reconnoitring in front of the Infantry and holding a forward position until relieved. In this and subsequent operations his fine leadership and sound judgment were conspicuous.

MINCHIN, JAMES BASIL, M.C., Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuously gallant conduct during an attack. He led his platoon on the first enemy positions and personally killed one officer and several other men, capturing in all one officer, 20 other ranks, one machine gun and one heavy minenwerfer. In his advance he next rushed a machine-gun nest, killing six of the enemy (two of whom he accounted for personally), and capturing the balance of the crews and the guns. Then, discovering his company commander had been killed, he assumed command and brilliantly completed the task assigned to the company.

London Gazette, 29 Oct. 1918.—"War Office, 29 Oct. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for distinguished service in connection with military operations in Egypt and the Sudan. Dated 3 June, 1918. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

BUTLER, THE HONOURABLE THEOBALD PATRICK PROBYN, Major, Royal Artillery, employed Egyptian Army.

GRAHAM, CLAUDE, Major, Northamptonshire Regt., attached Egyptian Army
MARSHALL, CLAUD COLTART, Major, Royal Lancaster Regt., employed Egyptian Army.

PATTISON, JOHN HILL, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Essex Regt., employed Egyptian Army.

STUART, WILLIAM, Lieut., Yeomanry and Machine Gun Corps.

London Gazette, 29 Oct. 1918.—"Admiralty, 29 Oct. 1918.—Honours for Services in Submarines. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

LAYARD, BROWNLOW VILLIERS, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

DARKE, REGINALD BURNARD, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

BOWER, JOHN GRAHAM, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

"Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

NOAKES, CYRIL JOHN LANGHAM, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

London Gazette, 2 Nov. 1918.—"Air Ministry, 2 Nov. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the undermentioned rewards on Officers of the Royal Air Force, in recognition of gallantry in flying operations against the enemy. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BARKER, WILLIAM GEORGE, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major). A highly distinguished patrol leader whose courage, resource and determination has set a fine example to those around him. Up to the 20th July, 1918, he had destroyed 33 enemy aircraft—21 of these since the date of the last award (Second Bar to the Military Cross) was conferred on him. Major Barker has frequently led formations against greatly superior numbers of the enemy with conspicuous success.

(M.C. gazetted 10 Jan. 1917.)

(First Bar gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

(Second Bar gazetted 16 Sept. 1918.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

PROCTOR, ANDREW WEATHERBY BEAUCHAMP, M.C., D.F.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.). A fighting pilot of great skill, and a splendid leader. He rendered brilliant service on the 22nd Aug., when his flight was detailed to neutralize hostile balloons. Having shot down one balloon in flames, he attacked the occupants of five others in succession with machine-gun fire, compelling the occupants in each case to take to parachutes. He then drove down another balloon to within 50 feet of the ground, when it burst into flames. In all he has accounted for 33 enemy machines and seven balloons.

(M.C. gazetted 22 June, 1918.)

(D.F.C. gazetted 2 July, 1918.)

BURDEN, HENRY JOHN, D.F.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.) (Canadian Forestry Corps). Since joining his squadron in charge this officer has accounted for 17 enemy machines—12 crashed, two driven down out of control and three destroyed in flames on the ground during an attack on an aerodrome. On the morning of the 10th Aug. he led his patrol in three attacks, and himself destroyed three enemy machines. In the evening of the same day he destroyed two more. Two days later he attacked a large number of Fokkers, seven of which were destroyed, accounting for three himself. In this encounter Capt. Burden led his patrol with exceptional skill and daring.

(The award of D.F.C. is also announced in this Gazette.)

CLAXTON, WILLIAM GORDON, D.F.C., Lieut. Between 4 July and 12 Aug. this officer destroyed ten enemy aeroplanes and one kite balloon, making in all 30 machines and one kite balloon to his credit. Untiring in attack in the air or on the ground, this officer has rendered brilliant service.

(D.F.C. gazetted 3 Aug. 1918.)

(Bar to D.F.C. gazetted 21 Sept. 1918.)

COBBY, ARTHUR HENRY, D.F.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.) (Australian Flying Corps). On the 16th Aug. this officer led an organized raid on an enemy aerodrome. At 200 feet altitude he obtained direct hits with his bombs, and set on fire two hangars; he then opened fire on a machine which was standing out on the aerodrome. The machine caught fire. Afterwards he attacked with machine-gun fire parties of troops and mechanics, inflicting a number of casualties. On the following day he led another important raid on an aerodrome, setting fire to two hangars and effectively bombing gun detachments, anti-aircraft batteries, etc. The success of these two raids was largely due to the determined and skilful leadership of this officer.

(D.F.C. gazetted 3 Aug. 1918.)

CULLEY, STUART DOUGLAS, Lieut. (Sea Patrol). Ascended to a height of 19,000 feet, at which altitude he attacked an enemy airship, and brought it down in flames completely destroyed. This was a most difficult undertaking, involving great personal risk, and the highest praise is due to Lieut. Culley for the gallantry and skill which he displayed.

DODWELL, THOMAS BRIERLEY, Second Lieut. On a recent occasion this officer, when acting as Observer, performed a very gallant and meritorious action. In diving to the assistance of another machine, his own machine commenced to fall out of control. Despite this he continued to engage three enemy machines that were attacking him, and eventually drove them off, an operation that called for great coolness and skill, as the shooting platform was most unsteady. Realizing that the machine was out of control, owing to the loss of lift in the tail plane, half of this being shot away, he left his cockpit, and climbing along the wing, lay down along the cowl, in front of the pilot, enabling the latter to obtain partial control of the machine and head for home. When nearing the ground he climbed back into his cockpit, to allow the nose to rise, and the pilot succeeded in safely landing. The presence of mind and cool courage of this officer undoubtedly saved the machine, and deserves the highest praise.

HOWELL, CEDRIC ERNEST, M.C., D.F.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.). This officer recently attacked, in company with one other machine, an enemy formation of 15 aeroplanes, and succeeded in destroying four of them and bringing one down out of control. Two days afterwards he destroyed another enemy machine, which fell in our lines, and on the following day he led three machines against 16 enemy scouts, destroying two of them. Capt. Howell is a very gallant and determined fighter, who takes no account of the enemy's superior number in his battles.

(M.C. gazetted 16 Sept. 1918.)

(D.F.C. gazetted 21 Sept. 1918.)

JONES, JAMES IRA THOMAS, M.C., D.F.C., M.M., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.). Since joining his present brigade in May last, this officer has destroyed 28 enemy machines. He combines skilful tactics and marksmanship with high courage. While engaged on wireless interception duty he followed a patrol of nine Fokker biplanes, and succeeded in joining their formation unobserved. After a while two Fokkers left the formation to attack one of our artillery observation machines. Following them, Capt. Jones engaged the higher of the two, which fell on its companion, and both machines fell interlocked in flames.

(M.C. gazetted 16 Sept. 1918.)

(D.F.C. gazetted 3 Aug. 1918.)

(M.M. gazetted 10 Aug. 1916.)

WHISTLER, ALFRED HAROLD, D.F.C., Capt., Dorset Regt. During recent operations this officer has rendered exceptionally brilliant service in attacking enemy aircraft and troops on the ground. On 9 Aug. he dropped four bombs on a hostile battery, engaged and threw into confusion a body of troops, and drove down a hostile balloon, returning to his aerodrome after a patrol of one and a half hours' duration with a most valuable report. He has in all destroyed ten aircraft and driven down five others out of control.

(D.F.C. gazetted 2 July, 1918.)

London Gazette, 7 Nov. 1918.—"War Office, 7 Nov. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BENSON, CHARLES BINGLEY, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, London Regt. (Major, Reserve of Officers, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry). For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. When his battalion was held up by heavy machine-gun fire, he led them with great skill and ability, and reached the objective in spite of the enemy's resistance. Though wounded, he remained in the front line until the position had been consolidated. He rejoined the battalion after having had his wound dressed, remaining with them until relieved. He set a fine example of devotion to duty and endurance.

FINDLAY, JAMES MARSHALL, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and skill in handling his battalion during an attack. He took charge of the firing line, which was composed of other units besides his own, and constantly moved up and down, under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire. It was largely due to his inspiring example that the advance was kept going.

(D.S.O. gazetted 11 April, 1918.)

HART, LEONARD HERBERT POCOCK, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. He planned and supervised all the preliminary details of an attack. Under great difficulties of darkness and the intricacies of a thick forest he brought up his battalion to the exact position from which the advance was to be made, though at first he was led to the wrong spot. During the engagement that ensued he set a splendid example to all ranks by his coolness and composure under heavy fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

KING, DENNIS MALCOLM, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership in organizing three successful raids and compelling the enemy to withdraw from an outpost line overlooking our front line. Valuable identifications were obtained, 22 prisoners were taken, and many of the enemy killed. He showed the greatest energy and ability in preparing these raids, and in the raids themselves set a splendid example of courage and determination.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

LAWRENCE, HERVEY MAJOR, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Scottish Rifles. He set a magnificent example of leadership and courage in an attack. When both his flanks were held up and he was suffering from wounds in the side and arm, he led his battalion forward in the face of heavy rifle and machine-gun fire and advanced the line 1,000 yards. He held the captured position against great odds. His personal influence had the most inspiring effect on officers and men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

MCQUEEN, NORMAN, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Major), Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (Special Reserve). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an advance. When checked by heavy fire he, by his quick initiative and fearless leading, enabled the advance to continue. Throughout the operations he was always where he was most needed, and his untiring energy, cheerfulness, and personal courage had a most inspiring effect on the battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

OGLBY, ROBERT JAMES LESLIE, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Reserve of Officers, attached London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during an advance. He set a particularly fine example of energy and fearlessness to his men at a critical time. During consolidation, when the situation on the right was obscure, he made a valuable personal reconnaissance, causing him to alter his dispositions and effectually withstand all counter-attacks. He did very fine work.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

SMELTZER, ARTHUR SIDNEY, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership in an attack. Hearing that the operation was postponed, he personally went forward and skillfully withdrew two of his companies, who had already engaged the enemy, to assembly positions from which they attacked successfully later in the day. On the objectives being reached he superintended consolidation, taking command at a critical period of one company who had lost all their officers. It was due to his energy, courage, and inspiring example that the premature advance did not prevent the success of the attack.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

TAYLOR, GEORGE PRITCHARD, D.S.O., M.C., M.B., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in arranging for clearing the wounded in the forward area during an attack. He personally reconnoitred the whole area and arranged relay posts for the bearers, freely exposing himself in the front line to heavy fire while searching for wounded. Throughout the operations the wounded, thanks to his splendid zeal and devotion to duty, were cleared with remarkable rapidity.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

WEST, RICHARD ANNESLEY, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), North Irish Horse (Special Reserve), attached Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. In addition to directing his Tanks, he rallied and led forward small bodies of infantry lost in the mist, showing throughout a splendid example of leadership and a total disregard of personal safety, and materially contributed to the success of the operations. He commanded the battalion most of the time, his C.O. being early killed.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

CAREY, ALFRED BLAKE, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership. When his battalion was held up by intense machine-gun fire in front of a village, he organized a party from his reserve company and, under cover of the smoke from a derelict tank that was on fire, he personally led the party and rushed a wood, capturing 16 machine guns, and routed the enemy, who retired on a broad front. He then pushed on his battalion and took the village with a rush. His example of personal gallantry, and his quick appreciation of the situation and rapid action, enabled this important result to be so successfully obtained.

(D.S.O. gazetted 16 Aug. 1917.)

CRAWFORD, IAN LAURIE, D.S.O., Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership during an attack. He personally reconnoitred the whole area the battalion was taking up before launching the attack, making his dispositions most skillfully. In the attack he led his battalion with great gallantry, and his fine example of courage and cheerfulness did much to ensure the success of the operation.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

GILSON, WILLIAM FORBES, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative. He was in command of his battalion in an attack, during which he pushed forward with great determination, though the situation with regard to support was somewhat involved. His skill in directing the operations, and his fine example of courage and resource largely contributed to the success with which the battalion reached the objective.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Oct. 1917.)

HARBOTTLE, COLIN CLARK, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership. When the advance of the battalion was held up by heavy machine-gun fire, he went to the front at once, and, working forward himself, carried on some of his flank company with him. Eventually these were forced to the ground by the intense fire of the enemy, but he continued to gain ground, by rolling forward, his men following his example till they got sufficiently close to rush the guns. On his signal this was accomplished with complete success, and the enemy wavered, and our advance continued along the whole line. The fine example of personal gallantry and determination displayed by Lieut.-Colonel Harbottle at a critical time enabled this most successful result to be obtained.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

MACDONALD, ERIC WHIDDEN, D.S.O., M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and resource. He commanded his battalion in an advance, pressing his attack with skill and determination over a considerable amount of open ground, to the capture of isolated woods, the edges of which were full of concealed machine guns. The ability with which he made his dispositions undoubtedly saved many casualties. He set a very fine example to his men which greatly helped in the success obtained.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

MCQUAIG, GEORGE ERIC, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership during an attack. Through heavy mist he led his battalion nearly three miles to the final objective. He showed great courage and ability, personally leading and directing the assault and capturing a large number of prisoners and guns. He did splendid work.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

WALKER, WILLIAM KEATING, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and skill. He commanded a mixed force composed of motor machine guns, a company of cyclists and a trench mortar detachment, which he handled with boldness and ability, destroying several machine-gun nests and capturing strong points. He inspired his men by his example of personal courage and daring, and contributed to the success of the advance.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Jan. 1918.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

MCARTHUR, JOHN, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry while commanding his battalion during an attack. He preceded the battalion to the jumping-off line, and under very heavy fire issued final instructions to the companies. When the advance was temporarily checked he went forward and personally conducted operations, being severely wounded while doing so. It was largely due to his splendid leadership and fine initiative that the battalion reached all its objectives.

WILDER-NELIGAN, MAURICE, C.M.G., D.S.O., D.C.M., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry in a night attack on a village. Owing to his skill and courage, the plan of enveloping the village was successfully carried out, resulting in the capture of 200 prisoners and 30 machine guns. The attacking force suffered less than 20 casualties.

To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order :

ATKINSON, GEORGE PRESTAGE, M.C., Capt., North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership in action. When the commanding officer was killed, he rallied and led forward the battalion, until hostile barages and a vigorous counter-attack forced him to withdraw. Later, he headed an assault and captured an important hill, where, in spite of being wounded through the leg, he remained at duty supervising the consolidation, never leaving the extreme front line until the whole position was safe. Throughout operations his courage in the very front of the battle ensured the success of the battalion.

BASTOW, HAROLD VERMUDEN, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion, which was new to the particular conditions of warfare they encountered, in a successful attack, which was brilliantly carried through to the objective under heavy machine-gun fire, in spite of the flank being entirely exposed. The spirit and fighting quality shown by all ranks of the battalion was largely due to the fine example he has always shown of personal courage and able leadership.

CAMPBELL, EDWARD FITZGERALD, Capt. (Acting Major), King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. Having only just taken over the line, he reorganized the defence and defeated a strong counter-attack. Though severely wounded in the bombardment that preceded the enemy's advance, he continued to direct operations for five hours until the line was secure, and it was largely owing to his able dispositions and the valuable information he transmitted to brigade headquarters that the position was maintained. His courage and endurance were conspicuous examples to all ranks throughout the engagement.

CHAYTOR, CLERVAUX ALEXANDER, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. He commanded his battalion with great success during prolonged operations, though he had very few company commanders, and the country, which there was little time to reconnoitre, was most intricate. He was constantly up among his men, supervising the dispositions under heavy machine-gun and shell fire with a courage and composure that inspired great confidence.

COCKHILL, JOHN BATES, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. He cleared the flank of a wood with his company, in spite of the strongest opposition, capturing three successive positions that were held with determination, and securing over 100 prisoners and 20 machine guns. On reaching the final objective he was cut off by the enemy, but fought his way back with great skill and determination. He set a splendid example to his men throughout the engagement.

COLT, HENRY ARCHER, M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Gloucestershire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership. He commanded his battalion during three days' severe fighting, including the capture of an important village, with very great ability and courage. In spite of heavy casualties he pushed forward to his successive objectives with great determination, being himself severely wounded when leading the final assault on the village. His example greatly inspired his men.

COMBE, HENRY CHRISTIAN SEYMOUR, Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Horse Guards, attached Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry while in command of a company of 14 tanks. He carried out an operation which was extremely difficult owing to the nature of the ground, deployed his tanks and supervised their movements under very heavy shell fire. Throughout the engagement he kept in the closest touch with his tanks, his coolness and judgment being the direct means of enabling the infantry with whom he was working to reach their objectives with very few casualties.

COULSON, RICHARD NIVEN, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and determination while commanding his battalion during an attack, when there was great difficulty in maintaining direction owing to fog and smoke barrage. On the advance being checked he went forward and reorganized his own firing line and that of units on his flank. Continuously under heavy fire, his personal example had a marked effect on the men.

CRAGG, WILLIAM GILLIAT, Temporary Major, North Lancashire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability when in command of a company. He handled his men with great dash under heavy fire, and by his skillful dispositions enabled two guns and two machine guns to be captured with trifling loss. He pushed forward the attack with determined courage, and rapidly obtained all objectives.

DAWSON, FRED, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative in handling a section of four tanks, with which he crossed two miles of open country under heavy fire. He directed operations during the clearing of a village, and when the right flank was exposed he took one tank and a platoon of infantry and captured the village.

ENGLAND, NORMAN AYRTON, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer has commanded his battalion with marked success during severe fighting, which culminated in the brilliant assault and capture of an important enemy position. The spirit and dash shown by all ranks of the battalion has been largely due to the fine example he has continually set them.

FORBES, ROBERT, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), Royal Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He rallied and directed men in thick fog under heavy fire, encouraging them by his personal example; and on reaching the final objective he obtained valuable information by a daring reconnaissance. When it became necessary to evacuate the objective he displayed great courage and skill in getting the men away under heavy fire. He behaved splendidly throughout.

HAMPSON, GEOFFREY, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership with his tanks in action. He was of the utmost assistance to the infantry and when the cavalry were held up at a wood he cleared it of the enemy and pushed on. He went from tank to tank giving orders and showed an entire disregard for his own safety.

HAYFIELD, CYRIL DUDENEY, M.C., Temporary Capt., East Kent Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership during an attack. He was lent to another battalion to form them up for attack, and did so with the greatest ability. Later, when the officer commanding was killed, he led them most gallantly to the final objective and consolidated his position. His courage and initiative greatly inspired his men.

HONYWILL, ALBERT JOHN, M.C., Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Devonshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry, skill and ability. He handled his company with great skill in face of heavy machine-gun fire, and captured two machine guns which were holding up our advance. Later in the day he advanced with considerable tactical ability and captured 200 prisoners. He was later wounded in the capture of a village, in which he materially assisted. Throughout the action his coolness and good judgment were remarkable and worthy of great praise.

JOHNSTON, CHARLES EVELYN, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Under heavy machine-gun fire he personally reorganized his own battalion and stragglers from other units, and when all his officers had become casualties he went forward himself and dealt with the remaining nests of enemy machine guns. He displayed great coolness and composure under intense fire and his example had an excellent effect on his men.

JOHNS, WHITFIELD GLANVILLE, Temporary Major, King's Royal Rifles Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership while commanding the battalion during an attack after the C.O. had been wounded. Having consolidated the positions gained he carried out a valuable reconnaissance under heavy fire. The information thus gained was largely responsible for the further advance undertaken and the ultimate capture of an important position.

LAMBERTON, CLAUD, Capt., Yeomanry, attached Royal Scots Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He led his company forward with the greatest dash, taking all objectives together with 23 prisoners and six machine guns. Throughout he showed complete disregard for his personal safety, and by his example inspired his men to accomplish a task which upset the enemy's plans.

MOIR, HOWARD LAWNPDES, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Cheshire Regt. For great gallantry and skill in handling his battalion under the most trying circumstances. On one occasion, although wounded in the side, he remained in command and was continuously under heavy fire, encouraging his men and supervising their movements. Later, he contributed largely to the success of operations by his courageous leadership.

MOSTYN-OWEN, ROGER ARTHUR, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership during operations. After capturing and consolidating the objective he went forward and made a personal reconnaissance under heavy shell and machine-gun fire. He then led his battalion with great dash and captured the line of the railway. Later, it was largely owing to his determined and skilful handling of the battalion in an out-flanking movement that a village was successfully occupied.

PARGITER, LAWRENCE LEWIN, Capt. (Temporary Major and Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous courage and able leadership during operations. The brilliant way in which he handled his battalion during an attack under trying circumstances resulted in the capture of the objective. The quick consolidation and reorganization of his force enabled a vigorous counter-attack to be repulsed and a defensive flank to be formed at a critical period.

RYCROFT, ALFRED RICHARD HUGH, Major, Yeomanry, attached Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. He led the company of Tanks, of which he was in command, on horseback, and was responsible for the capture of several batteries of artillery. He showed great ability as a leader, and by the example of his personal courage did much to ensure the success gained by his company.

TURNER, JOHN ROBERT, Major, Royal Scots Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and skill. He commanded his battalion in an attack on an important village, which was captured with a minimum of casualties. This result was due largely to his admirable preliminary arrangements and to the ability and coolness with which he directed the operations from a forward position, under heavy fire. He set a splendid example of courage and composure to all ranks of the battalion.

CANADIAN FORCE.

CHRISTIE, WILLIAM DAVIDSON CAIRNS, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative when his company was held up by machine-gun fire. He got a Lewis gun and some 15 men from company headquarters, and led a charge, resulting in the capture of two machine guns and 40 prisoners. Again, later, he twice cleared machine-gun posts, capturing as many as seven guns. His dash and courage were splendid, and the brilliant service rendered by his small party was due to his magnificent example.

JENNINGS, DOUGLAS CECIL, Major, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He accompanied the leading Tank of a section to guide the section to its final objective. Later, he went forward and located the positions of enemy machine guns which were causing heavy casualties. Throughout the battle he displayed great courage and devotion to duty.

SAUNDERS, ALEC LAWRENCE, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), Infantry, Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership. He assumed command of the battalion under difficult circumstances, the commanding officer being killed and the battalion having suffered heavy casualties in officers and men. In spite of adverse conditions he pushed forward, in the face of heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, and captured and consolidated the objective. His personal courage and cheerful determination were splendid examples to his men, and largely contributed to the success of the operation.

SCOTT, REV. CANON FREDERICK GEORGE, C.M.G. (Honorary Lieut.-Colonel), Canadian Chaplains' Service. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He attended to the wounded under heavy fire, and by his cool and confident manner was a source of encouragement to the men when they were suffering heavy casualties. He behaved nobly, and helped to save many lives.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

BURKE, FRANCIS JOSEPH, Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He led his platoon with great dash, single-handed rushing a mine-werfer and killing the crew. With a party of six he then took a machine-gun post, capturing the gun and the garrison of eight men. Next, with his platoon, he rushed and captured two field guns, killing four of the crew and capturing 12. After reaching the final objective he went forward with one man and killed four of the enemy. Throughout the operation his courage, determination and leadership were a magnificent example to all.

CHALMERS, FREDERICK ROYDEN, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He filled a dangerous gap between his flank and the next battalion by organizing and leading forward his staff of signallers and runners, capturing several prisoners, of whom he himself took three. Under very heavy fire he then pushed on ahead of the objective, and seized a most advantageous position, from which he made a valuable reconnaissance of nearly a mile of the newly-captured front. His initiative and personal courage were a splendid inspiration to his battalion.

DAVIS, CLAPTON EDGINTON, M.C., Lieut., Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He led his own company and another with splendid dash, and took a position of great importance to the advance. His devotion to duty and absolute fearlessness won the admiration of all ranks, and his brilliant work and example materially assisted in the success of the operation.

LE MESSURIER, FREDERICK NEILL, Major, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was continuously in the front line during both stages of an attack, assisting in collecting and arranging for the prompt disposal of the wounded to the rear. He behaved splendidly, and by his untiring efforts and a complete disregard of his own safety he greatly assisted the brigade throughout.

MARTHUR, JOHN, Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. Having personally supervised all preliminary arrangements, he carried out a night attack on the enemy's well-organized trench lines, which was entirely successful. He remained at work for 48 hours, showing a splendid example of courage and devotion to duty which inspired all ranks of the battalion.

PERRY, STANLEY LLEWELLYN, M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an advance. Though early wounded, he refused to leave, and successfully commanded and controlled the capture of the final objective, afterwards directing consolidation and placing the line in a defensive condition. His gallant conduct inspired all ranks.

WILSON, ARTHUR MITCHELL, Lieut.-Colonel, Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack, while in charge of bearer divisions. He followed close on the heels of the Infantry into captured villages, establishing bearer posts, and effected the evacuation of the wounded with remarkable rapidity. He worked splendidly throughout, and by his untiring devotion to duty saved a number of lives.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

FARR, THOMAS, M.C., Major, Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Under the very heavy shell fire that the enemy were directing on his battery, he walked up and down behind the guns, encouraging his men and directing their fire with the greatest coolness and composure. He set a splendid example which greatly helped the excellent discipline of his men.

HARGEST, JAMES, M.C., Major, Otago Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an advance. He commanded his battalion with marked ability. His tactical dispositions were excellent, and he secured and forwarded valuable information. Constantly in the front trenches he inspired all ranks with the keenest offensive spirit, and the uninterrupted success of the battalion operations was largely due to his fine personal leadership.

London Gazette, 29 Nov. 1918.—"Admiralty, 29 Nov. 1918.—Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to Officers for services in action with enemy submarines. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

NASH, GEOFFREY STEWART FLEETWOOD, Lieut.-Commander (now Commander), R.N.

WHITE, CHARLES EVARARD HUGHES, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

CAMERON, GORDON McLEOD, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

PLATT, FRANCIS CUTHBERT, Lieut.-Commander, R.N.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

PAGE, GEORGE FRANCIS LYON LABOUEVERIE, D.S.O., Lieut.-Commander, Royal Navy.

PHILLIPS, PHILIP ESMONDE, D.S.O., Lieut.-Commander, Royal Navy.

"Honours for Operations off Terschelling on the 11th Aug. 1918.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour . . . to the undermentioned Officers of Coastal Motor Boats, in recognition of their gallantry during a reconnaissance of the West Frisian coast on the 11th Aug. 1918. (Included in award) To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

COKE, ANTHONY LAUNCELOT HENRY DEAN, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. During the course of the operation the Coastal Motor Boats were attacked by hostile aircraft, and, although greatly outnumbered, succeeded in bringing down two enemy aircraft. Lieut.-Commander Coke, who was Senior Officer of the flotilla, showed great determination, gallantry and courage in continuing his reconnaissance in spite of the presence of the enemy. The Coastal Motor Boats led by Lieut.-Commander Coke fought a very gallant action against superior odds, and continued to do so until all their ammunition was expended or their Lewis guns rendered useless by jamming.

"Additional Award for Services in the Action in the Heligoland Bight on the 17th Nov. 1917.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following award in addition to those announced in the London Gazette of the 17th May, 1918. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

CLARKE, HENRY CECIL COURTNEY, Lieut., R.N. In recognition of his services in command of H.M.S. Calypso in action after the Captain had been mortally wounded.

London Gazette, 2 Dec. 1918.—"War Office, 2 Dec. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Third Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

JACKSON, ARNOLD NUGENT STRODE, D.S.O. (name changed to Arnold Nugent Strode Strode-Jackson), Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), North Lancashire Regt., attached 13th Battn. King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and brilliant leadership. During an attack by our troops Lieut.-Colonel Jackson advanced with the leading wave of his battalion, and was among the first to reach the railway embankment. The machine-gun fire against them was intense, but the gallant leading of this officer gave such impetus to the assault that the enemy's main line of resistance was broken. He was subsequently wounded during the work of consolidation.

Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order :

ANDERSON, JAMES, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 1/8th Batta., Highland Light Infantry, Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry in action and fine leadership. When the battalion of which he was in command was held up in their attack on a very strongly fortified position by an intense fire of artillery and machine guns, he walked about the firing line with complete composure and disregard of his own safety, rallying and leading his men forward. He was severely wounded, but remained in the firing line until quite exhausted directing and commanding his men until he had to be carried to a dressing station. His splendid example did much to inspire his men during a time of severe test.

JACKSON, EDWARD DARBY, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), King's Own Scottish Borderers, attached 14th Batta. London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and brilliant leadership. During two days' severe fighting Lieut.-Colonel Jackson greatly contributed to the success obtained by his battalion by his example of personal courage and by his determined leadership in the face of strong resistance which led to hand-to-hand fighting, when on more than one occasion he was obliged to use his pistol. His ready grasp of the situation and his reports to brigade headquarters were also very valuable.

PLUNKETT, JAMES FREDRICK, D.S.O., M.C., D.C.M., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Dublin Fusiliers, attached 13th Batta. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. When the line on the right was held up by machine-gun fire he led two companies forward, and through his absolute contempt of danger established and consolidated a line of posts, capturing seven machine guns. Throughout the operation his determination and fine personal example inspired the attacking troops, and was the chief cause of its success.

(First Bar gazetted 4 Feb. 1918.)

THORNE, AUGUSTUS FRANCIS ANDREW NICOL, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 3rd Batta. Grenadier Guards. When his two leading companies lost direction owing to the fog, he stopped them to reorganize, and personally directed the two supporting companies on to their objective under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire. Throughout three days' operations he displayed most marked powers of leadership, and his courage in organizing the captured objectives under heavy fire was a splendid example to the whole battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

(First Bar gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

CLARK, JOHN ARTHUR, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 72nd Batta. Canadian Infantry, British Columbia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and resourceful leadership. When one of his companies was held up by machine-gun fire from a wood, he led his men forward and by skilful tactics captured the machine guns with their crews. Two days later, when his men were again checked in front of a village, he dashed to the front, and led them to their objective, saving many casualties by his skill and fearlessness.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

(First Bar gazetted 16 Aug. 1917.)

FOSTER, WILLIAM WASBROUGH, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 52nd Canadian Infantry Batta. Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and splendid leadership. After two unsuccessful attacks on a village he made a daring reconnaissance to locate enemy machine guns; and then having organized two raiding parties he led one of them personally, while the other made a feint attack on a flank. With his own party he accounted for several machine guns, and the eventual result of this third attack was the capture of the village, the defeat of an enemy counter-attack, and the capture of 250 prisoners by his battalion. In the evening he handed over his advanced line to a relieving battalion. He rendered most valuable service.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Nov. 1916.)

(First Bar gazetted 18 Jan. 1918.)

KIRKCALDY, JAMES, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 78th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and resourceful leadership. When one of his companies was held up by machine-gun fire, he took charge and overcame the opposition. Later, by aggressive fighting, he got his battalion well forward, and formed a defensive flank, using a rifle himself and directing machine-gun and trench-mortar fire, and drove the enemy from their positions. His courage and fighting spirit were an inspiration to all.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

(First Bar gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

LATTA, WILLIAM SMITH, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 29th Batta. Canadian Infantry, British Columbia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and able leading throughout three days' fighting. He led his battalion in an attack against a village, outstripping the troops on his left, as well as the guns and tanks. In this difficult situation he handled his battalion with such skill that he reached his final objective with comparatively small loss. He has at all times displayed fine leadership in action until severely wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

(First Bar gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

PAGE, LIONEL FRANK, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 50th Canadian Batta., Alberta Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great ability and determination in the attack and capture of a strongly-held enemy position. Later, during an enemy counter-attack, he made a reconnaissance of the greatest value, and although both his flanks were in the air he skilfully disposed his men so that they were protected and the counter-attack driven off with heavy loss to the enemy.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

(First Bar gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order :

BAINES, CUTHBERT SAVILE, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry, attached 2/7th Batta. Liverpool Regt., Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the capture of a village. The successful attack and consolidation of the objectives, in addition to the taking of 600 prisoners and over 40 machine gun with slight casualties, were entirely due to the fighting spirit infused into his ranks by this officer, whose good leadership and invaluable personal reconnoissances, both before and after the attack, ensured the success of the operations.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Dec. 1914.)

BROOKE, GEORGE FRANK, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, 14th Batta. Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. During eight days' very severe fighting he commanded his battalion with great skill and tactical ability, displaying great personal courage and coolness under very difficult conditions. He led his battalion in a successful attack on a strong position which they had failed to capture two days before and this result was largely due to his grasp of the situation and good organization

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

COLERIDGE, JOHN FRANCIS STANHOPE DUKE, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), 8th Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army, Commanding 188th Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership during an attack. When his battalions were held up by heavy machine-gun fire he walked round his entire line and personally gave instructions to all units for reorganization and pushing on to their objectives. His splendid leadership enabled the brigade to take a deep objective, and was the principal factor in the success of an important operation.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

GREENWOOD, HARRY, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 9th Batta. Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. Although ill he refused to leave his battalion, and led the first line to the attack, and after being injured by the bursting of a shell captured the first objective. On reaching the second objective he organized his battalion and another, and took up a defensive position from which he beat off two enemy counter-attacks and held his ground until relieved. Next day, when the advance was held up by very heavy machine-gun fire, he made a daring reconnaissance, with the result that he succeeded in getting round the enemy's flank. Throughout he set a splendid example of pluck and devotion to duty to all ranks.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

KENNEDY, JAMES, D.S.O., M.C., D.C.M., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Highlanders, attached 13th Batta. Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. He reorganized and co-ordinated the efforts of two battalions in spite of very difficult conditions, and subsequently led his battalion in a successful attack on a strong position which they had failed to capture two days before. This result, so soon after the first attempt, was largely due to his grasp of the situation and good organization, and fine example of personal courage.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

LAMBERT, WALTER JOHN, D.S.O., Major, Lancers, Indian Army (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his regiment in a mounted attack with great dash. In front of a bridgehead his leadership and resource were mainly responsible for three mounted attacks converging at the same moment.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

MARSHALL, CHARLES FREDERICK KELK, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), C/78th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He personally brought one of the guns of the battery into action on the line of the leading infantry under direct machine-gun fire, and put out of action the enemy machine guns, thereby enabling the advance to continue. Later, with this gun he materially assisted the infantry to repel a counter-attack. Next day he again brought one of his guns into action in the open in close support of the battalion he was covering. His courage, energy and determination inspired all ranks.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

PAYNTER, GEORGE CAMBORNE BEAUCLEER, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Scots Guards, General Officer Commanding, 172nd Infantry Brigade. For fine leadership and gallantry while commanding his brigade in an attack, which involved a wheel to the right, to cover the flank of the direct attack of another division. Under heavy fire he personally reconnoitred the position of his troops during the operation, and reported the result when his final objective was attained. Throughout he displayed great courage and initiative.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Dec. 1914.)

SANDERS, ARTHUR RICHARD CARELESS, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Engineers, attached 1st Batta. Essex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his battalion with great courage and determination in an attack, capturing and consolidating all his objectives, in spite of heavy fire. It was due to his initiative that a battery of enemy guns in front of the objective was captured. His personal influence and good leadership were largely responsible for the success achieved by the battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

SEYMOUR, LORD HENRY CHARLES, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, Grenadier Guards, attached 9th Batta. Liverpool Regt., Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry in action. Realizing that his battalion was losing direction owing to intense machine-gun fire, he went forward and re-directed the leading companies on to their objective. Later, whilst collecting some parties of other units that had lost direction he was seriously wounded. He set a magnificent example by his coolness under very heavy fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1916.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

DAVIES, REGINALD DANBURY, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 44th Canadian Infantry Batta., Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. Realizing the importance of the capture of a village when the advance had been held up by wire and very heavy machine-gun fire, he collected all men available and led a dashing assault and overcame the enemy resistance. He personally led a tank through the village, and after completing its capture he pushed out and consolidated a line beyond, and he led it for two days, when he succeeded in joining up with the battalion on his right. By his splendid example and leadership he contributed greatly to the success of the operation.

(D.S.O. gazetted 17 April, 1917.)

DAWSON, HERBERT JOHN, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 46th Canadian Infantry Batta., Saskatchewan Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during an attack. Thanks to his perfect organization and control his battalion secured their objectives, making an advance of some 2,500 yards. Later, when an enemy counter-attack was developing, he made a daring reconnaissance, and transmitted his report to brigade headquarters. As a consequence of this report it was possible to make such disposition as subsequently entirely defeated the purpose of the enemy. Throughout he showed great coolness and initiative.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

DOUGHTY, EDWARD SPENCER, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 31st Batta. Canadian Infantry, Alberta Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In an attack on a village, when neither tanks nor guns were in a position to assist, he successfully occupied it. After which, observing a counter-attack in course of preparation, he collected two companies, and meeting the enemy as they advanced, beat them off with heavy casualties. His energy and cheerfulness were a great asset to his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 24 Sept. 1918.)

GROSVENOR, THE HONOURABLE FRANCIS EGERTON, D.S.O., M.C., Major, 29th Batta. Canadian Infantry, British Columbia Regt. (Brigade Major Headquarters, 6th Canadian Infantry Brigade). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout three days' fighting. He first made a valuable reconnaissance on horseback under heavy fire, enabling the brigade to take up an advantageous position. Subsequently, after the capture of a village, he rode all along the line, assisting the commanders to consolidate, and bringing in valuable information of the situation. It was largely due to his energy that the brigade carried out the whole operation without a hitch.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

MACBRIEN, JAMES HOWDEN, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Royal Canadian Dragoons, General Officer Commanding, 12th Canadian Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership in an attack. He successfully captured the whole of his first objective, and under heavy machine-gun fire reconnoitred his line and directed further operations, thereby assisting very materially the advance of the flanking units. He has at all times by his courage and ability given to his brigade a wonderful inspiration of determination and aggressiveness. (D.S.O. gazetted 23 June, 1915.)

MASON, DOUGLAS HERBERT CAMPBELL, D.S.O., Major, 3rd Batta. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and leadership. This officer in command of an attack against a village cleared the enemy out, and advanced to some high ground east of it, reconnoitring and taking up a commanding position. His handling of the situation was responsible for the success of the operation. (D.S.O. gazetted 19 Aug. 1916.)

NELLES, LAFAYETTE HENRY, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 4th Batta. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer led his battalion in an attack on two villages, moving across open ground under heavy fire. Although wounded in the leg by machine-gun fire, he continued in command until the close of the fight, encouraging and inspiring his men. (D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

ODLUM, VICTOR WENTWORTH, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), 7th Canadian Infantry Batta., British Columbia Regt., General Officer Commanding, 11th Canadian Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during an advance. He personally superintended and carried out a difficult operation under heavy shell fire, inspiring his battalion by his continual resource and intrepid leadership. When his advance was temporarily held up, he organized the details of the successful final attack. He has always shown marked gallantry and initiative. (D.S.O. gazetted 23 Dec. 1915.)

ROGERS, JOSEPH BARTLETT, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 3rd Batta. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While directing the attack of his battalion, a heavy mist obscured the operations, and he suddenly found his party confronted by about 60 of the enemy, who had been passed by. He promptly collected the details and led them across the open against the enemy. His conduct in face of an awkward situation was an example to all. (D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

SPARLING, ALBERT WALTER, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 1st Batta. Canadian Infantry, Western Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer personally directed his battalion in the attack on two villages, and advancing boldly across open ground under heavy machine-gun fire, encouraged and inspired all ranks in the performance of their duty. (D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1917.)

STOCKWELL, CECIL VALENTINE, D.S.O., Major, 3rd Battery, 1st Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He went forward with the infantry and established an observation post in a village when the enemy were still in it. From this point he directed the fire of 400 rounds from his battery into the retreating enemy with excellent effect. He continued to observe and control fire, although his post was subjected to heavy bombardment and received direct hits. By his daring the advance of the infantry was greatly facilitated. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

WILDING, HENRY GORDON, D.S.O., Major, 7th Battery, New Zealand Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative. During a strong counter-attack by the enemy some of our infantry fell back on this officer's battery. He immediately rallied the infantry and, running one of his guns forward, fired over open sights and held the position until reinforcements arrived. His promptitude and courage saved a critical situation. (D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order :

ANDERSON, WILLIAM MENZIES, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), 1/6th Batta. Highland Light Infantry (Territorial Force). For conspicuous gallantry and ability in commanding his battalion during an attack. In the early stages he showed great determination in getting his battalion through the enemy wire under heavy fire, and, later, with his right flank exposed, he held the enemy off and maintained his position. Throughout the day he showed total disregard for his safety, and by his fine example greatly encouraged his men.

AWDRY, CHARLES SELWYN, Major, Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry, attached 6th Batta. Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed the greatest coolness and contempt of danger in conducting the retirement of the remnants of his battalion, and though greatly exhausted organized a new line of defence during the night. Next day, by his fine example he did much to steady the men of many scattered units.

BISSETT, GEORGE, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Batta. Royal Scots Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and able handling of his battalion during an advance. Under most difficult circumstances, and in thick mist, he personally ensured that the correct line of advance was maintained to the first objective. Under very heavy fire he captured all objectives and held them. It was largely due to his courage and fine leadership that the battalion completely fulfilled its mission.

BLAKE, TERENCE JOSEPH EDWARD, Temporary Major, 13th Batta. Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and ability while in temporary command of his battalion. Though wounded he remained at duty and gained the confidence of his men. He carried out a minor operation with complete success, gaining his objectives and capturing a number of prisoners and machine guns; and later, by his fine leadership, he captured an enemy post with its garrison of nine men and two machine guns. He did splendid work.

BONN, WALTER BASIL LOUIS, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 1st Batta. Welsh Guards. For conspicuous gallantry in action. When his C.O. was wounded he took command of the battalion, and fought it with great ability. On one occasion, when troops on the flank lost touch, he went forward through the enemy barrage to readjust the line. In doing so he was cut off by a party of the enemy, but worked his way through and rejoined the battalion. It was due to his courage and initiative that the battalion suffered so few casualties during the operations.

BRAITHWAITE, JOHN CROSBY, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut., 10th Batta. West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and courage in an attack. He led his company through our barrage to a position 200 yards beyond the final objective and in rear of the enemy's position, and when the barrage lifted he attacked the enemy in rear in conjunction with a frontal attack by other companies. By his bold action he completely demoralized a much larger force than his own, and enabled the battalion to capture 250 prisoners and 21 machine guns. Later, when the enemy counter-attacked he held his position until the remainder of the brigade had taken up a new position, and so saved the flank of the brigade.

BRAND, JOHN CHARLES, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Batta. Coldstream Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership. After his battalion had captured the objective he organized the new line under very heavy shell fire, and it was largely due to his skilful dispositions that a determined enemy counter-attack was repulsed. Two days later, having made a personal reconnaissance under heavy fire, he led his battalion over the railway and through an intense barrage towards the objective.

BROCKMAN, WILLIAM JAMES, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 15th Batta. Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He led his platoon through thick belts of wire to the gun emplacements of four enemy field guns which were in action firing over open sights, and captured the guns, killing the battery commander. It was entirely due to his determined courage that the guns were captured and numerous casualties avoided.

BUSFELD, JOHNSON ATKINSON, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, 1st Batta. Cheshire Regt., attached 6th Batta. Wiltshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative in an attack. He led his company to the final objective without artillery support in the face of intense machine-gun fire, and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. Though the enemy at once counter-attacked and completely outflanked his position, he held his ground with the greatest determination and skill.

CHICK, FREDERICK, Temporary Lieut., 2nd Batta. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry while commanding his company. After successful patrolling he faced the crossing of a river in the face of determined opposition. The post commanding the crossing was captured, and he established command of a bridgehead, killing and capturing a number of the enemy and taking four machine guns. Later, in an attack, he led his company with great courage and resource, clearing up the whole of his objectives and capturing many prisoners.

COLLIER, BERTRAM WILLIAM, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), South Wales Borderers, attached 14th Batta. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an advance. He repeatedly organized the front line of his battalion and helped to get it forward under heavy machine-gun and artillery fire. It was by his personal efforts and fine leadership that his battalion advanced some 500 yards beyond the flanking units and were successful in beating off a counter-attack.

COOPER, ALFRED DUFF, Second Lieut., Irish Guards, Special Reserve, attached 3rd Batta. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. Although the remainder of his company lost direction he led his platoon on to the objective and captured part of it. When supports arrived he led two sections against a machine-gun post, the four men immediately behind him were shot, but he went on alone and compelled the surrender of 18 men and two machine guns. Later, with a patrol of six men he succeeded in capturing 89 prisoners. He showed splendid courage and devotion to duty.

COURTENAY, HUGH, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Batta. Bedfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and resource in action. While directing the advance of his battalion one company became slightly disorganized owing to heavy fire. He rushed forward and led the men on. He then went to the left of the attack, where it was held up by wire, and encouraged short rushes, himself setting the example. Finally, he led the first wave himself until the last objective was reached. During the consolidation he was wounded.

DAVIDSON, JAMES EADIE, Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), 19th Siege Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and brilliant leadership in an attack. He reconnoitred a very forward position for his battery, and finally brought up his guns to a point within 1,500 yards of the front line from which he could reach all his objectives. He was here under continuous machine-gun fire, and for 12 hours his was the most forward battery in the sector. Thanks to his courage, initiative and energy the battery rendered valuable aid to the advance.

DAVIES, ARTHUR ROWLAND, M.C., Temporary Major, 226th Field Company, Royal Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an advance. He made a reconnaissance of the forward roads under constant shell fire and made them fit for the volume of traffic which followed up the successful advance. He also entered villages as soon as captured to reconnoitre the water supply. He rendered very valuable service.

DAVIES, CHARLES EDWARD, Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Warwickshire Regt., attached 16th Batta. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. When his battalion was held up by machine-gun fire he went up to the front line and personally endeavoured to get the companies forward, and then returned to headquarters and procured support from artillery and additional infantry enabling him to capture the enemy machine guns. Throughout the operation his coolness under heavy fire and disregard of danger inspired all ranks with confidence.

DEAKIN, GRAHAME, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, 16th Batta. Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative in an attack. He personally went forward and, under heavy machine-gun fire, organized one of his companies and some other scattered units which had become mixed owing to the dense fog. He led them forward and captured his final objective, together with an enemy battery, and later, when both his flanks were exposed, he held his ground in spite of heavy counter-attacks until he had organized an orderly withdrawal. He set a splendid example of courage and good leadership.

FALCONER, JOHN FATTES, M.C., Lieut., Indian Army Reserve of Officers, attached 29th Lancers, Indian Army (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in charge of a machine-gun section. Being given a free hand he found that the best position for his section was held by the enemy, so he at once charged and drove them out, bringing his guns into action at 50 yards' range on the retiring enemy, and also silencing a nest of their machine guns. He showed exceptional initiative.

GATHORNE-HARDY, THE HONOURABLE NIGEL CHARLES, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Rifle Brigade, attached 2/6th Batta. Liverpool Regt., Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry in command of his battalion during an attack on a village. It was due to his supervision and personal reconnaissance previous to and after the capture of the village, that the operation was carried out successfully over open country with but few casualties. Numerous machine guns and over 160 prisoners were taken.

GELL, PHILIP FRANCIS, Major, 14th Lancers, Indian Army (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer led a turning movement in front of a bridgehead, which rolled up the enemy. He sabred three of the enemy and dismounted others with the hilt of his sword. He displayed exceptional ability as a cavalry leader.

GIBSON, WILLIAM, M.C., Temporary Major, South Staffordshire Regt., attached 10th Batta. West Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative when in command of his battalion during five days' operations. He reorganized the battalion after an attack with great skill, pursued the retreating enemy, and assisted in the capture of further important enemy positions. His coolness and determination inspired his men throughout and contributed largely to the success of the operations.

GOODMAN, GODFREY DAVENPORT, M.C.G., Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), 6th Bn. Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt., Commanding 21st Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Two of his commanding officers being wounded, this officer on two occasions took over and, by his energy and drive, succeeded in taking the enemy position. On both these occasions he showed the greatest gallantry, moving about freely in the open under heavy fire of all arms. Though wounded he remained at duty until his brigade was relieved.

GREENWOOD, WILLIAM FOSTER, M.C., Temporary Capt., 9th Bn. Yorkshire Regt. (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a raiding party. The main body losing direction he penetrated the enemy's position with two men. He cleared out a number of dug-outs and shelters, killing all who resisted, and eventually returned with 12 prisoners. By his personal initiative and daring he prevented the raid being a failure, and achieved a partial success.

GROOM, HAROLD LESTER ROBERT JOSEPH, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 1/5th Bn. Royal Warwick Regt. (Territorial Force). (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry during a raid. He led his company right up under our barrage and got into a railway cutting before the enemy had time to man his machine guns. In spite of the severe fighting in the cutting he personally examined sheds and shelters and gained valuable information. During the withdrawal he collected his men and got his wounded away with great skill. Throughout he showed determined leadership and courage.

GROVES, EDWARD JULIAN, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 1st Bn. Cheshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative in an attack. He led his company to the final objective without artillery support in the face of intense machine-gun fire, inflicted heavy losses on the enemy, and captured a large number of field guns. When the enemy counter-attacked and broke through on both his flanks he carried out a skilful withdrawal and collected and reorganized scattered parties of other units under heavy machine-gun fire.

GUY, OSWALD VERNON, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), 7th Bn. Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and ability in command of his company during a fortnight's fighting. He cleared a strong enemy position in the fog and organized attacks at extremely short notice with such complete detail that the success was great, and the infantry greatly assisted in their advance. His energy and co-operation with the infantry staffs gave them detailed information earlier than from any other source.

HELME, ERNEST, Major, Glamorganshire Yeomanry, attached 15th Bn. Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. He organized and carried out the crossing of a river by his battalion with great foresight and skill, and during the subsequent advance and operations lasting several days his example of personal courage, and his power of organization and command enabled his men successfully to accomplish all the tasks they were called on to perform.

HOBBS, HOWARD FREDERICK, M.C., Temporary Major, 13th Bn. Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and skill in command of his battalion in an advanced guard. Under heavy shell fire and gassing he kept his men well in hand; and, later, fought his way forward successfully through strong machine-gun opposition. Thanks to his gallant and noble leadership during three days' strenuous fighting his battalion was completely successful in its duties.

HOGG, SAMUEL ROLLESTON, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 26th Bn. Royal Fusiliers, attached Headquarters, 122nd Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as brigade-major. He organized and directed operations with supreme skill. When the situation was obscure, he went forward in broad daylight, exposed to constant fire, and linked up the forward posts that formed the front line. He then conducted with great daring the operations for new dispositions. As a result, the line was advanced at dusk 500 yards along the brigade front. Throughout difficult operations, he showed fine courage and initiative.

HUMPHRIES, CECIL FREDERICK GEORGE, M.C., D.C.M., Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Bn. Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, attached 1st Bn. Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership. Having taken his objective, he reorganized his battalion, and, on hearing that the attack on the final objective was held up, he went forward under heavy fire and reconnoitred the whole position, after which he returned and led the battalion forward. Later, he personally controlled his men during a very determined counter-attack by the enemy under the heaviest machine-gun fire. His courage inspired great confidence throughout the operations.

JAMIESON, JOHN PERCIVAL, Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Middlesex Regt., Special Reserve, attached 4th Bn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the advance of his company was held up by an enemy machine-gun and trench-mortar post, he, with two of his runners, rushed this post, capturing two machine guns, two trench mortars and two prisoners. Although slightly wounded he led his company to the final objective, which he consolidated. Later, with a few runners, he captured a gun team, wounding three of the enemy and taking two prisoners; and throughout the operations he inspired his men by his wonderful example and total disregard of personal danger.

JOHNSTON, CHARLES ERNEST, Major, 1/6th Bn. Seaforth Highlanders, Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion. He encouraged his men by his great coolness under very heavy fire, and when the enemy broke through on the left, he organized a defensive flank, subsequently conducting the withdrawal with great skill. It was due to his splendid example that the battalion put up such an excellent defence and inflicted such heavy casualties on the enemy. He was finally wounded.

MOLONY, WILLIAM BERESFORD, Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, 9th Bn. Royal Lancaster Regt., attached 4th Bn. Middlesex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership during an attack. When, owing to thick mist and enemy smoke and gas shell, many of the companies were losing direction, he personally rallied them, under very heavy fire, and directed them to their objective. Later, he went forward, and under heavy shell fire, led parties of men who had lost their platoons in the mist. Throughout he set a splendid example to all ranks.

MURRAY, ERIC MACKAY, M.C., Capt., Queen Victoria's Own Corps of Guides, Indian Army, and Royal Flying Corps (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during three months' operations. He persistently showed courage and ability of a high order throughout. He was three times in action against enemy aircraft, and on the last occasion returned with 20 bullet holes in his machine, after his passenger had emptied 1½ drums of ammunition from a Lewis gun at the adversary.

PERKINS, HUGH RICHARDSON, M.C., Temporary Capt., 13th Bn. Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He took command of another battalion when many of the officers had become casualties during an attack and reorganized it under heavy enemy fire. Later, he led the battalion in another attack in the face of intense shell and machine-gun fire, and by his courage and initiative was largely responsible for the capture of the enemy's position with many prisoners.

PAYNE, JOHN EDWARD LENNARD, M.C., Temporary Capt., 10th Bn. West Riding Regt. (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership when in charge of a large raiding party. Although the objective was continuously swept by enfilade machine-gun fire, he carried out the operation successfully and withdrew his party in perfect order, capturing a large number of prisoners. He exhibited great coolness and ability to command.

POPHAM, FRANCIS JAMES, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), North Lancashire Regt., attached 2/5th Bn. Royal Lancaster Regt. (Territorial Force). For conspicuous gallantry and skill in an attack. He led his battalion in an advance of two miles through the enemy's lines and captured a village, in spite of strong opposition. He showed great initiative and determination both in the attack and in a withdrawal which later became necessary owing to his position being isolated.

POWELL, DAVID WATSON, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Northamptonshire Regt., attached 1st Bn. Royal Berkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership during an attack. When both the company commanders on the right of his battalion were wounded, he went up at once, under heavy machine-gun fire, and personally rushed the attack through to its objective. Later, when the line was temporarily disorganized, he immediately went and, under heavy machine-gun fire, reorganized it. He showed the highest qualities of command under difficult conditions.

ROSSI-ASHTON, CYRIL GEORGE, Temporary Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Major), 7th Bn. Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during a fortnight's fighting. He commanded his company with skill and judgment, reorganizing his company and achieving with composite crews results with their shooting which gained the appreciation and confidence of the infantry, and thereby combined attainment of his objective on every occasion.

SHAW, ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS MCINNES, Temporary Capt., 1st Bn. Royal Scots Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership in an attack. In thick fog he led the leading company successfully through to the final objective. When his company was held up by machine-gun fire from a trench, he personally led a bayonet charge and captured the trench, with 20 prisoners. He then pushed on and captured 120 prisoners, besides killing many of the enemy. The success of the operation was largely due to his marked courage and determination.

SHAW, DONALD PATRICK, Temporary Major, 6th Bn. Dorsetshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He commanded his company with so great enterprise and dash that in one afternoon eight machine guns and 20 prisoners were taken by them. He personally accounted for many of the enemy, and the result of his determined action and initiative was the weakening of an enemy position preparatory to an attack carried out successfully against it that night. Later, in command of his battalion, he showed marked ability and fighting spirit.

SLATER, JOHN MOWAT, Capt. (Acting Major), 1/4th Bn. Royal Scots (Territorial Force). For conspicuous gallantry and skill while commanding his battalion in an attack. By his personal example and leadership he inspired his men with such dash and determination that all objectives were taken, and over 400 prisoners and 40 machine guns were captured. His conduct was magnificent throughout.

SMITHARD, RICHARD GLASSE, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 7th Bn. Shropshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and skilful handling of his battalion in the capture of a position. After personally reconnoitring the line of advance, he got his battalion round a heavily-gassed area, and in spite of thick fog successfully gained his objective, thereby materially assisting the advance of the battalion on his right. Two days later, he made a further advance and consolidated his position. It was due to his fine example and fine leadership that the battalion successfully fulfilled its mission.

TENNANT, MICHAEL FRANCIS, Lieut., Scots Guards, Special Reserve, attached 1st Bn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his men forward with great dash, and captured an officer and 12 men himself. In an attack on a village he led two platoons, and made such good use of ground that they suffered few casualties, in spite of very heavy fire. The village was full of the enemy, by whom at one time he was surrounded, but by the skilful use of his Lewis guns he reached the final objective, killing or capturing the majority of the enemy.

THWAYTES, HARRY DELAMERE, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Bn. Dorsetshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability during an attack on an enemy position. The battalion commanded by him successfully forced their way through strong wire defences, in face of heavy machine-gun fire, and under his direction successfully maintained and consolidated the position won, though subjected to repeated enemy attempts to recover it.

THOMAS, WILLIAM EDGAR, M.C., Temporary Major, 7th Bn. East Yorkshire Regt. He commanded two companies in an outflanking movement to capture a village which was strongly held by the enemy. By his able dispositions and fearless leading he succeeded, with only two casualties, in taking four machine guns and 50 prisoners. The advance was then continued, and the whole village finally captured. His fine example of courage and leadership inspired all ranks.

WARD, ROBERT, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 9th Bn. Manchester Regt., Territorial Force, attached 1st Bn. Liverpool Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After 30 hours' unceasing work under heavy shelling, he volunteered to lead the remnants of two companies in the advance against a village. He cheered the men on in face of intense machine-gun fire until he fell wounded, and by his splendid example and personal courage the long extended line was carried right on to the objective.

WALSH, RUPERT SHARPE, M.M., Lieut., 4th Bn. Gordon Highlanders, Territorial Force, seconded 11th Bn. Tank Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During a long and trying day, when he covered some 20 miles and fought several actions, his energy and cheerful courage were a fine example to his men. When the machinery broke down on one occasion, and the enemy made his tank untenable by the fumes of phosphorus bombs, he evacuated the crew, but remained behind himself, with one man, and eventually got the engines started again, and walking along between the front horns of the tank, surrounded by the enemy, who were firing at them with their revolvers, he managed at last to bring the tank back into safety.

WHITEHEAD, TEBBUTT HILL, M.C., Temporary Capt., 13th Bn. Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and resource in an attack. When the attack seemed likely to be held up by intense enemy fire, by his skilful and determined leadership under the most difficult conditions he enabled the advance to continue, with the result that a very strong enemy position was captured, with 500 prisoners. His personal example and initiative contributed largely to the success of the operation.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BASEVI, JAMES, Major, 2nd Bn. Canadian Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded four machine-gun batteries in conjunction with the infantry advance. When the entire brigade staff were either killed or wounded by a shell burst, he took charge and carried on until the arrival of a fresh staff. His initiative in meeting the emergency, and the way he managed the fire power of his batteries, were of the greatest value.

GORDON, REV. ALEXANDER MACLENNAN, M.C., Canadian Chaplains' Service, attached 4th Canadian Division. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During heavy fighting in the advance he was continually exposed to great danger while attending the wounded in the firing line. While performing his duty he was severely wounded by a machine-gun bullet.

HOPE, JOHN ANDREW, M.C., Major, 46th Canadian Infantry Bttn., Saskatchewan Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and resource. After a strong enemy counter-attack he carried out a most valuable reconnaissance under heavy fire, reorganized the line, established touch with the enemy along his whole front, and cleared up a difficult situation. He showed marked initiative and disregard of danger.

KEGAN, HERBERT LEO, Lieut.-Colonel, 47th Canadian Infantry Bttn., West Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. In conjunction with another battalion he stormed and successfully captured enemy positions through uncut wire. Throughout the engagement, fought with his right flank exposed, he displayed marked courage and cheerfulness, and in face of the greatest difficulties advanced and held ground gained for three days.

KILBORN, ARTHUR RUBIN, M.C., M.M., Lieut., 78th Bttn. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as scout officer during four days' operations. Under heavy fire he maintained liaison between the companies and battalion headquarters, his accurate information enabling the positions to be readjusted in the face of obstinate resistance. When the left of the attack was threatened he collected some details, and fearlessly exposing himself, shot two officers at close quarters and restored the situation.

KIPPEN, WILLIAM HAROLD, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), 3rd Bttn. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an attack, after the second-in-command had been wounded, this officer twice saved a critical situation, first by seizing a trench, and later by clearing out a nest of four machine guns in a sunken road. On reaching his objective he skillfully arranged for its consolidation. His energy and determination were responsible for the success of the operation.

MARTYN, DONALD BRUCE, M.C., Major, 44th Canadian Infantry Bttn., New Brunswick Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during a bombing attack. Noticing that one of the attacking parties of another battalion had taken the wrong trench turning, he immediately went forward and, finding the senior officer had been wounded, took charge and led the party into the correct trench against large numbers of the enemy, of whom he mowed down a company and captured over 40. He remained with the party for over ten hours, during which time he withstood two violent counter-attacks and consolidated the positions captured. He showed marked courage and able leadership.

MATHESON, GUY McLEAN, M.C., M.M., Capt. (Acting Major), 25th Bttn. Canadian Infantry, Nova Scotia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer led his company in the attack, and later, when his C.O. was severely wounded, took command of the battalion and skillfully consolidated the position gained. The following day, in directing the advance of the front line, he was severely wounded, but continued on duty for 24 hours. His courage and coolness set a fine example.

McKECHNIE, DAVID WILLIAM, Capt., No. 6 Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. While preparing an advanced dressing station in a village, it was subjected to an intense bombardment, but he remained at his post dressing the wounded, and refused to take underground cover.

McMURTRY, ALEXANDER OGILVIE, Major, 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. When the infantry were held up by machine-gun nests he went forward with a section of his battery and took up a position in the open, and though subjected to machine-gun fire, he was able, by using open sights, to disperse the enemy, thus clearing the way for the infantry advance. His coolness and resource throughout the operations were most marked.

MOORE, ROGER STEVENSON, Capt., 29th Canadian Infantry Bttn., British Columbia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership during an attack. He led his company splendidly through heavy fire and captured 16 machine guns and an enemy strong point. His fearless example carried his company forward against all odds and was successful in helping his flanks to advance.

ROSS, STANLEY GRAHAM, M.C., Major, 6th Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On three successive days this officer was in charge of collecting posts and advanced dressing stations. He accompanied the stretcher-bearers in the advance, to see that proper touch was maintained. His coolness and disregard of danger under heavy fire had an excellent effect on the work of the bearer parties.

SIFTON, CLIFFORD, Jun., Major, 4th Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and determination in command of a composite battery, supporting the infantry advance. By making forward reconnaissances he succeeded in bringing his battery into action at close range against machine guns, tank guns and enemy strong points. His enterprise largely contributed to the success of the attack. Although shot through the wrist he remained at duty.

SIMPSON, ARTHUR FREDERIC, Capt., 28th Canadian Infantry Bttn., Saskatchewan Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of a support company during an attack. Seeing that the attack was likely to become disorganized he led his company in face of heavy fire through the attacking line, reorganized the other units and carried the whole line forward. His bold and skilful leadership enabled other units who were held up to come on. He showed marked courage throughout the operations.

SIMPSON, ROBERT MILLS, Colonel, Canadian Army Medical Corps, Assistant Director of Medical Services, 2nd Canadian Division. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in establishing, often under heavy fire, his advanced dressing stations and collecting posts, and personally superintending the evacuation of the wounded. When a sudden attack resulted in the capture of a village, he went up under fire and personally dressed the wounds of his men on the field, evacuating all by the evening. His tireless work undoubtedly saved many lives.

WHITAKER, HECTOR CHILD, Lieut., 72nd Bttn. Canadian Infantry, British Columbia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during four days' operations, when he was in command of the battalion scouts, obtaining and sending back excellent information as to the enemy strong points, thereby saving many casualties. He beat back the enemy outposts, and on one occasion captured a machine gun and crew. Subsequently he rushed a machine gun and crew single-handed, putting it out of action, although wounded in the face. His judgment and dash were most praiseworthy.

WISE, JOHN, M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 25th Bttn. Canadian Infantry, Nova Scotia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his battalion and gaining all its objectives. During the attack he was severely wounded in the back, but his determination and indomitable spirit were responsible for the successes of his unit.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

CAMPBELL, ALEXANDER GEORGE, Capt., 8th Bttn. Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and resource. He led his company in an attack against a strong enemy position, captured and consolidated all his objectives, and by his skilful leadership enabled the battalion on his flank to continue the advance when they were held up by the enemy. In a later attack, though he was badly wounded, he continued to lead his men until he collapsed. He set a splendid example of courage and determination.

COX, CHARLES FREDERICK, C.B., C.M.G., Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Commanding 1st Australian Light Horse Brigade (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His quickness in realizing the situation, and organizing a counter-attack, resulted in the recapture of a position before the enemy had time to consolidate. He also captured about 150 prisoners who were attacking a small post in a neighbouring bluff, and then readjusted his line before supports could arrive to support the enemy storm troops.

DICK, ARCHIE, Major, 3rd Australian Light Horse Regt. (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy attacked in overwhelming force his tenacity in holding on to two posts under his command was largely responsible for their repulse with heavy casualties. The exact information which he sent back enabled the batteries to bring accurate fire on the enemy.

WEIR, FRANK VALENTINE, Major, 1st Australian Light Horse Regt. (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With great dash he worked his squadron in a counter-attack, driving the enemy back and forcing them under fire of the machine guns. This led to the whole of the enemy who had entered the position being captured.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

BELL, PETER HARVEY, Lieut.-Colonel, 3rd Bttn. New Zealand Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and ability. During an attack he found that troops on his flank had been unable to reach their objective owing to the loss of many officers. He immediately rearranged his place of operations and reorganized his men under most difficult circumstances and personally directed the advance of his companies under heavy fire. It was mainly due to his energy and initiative and entire disregard of personal safety that our advance was continued and all objectives were taken.

McCLELLAND, CHARLES HAROLD, Major, 2nd Bttn. Auckland Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his battalion commander became a casualty he assumed command and handled his men with remarkable coolness and skill. At the commencement of an attack he was shot in the arm and leg, but refused to leave his command, even to have his wounds dressed, until the battalion was relieved three days later. His example of unflinching courage and endurance inspired all under his command during a very trying time.

SINEL, WILFRED COURTNEY, Major, 2nd Bttn. Auckland Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the advance of the battalion of which he was in command was held up by an intense fire of artillery and machine guns he went forward to the front line, and by skilful leadership pushed on the attack. While doing this he was wounded. During the work of consolidation he repelled three determined counter-attacks. Throughout the operations his courage and ability inspired the greatest confidence in his men.

TURNBULL, FRANK KINGDON, M.C., Major, 1st Bttn. Wellington Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of his battalion, which he handled with great ability during four days' severe fighting. He was continually with the advance guard while the enemy were retreating, and his accurate reports to brigade headquarters greatly contributed to the success of the operations. He repelled several determined counter-attacks, and during the whole time his unflinching cheerfulness and example of personal courage greatly encouraged his officers and men.

London Gazette, 3 Dec. 1918.—"Air Ministry, 3 Dec. 1918. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the undermentioned rewards on Officers and other ranks of the Royal Air Force, in recognition of gallantry in flying operations against the enemy. (Included in award) Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

McCLAUGHRY, EDGAR JAMES, D.F.C., Capt. (Australian Flying Corps) (France). A bold and fearless officer, who has performed many gallant deeds of daring, notably on 24 Sept., when, attacking a train at 250 feet altitude, he obtained a direct hit, cutting it in two, the rear portion being derailed. He then fired a number of rounds at the fore portion, which pulled up. Sighting a hostile two-seater he engaged it and drove it down. Proceeding home he observed seven Fokker biplanes; although he had expended the greater part of his ammunition, Capt. McLaughry never hesitated, but engaged the leader. During the combat that ensued he was severely wounded by fire from a scout that attacked him from behind; turning, he drove this machine off badly damaged. His ammunition being now expended he endeavoured to drive off two hostile scouts by firing Very lights at them. Exhausted by his exertions, he temporarily lost consciousness, but recovered sufficiently to land his machine safely. This officer has destroyed 14 machines and four balloons, and has repeatedly displayed an utter disregard for danger in attacking ground targets.

London Gazette, 12 Dec. 1918.—"Admiralty, 12 Dec. 1918.—Honours for Services in White Sea Operations, 1918.—Modyugski Island, at the sea end of the channels leading to Archangel, was captured on 1 Aug. 1918, after the batteries had been silenced by the Allied warships, and the town of Archangel was occupied on the 2nd Aug., the Bolshevik Forces being quickly and efficiently overcome and driven out of the vicinity. Following these operations, a River Expeditionary Force was organized with local craft, armed and manned by Allied crews, and this expedition succeeded, in co-operation with the military forces, in clearing the River Dwina and the River Vaga of hostile draft up to the time when Allied ships had to be withdrawn to avoid the ice, several of the principal enemy vessels being destroyed.

"The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services during these operations. To be appointed Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

LYON, FRANCIS HOWARD, Engineer-Commander, R.N., H.M.S. Attentive. He was mainly responsible for the rapidity with which the ships and motor launches were armed, and the engines of the latter put into working order for the Dwina operations. His energy and tireless devotion to duty are deserving of the highest praise.

GREEN, SEBALD WALTER BLUETT, Lieut.-Commander, R.N., Commanding H.M.S. M 25. For the capable handling of his ship, untiring devotion to duty, cheerful and inspiring leadership of officers and men, and utter disregard of personal danger under heavy fire when in charge of the landing party at Tchamova during the Dwina operations.

RENDALL, HENRY EDWARD, Lieut.-Commander, R.N. As gunnery and control officer of H.M.S. Attentive he was largely responsible for the silencing of the battery on Modyugski Island, which disputed the Allied entry to Archangel, on the 1st Aug. 1918. He also landed in command of a naval detachment, and secured the railway to Bakaritsa against Bolshevik attack.

DOBSON, JOHN GREENLAW, M.B., Surgeon-Lieut., Royal Navy, H.M.S. M 25. Though wounded by the explosion of a shell, he carried out all operations that could be effected on the wounded, working continuously from 7 p.m. till 10 p.m., when he collapsed. Throughout this time Surgeon-Lieut. Dobson went about his work as if nothing had happened.

London Gazette, 19 Dec. 1918.—"War Office, 19 Dec. 1918.—Amendment.—The appointment to be an Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire of Major Stanley Thomas Grigg, M.C., West Yorkshire Regt., published in London Gazette dated 18 Nov. 1918, is cancelled, and the following substituted:—Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers and Warrant Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BUCKLE, ARCHIBALD WALTER, D.S.O., Temporary Commander, Anson Battn. Royal Naval Division, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the progress of the brigade at a critical moment was checked by machine-gun fire, he went forward himself with his battalion staff, reorganized his battalion and led it forward on to commanding ground, seriously threatening the enemy's retreat. The success of the operation was largely due to his courage and fine leadership.

(First Bar gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

DAWES, GEORGE, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Battn. South Staffordshire Regt., Commanding 21st Battn. London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. When the enemy attacked the flank of the battalion, which had been uncovered owing to the retirement of other troops, and there appeared to be imminent danger of their breaking through at this spot, which was the key of the position, Colonel Dawes went up under an intense fire, and rallied the men by his splendid example of courage and saved the line by his able and determined leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

(First Bar gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

GORT, VISCOUNT, JOHN STANDISH SURTEES PRENDERGAST VEREKEK, V.C., D.S.O., M.V.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Battn. Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion. He led his men up by night to relieve a battalion which had attacked and failed to reach its objective. Regardless of danger he personally reconnoitred the line ahead of his troops, and got them on to the objective before dawn. During the three following days he again made forward reconnaissances, and leading his battalion gradually on, advanced the line 800 yards and gained a canal bank. It is impossible to speak too highly of this officer's initiative.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

(First Bar gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

IRWIN, NOEL MACKINTOSH STUART, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Essex Regt., attached 1st Bttn. Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, realizing that the battalion was very short of officers, and that many of the men were inexperienced in trench-trench fighting, led it himself in the attack, keeping close up with the barrage, with the result that all objectives were gained, and machine guns put out of action before they could open fire. He personally superintended the consolidation, and by his able dispositions minimized casualties.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

(First Bar gazetted 24 Sept. 1918.)

McCULLOCH, ANDREW JAMESON, D.S.O., D.C.M., Capt. and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), 7th Dragoon Guards, Commanding 64th Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and ability to command. On a pitch dark night he penetrated 4,500 yards into the enemy's lines, occupied his objective, and captured between 300 and 400 prisoners and two guns, as well as a village. The advance was over the worst country, and the right flank of the brigade was entirely uncovered throughout. Success was entirely due to his magnificent leadership, moving at the head of this brigade.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

(First Bar gazetted 16 Sept. 1918.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

BAILEY, THE HONOURABLE WILFRED RUSSELL, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Major), 1st Bttn. Grenadier Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and outstanding leadership. It was necessary to capture some high ground overlooking a village before dark. This officer in command of the battalion commenced the advance at 3.15 p.m. By 5.45 p.m. all objectives had been taken. In carrying out this task the battalion advanced on a frontage of 1,000 yards with both flanks in the air, penetrated the enemy's lines for a distance of 4,000 yards and captured 197 prisoners, 15 machine guns and many trench mortars. The success of this manoeuvre was certainly due to the brilliant leadership of this officer.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Nov. 1918.)

DANIEL, THOMAS WILLIAM, D.S.O., M.C., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 10th Bttn. Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in command of his battalion in an attack, where it had to pass through two brigades and advance on a third objective. He controlled and directed this advance with great skill, capturing his objective without delay, although troops on his left had been held up. Later in the day, when the enemy made a partially successful counter-attack, he personally led his men and re-established the line. Throughout the day his example and courage had a great influence on his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

FLETCHER, EDWARD KEELING, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Marine Light Infantry, attached 1st Bttn. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. When the enemy counter-attacked heavily, forcing in a portion of our line, this officer rallied the troops with great gallantry and re-organized them, and, leading them forward personally, restored the situation. Although severely wounded, he remained on the spot and declined to leave until he was able to report that the enemy had been repulsed. His courage and endurance inspired his men to most determined efforts.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

GWYNN, KINGSMILL DOUGLAS HOSEASON, D.S.O., Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 11th Bttn. Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. He commanded his battalion in the difficult operation of crossing a river in the face of determined opposition from the enemy, who were holding the opposite bank in strength. All bridges were broken, and the enemy had inundated a great portion of the valley by damming the stream. He himself was suffering from severe gassing, but he overcame all difficulties and, inspiring his men with his own determination and fine example of courage, he effected the crossing and established the battalion on the opposite bank. He rendered most valuable service.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 Nov. 1915.)

HERBERT, WILLIAM NORMAN, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Bttn. Northumberland Fusiliers. He commanded his battalion with marked ability and skill, and when one of his advanced posts had been captured he organized and led a counter-attack, after a personal reconnaissance, whereby the position was recaptured, together with 59 prisoners. Later, after an assaulting battalion had been held up by heavy machine-gun fire and his battalion was in reserve, he was ordered to clear the situation, which, after a close reconnaissance under heavy machine-gun fire, he did with complete success and slight casualties.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

JOHNSON, DUDLEY GRAHAM, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), South Wales Borderers, attached 2nd Bttn. Royal Sussex Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of his battalion in the attack. The ground over which his battalion advanced was very difficult, but thanks to his careful dispositions, was successfully negotiated. He personally superintended the reorganization after the objective was reached, and subsequently carried out a night attack, advancing some thousand yards in the face of strenuous opposition. His skilful arrangements and conduct throughout inspired the men under him with a splendid fighting spirit.

(D.S.O. gazetted 16 March, 1915.)

LEAH, THOMAS COULSON, D.S.O., Major, Royal Garrison Artillery, attached A/93rd Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while firing a barrage from an advanced enemy position. When intense enemy fire was put down on his battery he, by his coolness and organization, kept all guns in action and caused the rate of fire to be maintained. Twice during the operation, when ammunition dumps were hit and set alight, he was the first to assist in extinguishing the fire. He afterwards saw to the dressing and evacuation of the wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

LLOYD, EDWARD PRINCE, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Bttn. Lincolnshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanding his battalion gained all objectives on a wide front, his furthest point being 500 yards beyond that of the other battalions. When the situation on the right flank was uncertain he made a personal reconnaissance under heavy machine-gun fire, and sent back a clear report. He superintended the forming up and consolidation of the companies, and by unflagging energy, care and forethought succeeded in the operation with a minimum of casualties.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

ROBERTSON, GORDON McMAHON, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Bttn. North Staffordshire Regt., attached 2nd Bttn. Manchester Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership during an attack. Hearing that the leading battalions had lost both commanding officers he went forward to the front line under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, ascertained the situation, sent for reinforcements, and returned with valuable information. During the night he supervised the consolidation of the line, and next day handled his battalion most efficiently in support of a brigade.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

SCHOMBERG, REGINALD CHARLES FRANCIS, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Bttn. Seaforth Highlanders (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great dash and determination in an attack. Though early wounded, he continued to command during the subsequent assault on the enemy's position, and afterwards superintended consolidation and reorganization in the dark, and remained with his battalion in the trenches until morning.

(D.S.O. gazetted 22 Dec. 1916.)

SYKES, FRANCIS BERNARD, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Field Artillery, attached 223rd (Home Counties) Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. He went forward through a heavy gas barrage on two occasions to deal with an obscure situation and, though severely gassed, continued to direct operations. He utilised four artillery brigades with great ability to crush counter-attacks, and on one occasion, in the absence of lieutenants, he personally carried a wire forward under intense machine-gun fire and, thus getting into telephonic communication with batteries, scattered with great losses the enemy whom he had observed to be massing for an advance. His courage, endurance and skill were admirable.

(D.S.O. gazetted 8 Nov. 1915.)

THORNHILL, CUDBERT JOHN MASSY, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Indian Army (Northern Russia). For conspicuous gallantry and ability in command of the "Onega" force. With a small detachment he made a most dashing attack on the enemy, who were in far superior numbers, and by the vigour of his attack was successful in detaching a large force of the enemy, who would otherwise have opposed us at Archangel. Throughout all operations the marked courage displayed by Colonel Thornhill inspired all ranks serving under his command.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

VICARY, ALEXANDER CRAVEN, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Bttn. Gloucestershire Regt. (Salonika). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He set a fine example to all ranks of coolness and courage under heavy shell fire. The manner in which his battalion carried through the operation and consolidated and retained the position under subsequent intense bombardment was undoubtedly due to his personal gallantry and marked ability to command.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

BENT, CHARLES EDWARD, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 15th Bttn. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For gallantry and skill in directing his battalion in an attack. He, under difficulties of mist, led his battalion in close reserve to the three attacking battalions of this brigade, consequently, under the conditions of the day, he was engaged in personal leadership and fighting, helping to clear up the places where the enemy were still holding out. Next day, during another attack, he was severely wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

CLARK-KENNEDY, WILLIAM HEW, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 24th Bttn. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. For great gallantry in action during which the battalion under his command reached the objectives allotted to it. On several occasions, at great risk, he personally directed the capture of strong points obstinately defended by the enemy. The success which his battalion obtained in these actions was due in no small degree to the example, courage and resourcefulness of its commander.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Jan. 1916.)

DONALDSON, ANSON SCOTT, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 3rd Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in charge of the evacuation of the forward area, and showed great initiative in establishing dressing stations and collecting posts directly in rear of the advancing infantry. He kept in touch with the battalion and succeeded in evacuating the casualties almost as soon as they occurred, in spite of heavy machine-gun and shell fire.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

DUBUC, ARTHUR EDOUARD, D.S.O., Major, 22nd Bttn. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and determined leadership. This officer commanded his battalion in an attack on an important village. Twice during the morning the advance was checked by very heavy machine-gun fire, causing serious casualties. On both occasions he went forward and personally led the leading waves during these critical moments. He was severely wounded before the battalion reached its objective, and it was greatly due to his fearless leadership that the attack was successful.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

JONES, LOUIS ELGIN, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 18th Bttn. Canadian Infantry, Western Ontario Regt. He commanded his battalion with marked skill in connection with an attack on a strongly-held position, during which his flanks were threatened. His initiative and personal direction led to the success of the attack and permitted of the advance of his own and neighbouring units. He personally supervised the work of consolidation of the objective gained, and throughout, under exceptionally adverse conditions, he set a splendid example to his officers and men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Oct. 1917.)

JOHNSTON, GEORGE CHALMERS, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifle Bttn., 1st Central Ontario Regt. The day previous to an attack he was ordered to make on a strong enemy position, he made a personal reconnaissance of the ground in the face of heavy machine-gun fire. It was owing to this officer's high qualities of leadership and his knowledge of the ground that the attack was a complete success, and that his battalion suffered a minimum of casualties.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

MACFARLANE, ROBERT ALEXANDER, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 58th Bttn. Canadian Infantry, 2nd Central Ontario Regt. His battalion was required to make an advance of nearly 5,000 yards during an attack in which his battalion became involved in very heavy fighting at one point where he personally led forward supporting companies to clear one village and push on to another, which was the final objective. He performed this task with great skill and daring, personally killing two of the enemy. During a subsequent operation he made a reconnaissance forward of his battalion, in which he surprised an enemy machine-gun post; he killed one of the crew and took four other prisoners. Throughout these operations he showed sound judgment, courage and skill.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

McKENZIE, ARCHIBALD ERNEST GRAHAM, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 26th Bttn. Canadian Infantry, New Brunswick Regt. For conspicuous skill in handling his battalion during the capture and consolidation of the objectives allotted to his command. His coolness and fine example inspired all ranks.

The success which crowned the operations of this unit was in a large measure due to leadership and courage of its C.O.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

MILLEN, LIONEL HERBERT, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 19th Batta. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. In connection with an attack on three strongly-held enemy positions he commanded his battalion with such skill and intrepidity that each position was taken in succession, and the final objective was gained. In a subsequent operation he organized and directed a successful attack on a village which resulted in our line being advanced 1,200 yards and the capture of many prisoners and machine guns. His marked ability in handling difficult situations and his courage and example contributed largely to the success of both operations.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

MURPHY, THOMAS JOSEPH FRANCIS, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 6th Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps. During an attack there were several wounded cases whose evacuation was being held up by the intense enemy barrage. This officer then brought up two motor ambulances, which he left some distance in rear, and came up with his runner to the village and searched for the regimental aid post, which he found after much difficulty, all the time exposed to heavy fire himself, as he passed several times through the enemy barrage and machine-gun fire. It was through his utter disregard of personal danger that the wounded were safely cleared and many lives saved.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

PATERSON, ALEXANDER THOMAS, D.S.O., Major, D/23rd Battery, 5th Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When one of the ammunition wagons of his battery was hit by a shell and the ammunition set on fire, he at once ordered the men to a distance while he himself went and opened the door and removed the charges. But for his gallant action a serious disaster might have occurred.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

PECK, CYRUS WESLEY, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 16th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. During an attack he showed fine courage and leadership. He led his battalion, under difficulties caused by heavy mist, to its final objective, nearly three miles, after severe fighting. He personally led his men in an attack on nests of machine guns protecting the enemy's guns, which he captured. Some of the guns were of 8-inch calibre.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

RHOADES, WILLIAM, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 5th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. When the battalion was ordered to move forward and capture a strong position held by enemy machine guns and flanked by strong points, he made personal reconnaissances and guided the attack of his battalion with great skillfulness and determination, and was with the front line when the objectives were taken. It was due to his quick appreciation of the situation and skilful disposition of his troops that the attack was a complete success. His resourcefulness and courage were an inspiration to all ranks.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

RILEY, HAROLD JAMES, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 27th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. During four days' hard fighting, when his battalion was continuously making attacks at short intervals, his gallantry and indomitable energy inspired his men to their utmost efforts. His personal direction in the advanced lines ensured the success of difficult operations, and on one occasion the attack was made at the end of a hard day's fighting without artillery support, and resulted in the capture of a number of machine guns and prisoners. Throughout the operations his example and leading were splendid.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

STEWART, CHARLES JAMES TOWNSHEND, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, East Ontario Regt. He, by his extreme energy and resourcefulness, his sound tactical knowledge and ability, overcame great odds in leading his battalion against strongly organized enemy defences in the face of heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, thereby ensuring the attainment of all objectives for the brigade. His consistent cheerfulness, his complete disregard of danger, and his personal example were undoubtedly instrumental in the successes of his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Nov. 1916.)

URQUHART, HUGH MACINTYRE, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 43rd Batta. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. For distinguished services and gallantry on several occasions. He had the difficult task of taking the formidable positions of three woods, all of which he captured at the right time. He showed leadership and skilful handling of the highest order, and out-manoeuvred the enemy. On subsequent occasions he made daring personal reconnaissances which resulted in complete defeat of the enemy. On the last enterprise he was severely wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

BEDDY, PERCY LANGDON, Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, 51st Sikhs (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. It was largely due to the skill and initiative with which he handled his battalion in the attack following on a night march of twenty miles that the enemy were driven back in a running fight extending over six miles, and by early next morning were turned out of two strongly-prepared positions two miles apart.

BLATHERWICK, THOMAS, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1/6th Batta. Manchester Regt., Territorial Force. He displayed the greatest courage and skill when personally supervising the crossing of a river in face of a position strongly held by the enemy. Later, his battalion was ordered to relieve another battalion at short notice in an attack on positions which had not been previously reconnoitred. He went forward and made a personal reconnaissance, amidst heavy shell bursts and machine-gun fire, and returning led the battalion successfully forward under extremely difficult circumstances.

BRUDENELL-BRUCE, ROBERT HANBURY, Major, Norfolk Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During severe fighting for two days he rendered very valuable service by reconnoitring under difficult and dangerous conditions, when situations arose requiring personal reports, as communications were broken. He displayed great coolness and complete disregard of danger in carrying out his dangerous mission, and throughout the operations his conduct was marked by great gallantry and presence of mind.

CARR, GRAHAM, M.C., Temporary Capt., Machine Gun Corps (Motor) (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a motor battery in the pursuit. His was the first party to enter an enemy town where, in spite of the resistance offered, he captured a number of prisoners. Later, he carried out a daring raid into the enemy's country, and took several prisoners 73 miles from his starting point.

CLARKE, ALFRED DAVID CONRAD, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery (Special Reserve), attached C/122nd Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on many occasions throughout a ten days' advance. He carried out most daring reconnaissances under heavy shell and machine-gun fire of routes and positions up to within 300 yards of the enemy. When the enemy were retiring he maintained observation from advanced observation posts, and they were frequently cut up by our fire. He kept his battery in close support of the infantry, coming into action with amazing rapidity under very heavy fire. His energy and coolness were invaluable.

CLARKE, JOSEPH, M.C., Temporary Lieut., Drake Batta. Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He led forward the scouts, and it was largely due to his energy and pluck that the correct direction of the battalion was maintained under heavy fire. He and his party were responsible for the capture of several machine guns, one of which he put out of action single-handed. His services throughout were of the greatest value, while his energy and courage were most marked.

COCKBURN, JOHN BRYDGES, Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Batta. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, while commanding his battalion in mopping up a wide area infested by machine guns, was wounded at point-blank range by a machine gun. He kept on superintending the work until the whole area was cleared, more than 500 prisoners and 50 machine guns being captured. His courage and endurance were a splendid example to his men.

COMBE, SYDNEY BOYCE, M.C., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, 47th Sikhs (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out a reconnaissance of the enemy's position under heavy fire, pushed back the enemy piquets, and assaulted and carried the whole of his objective, three lines of the enemy trenches. Later, though having suffered heavy casualties in officers and men, he successfully beat off a counter-attack. He has shown great judgment and ability in command on all occasions.

COTTON, RONALD EGERTON, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 7th Batta. Yorkshire Regt., attached 10th Batta. Lancashire Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When a counter-attack by the enemy threatened to envelop the right flank of two battalions, he went forward and restored the situation. This was the second occasion of his defeating a counter-attack, as he had previously, while reconnoitring in the front line, discovered the enemy concentrating, and by promptly organizing battalion headquarters and a machine-gun section, dispersed them. His energy and courage on these two occasions, both under heavy fire of all descriptions, were a fine example to his men.

DANIEL, JAMES ARTHUR, M.C. (Christian name corrected to James Alfred), Capt., Welsh Regt., attached 15th Batta. (temporarily attached 14th Batta.). For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He organized a patrol and advanced covering party, who established a bridgehead and covered the crossing over the river of the remainder of the battalion, enabling them to start the attack punctually. He subsequently dealt with some enemy machine guns, and brought on the rear companies to the final objective. It was largely due to his personal influence and power of command that the advance was so successful.

DEWAR, RONALD, Second Lieut., Manchester Regt., Special Reserve, attached 12th Batta. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. This officer took command of a company after the second day of the attack, and received the main shock of an enemy counter-attack. He was twice taken prisoner and escaped, but was driven from his position, and had to reform the remnants of his company to form a defensive flank, preventing the enemy from surrounding the battalion. He held his position until relieved, again beating off a third counter-attack at 6 p.m. His skill and determined courage were admirable.

DICK, HAROLD WATSON, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), attached West Yorkshire Regt., attached 1/5th Batta. East Lancashire Regt., Territorial Force. During an attack he commanded an assaulting company, which at one time was held up by enfilade fire. Taking three men with him, he rushed the enemy post, personally killing the officer in charge, whilst his men caused other casualties. The remainder of the garrison, 40 in number, then surrendered to him. His fearless leadership and clever tactical handling of his command were an inspiring example to all.

ELLIS, CHARLES GEORGE HOWSON, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 5th Batta. West Riding Regt., Territorial Force. During an attack he was in command of a company considerably in advance of the troops on his right, when a determined hostile counter-attack at one time pierced the line. With great courage and ability, he at once led his reserves into the gap, threw the enemy back, and restored the position at a most critical time. Later, in command of two companies, he attacked a strongly-fortified system of trenches under heavy shell fire, and by his complete disregard of danger and inspiring example was largely responsible for the success of the attack.

FARRELL, VALENTINE JOSEPH, M.C., Capt., Leinster Regt., Special Reserve, attached 2nd Batta. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership in an attack. In command of a company in reserve, he rushed forward at a time when the advance was held up and cleared up several enemy machine-gun positions on the flank, thereby enabling the whole line to move forward and reach the final objective. Afterwards he reorganized the whole line and sent back valuable information regarding the situation. He did splendid work.

GELDARD, NICHOLAS, M.C., Capt., 6th Batta. (attached 2/4th Batta.) West Riding Regt., Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack, when he continually went along the front line, showing the highest courage and skill in directing operations and in keeping in touch with the situation. Although meeting with strong opposition, the operations were successful, and over 150 prisoners taken. His leadership throughout was splendid, and his example kept the morale of his men in a very high state. He was severely wounded.

GOODLAND, HERBERT THOMAS, Temporary Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Berkshire Regt., Commanding 5th Batta. For conspicuous gallantry, coolness and devotion to duty. He led his battalion, which had been in reserve, through a heavy enemy barrage, to reinforce the firing line, and by so doing filled up a dangerous gap and stopped the advance of the enemy. He then personally supervised the consolidation of a vital position under direct fire from machine guns and field guns firing with open sights.

GORDON, JOHN KEILY, Major, "S" Battery, Royal Horse Artillery (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battery with marked skill and ability when subjected to heavy enemy shelling. The good shooting of his battery, and its steadiness in action, were largely due to his coolness and personal influence.

GRAHAM, CHARLES JAMES, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), 2/4th Batta. London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During two days' hard fighting he was untiring in his efforts in reconnoitring the front of two brigades, and the information he was able to procure of the absence of the enemy in certain strong points was of the greatest value. He was continually exposed to heavy machine-gun and sniping fire, and his coolness and presence of mind were admirable.

HARRIS, JOSEPH ORLANDO, Temporary Sub-Lieut., Hawke Batta. Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, Royal Naval Division. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. When the advance was checked by heavy machine-gun fire he led his men forward, successfully capturing the machine-gun post and enabling the other companies to advance. Later, he led a party against a bridgehead and captured it, himself charging two machine-gun positions and killing the crews. He set a splendid example of courage and determined leadership.

HOLROYD-SMYTH, CHARLES EDWARD RIDLEY, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Reserve of Officers, 3rd Dragoon Guards, Commanding 15th Batta. Durham Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership while commanding the battalion in an attack. When the situation was doubtful he went forward to the advanced posts under heavy fire to ascertain the position. Previously he had taken charge of the brigade, and, although surrounded, the brigade overcame the enemy resistance, and was largely instrumental in the capture of a village, together with a number of prisoners and a quantity of stores.

HUTTENBACH, NORMAN HUGH, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), 120th Battery, 27th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership. During a fortnight's hard fighting he led the artillery brigade of which he was temporarily in command with great courage and remarkable skill, affording much support to the infantry, whose success was in no small way due to the effective fire of his guns, which he brought into action in an unusually short time after advances of often some miles.

KELLY, GEORGE CHARLES, Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), King's Royal Rifle Corps, Commanding 2nd Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his brigade met with unexpected resistance he promptly made a personal reconnaissance, and, by handling his brigade in a masterly way under very heavy fire, gained his objective and repulsed several counter-attacks. His powers of command and brilliant example were admirable.

LAKE, BASIL CHARLES, Capt., King's Own Scottish Borderers (Brigade Major, 13th Infantry Brigade). For conspicuous gallantry while commanding a battalion during an attack. Learning that, through casualties, one company was without orders, he immediately went forward and gave the orders personally and led the company and battalion forward. Though early wounded, he continued to lead the battalion until shot a second time, his leg being then broken. Even then he refused to be carried away until certain that the attack had succeeded. He showed marked courage and devotion to duty.

LAMONBY, LAWRENCE, Major, Border Regt., attached 1/4th Batta. Dorsetshire Regt., Territorial Force (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great coolness and ability under heavy fire. His initiative and dash enabled the attack to be carried through to a successful conclusion.

LAMONT, GEOFFREY SIMPSON, Second Lieut., Grenadier Guards, Special Reserve, attached 1st Batta. For three days of continuous fighting he showed a supreme contempt of danger, and infused courage in all around him. Throughout an attack he commanded the leading wave, and despite heavy machine-gun fire and thick belts of wire, he never allowed the pace to be checked. Undoubtedly the speed of the advance enabled a commanding position to be captured, with nearly 200 prisoners and 15 machine guns, and at small loss. Later, when with seven men he was surrounded by large numbers of the enemy, he maintained his position for several hours against repeated attacks, and finally effected his escape and joined in a further advance.

LEE, CHARLES HECTOR, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Gordon Highlanders, Special Reserve, attached 1st Batta. It was owing to his courage and skill that during two days of severe fighting his company was enabled to capture 12 machine guns and 80 prisoners. On another occasion he carried out a daring reconnaissance under continuously heavy fire over most exposed country, and sent in very valuable information. His company was on an exposed flank for five days, and his gallantry and fine leadership were of the greatest value to the brigade.

LOWCOCK, ALFRED, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Major), Royal Field Artillery, attached B/223rd (Home Counties) Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During operations lasting eight days he rendered valuable and conspicuous services by the manner in which he kept his battery continually in close support of the infantry. On one occasion, when the enemy were counter-attacking with determination, he went forward and directed the fire of the whole brigade with great effect, and broke up the attack. Later on he was hit by a machine-gun bullet, but returned to brigade headquarters and remained at duty. He set a very fine example of fortitude and endurance throughout.

LUXMOORE-BALL, RICHARD EDMUND CORYNDON, Lieut. (Acting Major), Welsh Guards, Special Reserve, attached 1st Batta. When in command of his battalion during several days of severe fighting, he was invariably in the front line, superintending operations, without the slightest regard for personal danger. On one occasion, prior to an assault, he walked about in the open, in spite of heavy hostile fire, placing the men in their assembly positions, and the great success achieved by the battalion was mainly due to the splendid example set by him.

MCCREADY, THOMAS ROBERT, M.C., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, Commanding 63rd Batta. Machine Gun Corps, Temporary Major, Royal Marines. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership during an advance. In addition to carrying out several reconnaissances he commanded his machine-gun battalion most ably. When the infantry were checked by machine-gun fire he brought his companies into action, and directed fire on the points of resistance so successfully that the infantry were enabled to advance, and by capturing a ridge ensure the success of the operation.

MITCHELL, WILFRID JAMES, Lieut.-Colonel, 2/124th Baluchistan Infantry (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion most skillfully in the attack, and in spite of heavy casualties from a strong point on his flank, succeeded in capturing his objective. His courage and perseverance on this occasion were most marked.

NAGLE, WILLIAM JOHN, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 2nd Batta. Suffolk Regt. When ordered, during operations, to clear a trench area infested with machine guns and holding up an advance, he displayed the greatest courage and determination in leading his company. He cleared over a mile of trench line and sunken roads, and was responsible for the capture of over 200 prisoners and many machine guns. His utter disregard of danger and fine example were primarily responsible for the success of the operation.

NEWTRAD, BASIL RALPH, Lieut., 1st Batta. Northumberland Fusiliers. His company having been ordered to attack a very strong position which had held up the attacking battalion all day, he made a gallant personal reconnaissance, whereby he was able to dispose his company in so favourable a position that not only were all the objectives gained, and many prisoners and machine guns taken, but patrols were pushed out, enabling the whole original objectives of the brigade to be occupied without further loss. His courage and inspiring example were of a very high order.

NOAKES, SYDNEY MAPLEDSEN, Major, C/178th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an advance. He made a daring reconnaissance by day to locate our advanced posts, and also a concealed enemy machine-gun nest. He drew the fire of the nest and then returned and turned his battery on it, knocking out the position and establishing and consolidating the line of posts. He did fine work.

NORTHCOTE, RICHARD, Temporary Second Lieut., 17th Batta. Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative. This officer with his section was attached to the left leading battalion of the division. On the objective being gained, the enemy counter-attacked in large numbers, and made a gap; the forward troops were being rapidly surrounded, and this officer undoubtedly saved the situation by keeping his guns firing to the front, flank and rear, and in addition manning six Lewis guns and one captured enemy gun. His coolness in keeping the section steady and controlling the fire enabled the infantry to re-form.

PETER, FRED HOBBS, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Welsh Fusiliers, attached 5th Batta. Yorkshire Light Infantry, Territorial Force. During operations lasting several days orders could be received at very short notice, and consequently great responsibility and initiative had to be left to commanding officers. Throughout these operations he was untiring in his efforts to arrange all details and plans, especially on one occasion, when he had to proceed through a heavy barrage, including gas, which affected him, to settle details for immediate operations which, mainly owing to his ability and courage, were successful.

POWELL, HENRY LLOYD, Lieut.-Colonel, 215th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, Territorial Force (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his brigade in a bold and intrepid manner in spite of heavy hostile shelling, and conformed to an ever-changing situation with skill and rapidity.

ROBERTSON, DOUGLAS WILLIAM, M.C., Temporary Second Lieut., 1st Batta. King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer advanced alone to reconnoitre the line of advance for his platoon under intense machine-gun fire, then returned and led his men forward section by section, being wounded in the face while doing so. He refused to leave, but led his men forward to the first objective. He was then hit through the chest and lungs, but continued to hobble forward, disposing his men well in advance of their objective. By this time 11 out of 20 men were wounded, but he had so cowed the enemy by his determination that they began to stream forward with their hands up. The capture of this position was the key to the enemy's defence. He was primarily responsible for the capture of at least 90 prisoners and some 20 machine guns.

SAGAR, ARNOLD LESLIE, Temporary Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 8th Batta. East Lancashire Regt., attached 13th Batta. King's Royal Rifle Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer got his company into position for the attack despite heavy shelling, then, leading the front wave, he gained his objective. When held up at a strong point, he crawled out with a Lewis gun and one man to a flank, enfilading it with such success that 40 prisoners, two machine guns and one trench mortar were captured. During the ensuing 36 hours his company beat off three determined counter-attacks with heavy loss. He also led a bombing party, clearing a trench and killing or capturing the whole of the enemy. He showed exceptional qualities as a leader.

SCOTT, THOMAS HENRY, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 14th Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the vicinity of his advanced dressing station was being heavily shelled, it was due to his coolness and able management that a number of stretcher and walking cases were evacuated quickly and smoothly. His foresight and organization were mainly responsible for the very large numbers of officers and men successfully evacuated during this period under most difficult conditions.

SIMMONDS, TOM, M.C., D.C.M., Temporary Sub-Lieut., Drake Batta. Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He rallied his company under heavy fire and rushed a machine-gun nest, capturing many prisoners and machine guns. After taking his final objective he pushed on and captured a convoy consisting of two large field guns, ammunition limbers and an ambulance wagon, together with many prisoners. He also captured the whole of a party of one officer and 70 men, with transport. Throughout two days' operations he was continually performing gallant acts, and his courage and cheerfulness were a splendid example to his men.

SPENCER, GEORGE ERNEST, Temporary Second Lieut., Yorkshire Light Infantry, attached 2/4th Batta. Territorial Force. When his battalion, moving to positions prior to an attack, was located by low-flying aeroplanes, the courage and skill he displayed in handling the leading company enabled the battalion to take cover with comparatively light casualties. Later, when the battalion was held up by machine-gun fire and subjected to heavy shelling, the advanced posts being driven in, he called up a Lewis gun section, which promptly got into action, and, shouting for his company to follow, he charged the enemy. His fine example was followed by other companies, the enemy driven back with heavy casualties, and a critical situation restored.

SPICER, LANCELOT DYKES, M.C., Temporary Capt., General List (Brigade Major, 64th Infantry Brigade). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while acting as brigade major during an advance. When the commanding officer was wounded he carried on the immediate reorganization of the brigade and consolidation of the position. His arrangements were very instrumental in causing the defeat of repeated counter-attacks. Later, when the force was entirely surrounded, he crawled out and brought back a report of the situation which enabled arrangements to be made for the relief of the brigade.

ST. AUBYN, EDWARD GEOFFREY, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps (Special Reserve), attached 2nd Batta. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded early in the day, he refused to leave his battalion until the fighting died down in the evening. He handled his battalion throughout with marked ability, and superintended the reorganization of his dispositions after the objective had been obtained. The success of the attack was largely due to his determination and to the fighting spirit with which his example inspired the battalion.

STURROCK, WILLIAM DUNCAN, M.D., Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Army Medical Corps, Territorial Force (Salonica). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, when the main surgical ward and operating tent of a field ambulance were wrecked by shell fire, one officer and two other ranks being wounded. He very quickly put matters right, and owing to the excellent arrangements made by him throughout the operations the wounded, in spite of difficult country and lack of roads, were very rapidly collected and evacuated.

SWEET, FRED, Temporary Major, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, attached 13th Batta. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Throughout a month's operations he commanded his battalion with unvarying success, including four separate attacks. On each occasion his careful arrangements and personal reconnaissances under heavy shell and machine-gun fire ensured the comparatively safe progress of the attack. Throughout the whole operations he set a splendid example to his men.

SYKES, ALEXANDER RICHARD, M.C., Temporary Major, Liverpool Regt., attached 14th Batta. and 10th Batta. South Wales Borderers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. After reaching the objective, in command of his battalion, he made a personal reconnaissance under heavy fire and found that the ground in front was only lightly held. This enabled him to advance his battalion to some high ground with very few casualties. Some days later when in support, he handled two companies on the right flank of the brigade with such dash that 40 prisoners, with machine guns, were captured, and the flank secured. He showed great initiative and total disregard of danger.

TABUTEAU, GEORGE GRANT, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), No. 1 Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in supervising the evacuation of casualties during three days' operations under heavy shell fire. He maintained a chain of medical posts in close touch with the battalions of his brigade, and the rapid removal of the wounded was due to his coolness and untiring energy, which inspired his officers and men with confidence.

TAYLOR, THOMAS EDGAR HUGH, M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Regt., attached 10th Battn. Hampshire Regt. (Salonika). For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. When under a very heavy barrage the enemy almost effected a lodgment in a portion of his most advanced position, he personally organized a counter-attack with such troops as were available, with the result that the enemy was driven out and the position maintained intact. Throughout the whole operation he set a fine example of courage and determination to all ranks.

THOMSON, ARTHUR LUMLEY, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Sussex Regt., Commanding 7th Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership while commanding his battalion during an intricate relief. He personally saw every company into position under heavy and continuous shell fire. Throughout the operations the success achieved by his battalion was largely due to his courage, energy and power of command. He was slightly wounded, but remained at duty.

TONKIN, FREDERICK CUTHBERT, M.C., Temporary Lieut. (Temporary Capt.), East Yorkshire Regt., attached 7th Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He led his men with great skill and determination, and personally under heavy machine-gun fire reconnoitred the only crossing across a canal, after which he led his company across and covered the crossing for the remainder of the battalion. Throughout the whole of the operations he displayed great initiative and energy.

TWISLETON-WYKEHAM-FIENNES, NATHANIEL IVO EDWARD, Major, 66th Battery, 4th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although exposed to heavy and accurate fire throughout the day he handled his battery with marked coolness and courage, pushing his guns well forward and inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy.

WALBY, HERBERT CHARLES, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 4th Battn. North Staffordshire Regt., attached 9th Battn. Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry during an attack. He led the support company and eventually came up with the leading waves and took the objective, where he reorganized his men under very heavy fire. In a second attack later in the day his fine example inspired those under him, and when the enemy counter-attacked he personally led forward two platoons to a position from which he could bring fire to bear on them.

WALSH, THEOBALD ALFRED, Major, Somersetshire Light Infantry, attached 9th Battn. Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and ability while carrying out two attacks in command of his battalion. After the first attack he went forward under heavy shell fire and personally reorganized the leading companies; and finding his left flank exposed he crawled out with a M.C.O. across the open under heavy machine-gun fire, got in touch with troops on the left, and then returned and sent forward a platoon to deal with counter-attacks on the flank. His example and courage enabled his battalion to reach its objectives, and when forced to withdraw later he did so most skilfully. Though twice wounded he remained at duty until his battalion was relieved on the following night.

WELCH, ROBERT HALL, Lieut., Royal Lancaster Regt., attached 127th Light Trench Mortar Battery. For conspicuous gallantry, devotion and fine leadership in command of two Stokes gun detachments. Under heavy shell and machine-gun fire he directed and controlled his guns, obtaining many direct hits and causing heavy enemy casualties, and finally leading his men forward he captured several machine guns. After all his ammunition had been expended he rallied the men and, dumping the guns, led them forward with the battalions on either flank and helped to drive back the enemy until the objectives were reached and consolidated.

WILLIAMS, RICHARD DAVID, Temporary Major, 13th Battn. Welsh Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded the leading companies in the attack, gaining the final objectives in spite of stiff opposition, and supervising the consolidation under heavy machine-gun fire. He made a personal reconnaissance of the left flank, and, finding it exposed, made dispositions for its defence, which proved their soundness when the enemy were beaten off in several attacks. For two days he maintained his position in spite of one successful attempt to penetrate his line, which was immediately rectified.

WOODHOUSE, JAMES DUGALD FORBES, Capt. (Acting Major), 14th Hussars (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his squadron with skill, and by his personal ability and coolness under fire materially assisted in beating off the enemy's attack. Later, when his commanding officer became a casualty, he took command of three squadrons, reorganized the line, and made preparations to meet any further attack, being compelled to expose himself to fire at close range in doing so.

WYNE-EDWARDS, ROBERT MEREDYDD, M.C., Temporary Capt., 13th Battn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, while in command of his company in the front line, found another company in difficulties, so, after making a personal reconnaissance, he reorganized it, and got it on to its objective. Later, with his own company of only 35 men, he retook a hostile strong-point of three fortified mounds with deep dug-outs, which the enemy had rushed in the morning. His personal reconnaissance, under machine-gun and rifle fire entirely cleared up an obscure situation.

CANADIAN FORCE.

BELL, JAMES STARK, M.C., Major, 18th Battn. Canadian Infantry, Western Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the officer commanding had become a casualty he took command of the battalion and handled it in critical circumstances with great ability. His fine example of personal courage under heavy fire and his energy encouraged his men and inspired them with great confidence.

BLISS, ROBERT HAMILTON, Capt. (Acting Major), 19th Battn. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and cool courage. This officer was given charge of all the attacking troops of his battalion. Shortly after crossing the enemy front line he received word that his left was held up. He at once organized the troops in the vicinity, leading them personally in the attack against a strong point under heavy machine-gun fire, overcame the opposition, killing all the garrison, and enabling the attack to steadily advance. He rushed with a few men the village, taking numerous prisoners. Later, with only three others, he captured a senior commander and his staff, in all 35, from one building. He then established and organized a line about half a mile in advance. Throughout a heavy mist made his task the more difficult.

BRADBROOKE, GEORGE HOWARD, M.C., Major, 1st Battn. Canadian Mounted Rifles, Saskatchewan Regt. This officer showed great initiative and gallantry in leading his company. During an attack, by his personal handling of the troops under his command, he captured all the objectives without a single casualty. Again, two days afterwards, in an attack on a strong enemy position, he led his company with an utter disregard for his own safety and captured the objective with few casualties. He set a fine example to all ranks.

CARMICHAEL, DOUGALL, M.C., Major, 58th Battn. Canadian Infantry, 2nd Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. During an attack on a village, the battalion being temporarily held up at a sunken road, he quickly made an appreciation of the situation and manoeuvred the attacking companies in such a manner as to overpower the whole of the enemy's front-line positions. At the final objective of the battalion he took a small party forward and captured an enemy regimental headquarters, including 60 prisoners and much valuable information.

CHARLTON, BARTHOLOMEW, Capt. (Acting Major), 43rd Battn. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. During an attack he was in command of a company. A few minutes after zero the enemy placed a heavy barrage upon the assembly area. By his personal example he rallied his men and led them forward. On arriving at his objective it was found that the Tanks had not come up and that the enemy was holding a wood with machine guns and trench mortars. He again led the attack forward, capturing the wood and taking 153 prisoners, 20 trench mortars and numerous machine guns. He set a splendid example to his men, and largely contributed to the success of the operation.

GRAHAM, CHARLES MILTON RICHARDSON, Major, 18th Battn. Canadian Infantry, Western Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his company was ordered to attack a village he went forward and made a personal reconnaissance which enabled him to plan and carry out the assault with very few casualties, although it had to be made through a heavy barrage. He then supervised the organization of the line some 500 yards in front of the village, which greatly facilitated the advance on the right. His courage and initiative were great factors in the success of the operations.

HOOPER, BERTRAM OSMER, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 20th Battn. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded his battalion with great skill during a successful attack, leading some of the units of his command personally under very heavy fire at critical moments. When his men were held up the next day by the stubborn resistance of the enemy, he promptly went to a most forward position and made able dispositions to repel the counter-attack which developed soon afterwards. His presence at points of danger and his fine example had the most encouraging effect on his men.

McCAGHEY, NORMAN FRASER, M.C., Major, 52nd Battn. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion in a successful attack, when his fine courage and initiative were the outstanding features of the occasion. During the enemy counter-attack, when his company was greatly outnumbered, he exposed himself fearlessly in steadying the line, during which time he was severely wounded, and his splendid example largely accounted for the enemy's complete defeat.

PEARKES, GEORGE RANDOLPH, V.C., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 116th Battn. Canadian Infantry, 2nd Central Ontario Regt. This officer handled his battalion in a masterly manner, and, with an enveloping movement, completely baffled and overcame the enemy, who were in a very strong position. He then captured a wood, the final objective, which was about 5,000 yards from the start. Before this, however, the men were becoming exhausted, on observing which he at once went into the attack himself, and, by his splendid and fearless example, put new life into the whole attack, which went forward with a rush and captured 16 enemy guns of all calibres up to 8 inches.

SIFTON, WILFRED VICTOR, Major, 4th Battn. Canadian Mounted Rifles, 1st Central Ontario Regt. Owing to his initiative, and as the result of a personal reconnaissance, he was able to save his company from heavy casualties by taking his men to a new jumping-off place. During an advance of four kilometres under heavy fire he directed the attack of three companies, two company commanders having become casualties, and then organized the battalion outpost line. Throughout the entire action he sent back valuable information to his C.O., and by personal reconnaissance established communications with the flanking units. He set a splendid example to all ranks.

SUTHERLAND, JOHN, Major, 116th Battn. Canadian Infantry, 2nd Central Ontario Regt. During an attack he showed conspicuous gallantry and ability in handling three companies, completely outflanking the enemy, holding the high ground, and succeeding in getting behind them and capturing a wood, taking 12 guns, including a battery of 5.9 howitzers. Throughout he set a fine example of coolness and skill. He rapidly consolidated the position he had won, and prevented the enemy from making a successful counter-attack.

TAYLOR, FREDERICK ARTHUR, Lieut., Canadian Light Horse. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With a patrol of four men he cut off an enemy convoy of four ammunition wagons and 35 men under an officer. The enemy machine guns and infantry prevented him bringing the convoy back to our lines, but he disabled the convoy and it was taken possession of next morning when our line advanced. He displayed great courage and presence of mind in peculiarly difficult circumstances.

TOPP, CHARLES BERESFORD, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), 42nd Battn. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. This officer, acting as second-in-command of the battalion, was in charge of operations in which the battalion bombed its way through a complicated trench system for a distance of a mile, encountering very stiff opposition. When the objective was reached the enemy repeatedly counter-attacked, and was driven off with heavy casualties. The success of the operation was largely due to his great skill, initiative and personal courage, on numerous occasions making reconnaissances of the situation in person.

VANIER, GEORGE PHILLAS, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), 22nd Battn. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As second-in-command he led a portion of the battalion to the attack and capture of a village. The O.C. the battalion being then called to the command of brigade, this officer took charge of the battalion and led it with great skill to the attack and capture of a large village. His courage, example and will to conquer imbued all under him with the finest fighting spirit.

WORRELL, RICHARD, M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 14th Battn. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. Under difficulty of mist he personally led and directed his battalion in the attack and capture of the front-line system of enemy positions, including the guns. He displayed great skill and courage in directing the operations on this and other occasions during which the battalion had lost 23 officer casualties.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

CAMPBELL, JOHN CHARLES, Major, 7th Field Ambulance, Australian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in charge of stretcher-bearers, evacuating all wounded from the right sector of the advance throughout five days' fighting. He kept close behind the infantry and kept in touch with the various medical officers under constant heavy fire. One night a direct hit completely demolished his aid post, but he got his men to a place of safety and continued the evacuation of the wounded. He superintended the work for five days continuously with great courage and persistence, setting a fine example to all under him.

NORMAN, REGINALD HAVILL, M.C., Major, 48th Batta. Australian Imperial Force, attached 12th Australian Infantry Brigade Headquarters. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire; this officer went forward and got into touch with advanced troops, ascertaining their position and establishing liaison between units. He was untiring in his efforts to promote the success of the operation.

PHILLIPS, HERRBERT PETER, M.C., Major, 3rd Australian Pioneer Batta. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer carried out reconnaissances immediately behind the infantry advance, reporting on damaged bridges, etc., and within 24 hours after zero had collected the necessary information for putting the work in hand. He was engaged in this work for three days under heavy shell fire, completing his task under most trying circumstances.

SHORROCK, JAMES, Second Lieut., 28th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer led his platoon in the attack with the greatest dash. On one occasion, well ahead of his men, he jumped into a trench, and single-handed captured 20 men and two machine guns. A few days later, when the advance was held up by a strong point, he worked round to a flank, and again single-handed captured ten men and two machine guns. These most daring actions saved the situation, and enabled the advance to continue.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

KENNEDY, DONALD, M.C., Lieut., 2nd Batta. New Zealand Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Prior to the attack this officer gained valuable information by a reconnaissance, and in the attack he guided his company through a wood, which was partly held by the enemy, and seized the ridge beyond. Although both his flanks were exposed, he beat off a counter-attack. During the following days, with little sleep, continually exposed to shell and machine-gun fire, and in an area deluged by gas, he was in the thick of the fighting, encouraging his men in every way.

London Gazette, 17 Jan. 1919.—"Admiralty, S.W., 17 Jan. 1919.—Honours for Miscellaneous Services. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

RATHBORNE, CHARLES EDWARD HARRY, Wing-Commander, Royal Naval Air Service (Capt., Royal Marine Light Infantry, now Lieut.-Colonel, Royal Air Force.). In recognition of his gallantry and devotion to duty during the course of a long-distance air raid in which he acted as pilot of a fighting machine which formed part of the escort. Wing-Commander Rathborne was brought down whilst protecting the bombing machines, his engine having been put out of action. It was owing to the gallantry and self-sacrifice of this officer and those of the other fighting machines that all the bombing machines returned safely from the raid.

YOUNG, EDWARD HILTON, D.S.C., M.P., Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. In recognition of his services in command of an armoured train during the operations on the Archangel-Vologda Railway on the 14th, 15th and 16th Oct. 1918. This officer displayed great initiative, gallantry and dash, invariably pushing forward as far as possible and causing the enemy armoured train to retire by direct fire.

"Honours for the Mercantile Marine.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer of the Mercantile Marine, in recognition of zeal and devotion to duty shown in carrying on the trade of the country during the war. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

MOFFAT, GEORGE DICKINSON, Capt. (Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve).

London Gazette, 1 Feb. 1919.—"War Office, 1 Feb. 1919. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Second Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

BRYCE, EDWARD DANIEL, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, 2nd Batta. Tank Corps (Capt., East Lancashire Regt.). For conspicuous gallantry in command of battalion of Tanks on 8 Aug. 1918, near Villers-Bretonneux. He followed his Tanks on foot, and went with them under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire to the final objective, a distance of some 10,000 yards. It was owing to his personal direction that his Tank companies were instrumental in capturing all objectives. Throughout the day he showed complete disregard for his personal safety, and set a splendid example of leadership.

(First Bar gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

LUMSDEN, WILLIAM VERNON, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Commanding 9th Batta. Scottish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the 9½ miles' advance east of Ypres from 28 Sept. to 5 Oct. 1918. The first day his battalion was one of the leading assault battalions, and advanced five miles on to the southern end of the Passchendaele Ridge, capturing 11 guns and 250 prisoners. He was in the thick of the fighting, although suffering from malaria at the time. The following day the battalion again advanced under his leadership against frontal and enfilade machine-gun fire, and in the evening, when he found that Dadizele could not be reached by troops on his right, he deflected his advance, and along with other troops captured it.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

(First Bar gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

PETERSON, ARTHUR JAMES, D.S.O., Temporary Major, A/86th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry on the night of 29 Aug. 1918, near Marcourt, while selecting a new forward position. The enemy suddenly opened a heavy burst of shelling on the new position which his battery was approaching, and he rushed out of cover to haul the teams away from the shelling, being severely wounded in doing so. Notwithstanding his wound, he selected another position, brought his guns into action, and laid out the lines of fire. He then personally reported to headquarters, giving the location of his battery position before being taken to the dressing station.

(D.S.O. gazetted 25 Aug. 1918.)

(First Bar gazetted 26 Sept. 1917.)

RIGG, EDWARD HARRISON, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Batta. Yorkshire Light Infantry, attached 10th Batta. East Yorkshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership on 29 and 30 Sept. 1918. When the attack south through Ploegsteert Wood was held up, he reconnoitred the front under heavy machine-gun and shell fire, and located the positions of the posts. It was due to his fine work that the wood was cleared of the enemy and the line advanced to the Warnave River. All his company commanders were casualties, and the battalion had suffered heavy casualties, but he showed absolute disregard of danger, personally leading his patrols forward.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

(First Bar gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

GILSON, WILLIAM FORBES, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 7th Batta. Canadian Infantry, British Columbia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and ability to command. He captured with his battalion, on 2 Sept. 1918, the Drocourt-Quéant line, together with 600 prisoners, his bold and able leadership in face of heavy machine-gun fire overcoming all opposition with minimum losses. Later in the day, under heavy artillery and machine fire, he went forward and personally established his new line.

(Bar gazetted 7 Nov. 1918.)

MACDONALD, ERIC WHIDDEN, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 10th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Alberta Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Before Arras on 2 Sept. 1918, the battalion commanded by him captured three villages, a switch trench line, and reached the west bank of a canal. Early in the day, before the attack, and again in the afternoon, he made personal reconnaissances over fire-swept ground, gaining first-hand information which enabled him to handle his men and direct the fire of his guns with remarkable success. His fine leadership, coolness, and disregard of danger, carried his men along with him.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

(Bar gazetted 7 Nov. 1918.)

McLAUGHLIN, LORNE TALBOT, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 2nd Batta. Canadian Infantry, East Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On the morning of the 30th Aug. 1918, between Hendecourt and Vis-en-Artois, while reconnoitring a position which had just been gained, he observed the development of a counter-attack by the enemy, which caused some retirements and confusion in our ranks. He at once organized a counter-stroke, first checking, and finally driving the enemy back in confusion. His energetic personality, coupled with gallant leading, encouraged all ranks, and was entirely responsible for the reconstitution of the line.

(D.S.O. gazetted 14 Nov. 1916.)

(First Bar gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

SPARLING, ALBERT WALTER, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 1st Batta. Canadian Infantry, Western Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty north of Hendecourt on 30 Aug. 1918, and in the neighbourhood of Cagnicourt on 2 and 3 Sept. This officer was the only surviving Lieutenant-Colonel, all other senior field officers having become casualties. He was twice ordered to deal with serious situations on the brigade front, first, in the case of an enemy counter-attack, and a few days later when there was some confusion and loss of direction of our troops. In dealing with these matters he had to cross open ground and appreciate the situation under heavy fire. His conduct and example inspired all ranks to a successful completion of their tasks.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1917.)

(First Bar gazetted 2 Dec. 1918.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

MARSHALL, NORMAN, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 54th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry in the handling of his battalion. Between 1 and 3 Sept. 1918, he captured the greater part of Peronne, after fierce enemy opposition, personally organizing the attack on the ramparts and the mopping-up of the town. Through his splendid energy and example to his men the town was held, and three guns and about 600 prisoners captured by his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 19 Nov. 1917.)

(Bar gazetted 16 Sept. 1918.)

Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

AHERN, DAVID, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), No. 11 Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty from 30 Aug. to 3 Sept. 1918, during operations on the Arras front. He was responsible for the clearing of casualties from the divisional front. He showed great forethought in selecting sites for his forward posts, especially in establishing one post in a village which proved of the utmost value as an A.D.S. later on. He was wounded while at his work, but refused to leave until the conclusion of operations. His energy and resource were instrumental in the prompt evacuation of the wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

BACKHOUSE, MILES REGINALD CHARLES, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Northumberland Hussars, Commanding 8th Batta. Yorkshire Regt. (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry and leadership. Near the Pieve river during the period 27-29 Oct. 1918, he commanded his battalion with great ability and success. He led his battalion across the Pieve under heavy machine-gun fire and reached his final objective at the correct hour, capturing many prisoners and many guns. On the 23rd he pushed forward and made a long advance. On the 29th he forced a passage of the Monticiana river against strong resistance from greatly superior numbers, and during the day took over 600 prisoners. Throughout the three days' fighting he showed courage and leadership of a high order.

(D.S.O. gazetted 31 Oct. 1902.)

BARTON, PATTERSON, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Headquarters 41st Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and skill in handling his battalion near Rumilly in the action of 8 Oct. 1918. On the previous day he had reconnoitred a forward position close to the front line. In the morning, after the opening barrage, he led his batteries forward with such skill that, although the whole route, including the bridges over the canal, was being heavily shelled, the whole brigade was in action again within an hour. He was wounded while organizing the forward position.

(D.S.O. gazetted 23 June, 1915.)

BROOK, FRANK, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 4th Batta. Yorkshire Light Infantry, Territorial Force, Commanding 2/4th Batta. Hampshire Regt., Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership at Marcoling on 28 Sept. 1918, in command of one of two battalions detailed to take Marcoling and the bridge beyond. Owing to an order miscarrying, the other battalion (detailed to take the first objective) did not jump off in turn. Whereupon, after rapidly issuing fresh orders, he took both the village and the bridge beyond, thus preventing delay in the attack. On 30 Sept., when the enemy had gained a footing in our front line, he organized two local bombing attacks successfully with absolute disregard of danger.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

BULLOCK, LAWRENCE NEWSAM BEVERLEY, D.S.O., Temporary Major, 9th Batta. South Staffordshire Regt. (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Prior to the operations on the River Piave, from 23 to 27

Oct. 1918, he was entrusted with arrangements for transfer of troops from the right bank to the Island of Grave de Papadopoli, maintenance of the passage, and control of the crossing of further men and material. His duties were most ably carried out under difficult conditions and considerable shell fire. The success of the division was to a great extent due to his resource and untiring energy. (D.S.O. gazetted 15 Feb. 1917.)

BURNYEAT, RICHARD WHITESIDE, D.S.O., Major, "A" Battery, 102nd Brigade, Royal Field Artillery, Territorial Force (Italy). During the period from 26 Oct. to 2 Nov. 1918, including the passage of the Piave, when his battery came under heavy shell-fire and the bridge was broken by enemy bombs, he showed great judgment and coolness in getting his battery across with few casualties. Later, in support of the Infantry, he always went forward himself at the earliest moment, selecting O.P.'s and carrying out his tasks very often under heavy machine-gun fire. His gallantry was most marked when the Infantry were held up at Sacile village. (D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

CAMPBELL, JAMES ALEXANDER, D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Suffolk Regt., attached East Lancashire Regt. (Salonica). For conspicuous gallantry in the field. He led his battalion in an attack on enemy trenches in Jackson's Ravine on 19 Sept. 1918. While doing so he was wounded, but continued in command. After the first attempt failed he reorganized the battalion and again attacked, but was severely wounded in the advance. Finding his flanks open, and being exposed on all sides to heavy machine-gun fire, he ordered a withdrawal, continuing in command until he was no longer capable of action. He set a fine example of courage and initiative to all under his command. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

CARDEW, GEORGE AMBROSE, C.M.G., D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, Headquarters 190th Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 28 Sept. 1918, south of Ypres, when on reconnaissance after the initial attack with a view to the guns of his brigade advancing. Although knocked down, much shaken, and slightly wounded by a bursting shell, he not only continued his reconnaissance, but by his example during the day, and succeeding days, inspired all ranks under his command, and contributed largely to the success of the operations. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

CHEAPE, GEORGE RONALD HAMILTON, D.S.O., M.C., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), 1st Dragoon Guards, Commanding 86th Infantry Brigade. During operations near Gheluvelt, on the 28th Sept. 1918, his personal gallantry inspired all ranks of the brigade. He was always to be found with the leading troops, directing and encouraging them. The success of the operations of his brigade was largely due to his leadership and courage. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

DOBBS, RICHARD CONWAY, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Fusiliers, attached South Wales Borderers (Salonica). For conspicuous gallantry in the attack on Visoka Cuka on 25 Sept. 1918, in command of the right column of the attack. After reforming his command, which was heavily shelled at the start, he succeeded in reaching a point more than three-quarters of the way up the mountain, where he held on for 24 hours unsupported under rifle and Lewis-gun fire. It was owing to his personal example and determined leadership that the operations were greatly facilitated and the hill eventually taken with little opposition. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

FESTING, HAROLD ENGLAND, D.S.O., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Bn. Border Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was the first commanding officer to reach the high ground west of Gheluvelt on 28 Sept. 1918, at once reorganizing his battalion and selecting a good defensive position. On the 30th he led a rapid advance of about a mile under cross machine-gun fire, without artillery help, and then personally went forward to reconnoitre. He maintained his position until relieved, and showed fine tactical capacity. (D.S.O. gazetted 2 May, 1916.)

FRASER, ALEXANDER DONALD, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), No. 9 Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in charge of bearer divisions during the operations in the neighbourhood of Moyenneville—Erville—St. Leger from 21 to 28 Aug. 1918, and was continually among the leading troops under heavy shell and machine-gun fire directing the evacuation of wounded from R.A.P.'s. He managed to get ambulance cars close up to the firing line, which greatly accelerated the clearing of casualties to the rear. He was untiring throughout the whole period, and set a fine example to those under him. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

FREYBERG, BERNARD CYRIL, V.C., D.S.O., Capt. and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Royal West Surrey Regt., Commanding 88th Infantry Brigade. He showed himself a fearless and resourceful commander. The success of the operations of his brigade near Gheluvelt on the 28th Sept. and the following days was largely owing to his inspiring example. Wherever the fighting was hardest he was always to be found encouraging and directing his troops. (D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1915.)

GOODWIN, WILLIAM RICHARD, D.S.O., Temporary Lieut.-Colonel, 12th Bn. Royal Irish Rifles. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Dadizele on 30 Sept. 1918. He went forward to rally his reserve company, which was being held up by machine-gun fire, and led them on, capturing Twig Farm, 25 prisoners and several machine guns. He then reorganized and drove the enemy out of a wood near the farm, capturing more machine guns. He then returned for more men, and while he was away the enemy counter-attacked in force. The confidence with which he inspired his men was largely responsible for this success. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

GRAEME, JAMES ARCHIBALD, D.S.O., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Engineers (Commanding Royal Engineers, 63rd Division). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the night of 28-29 Sept. 1918, near Cantalla. He selected a site and supervised the erection of a pontoon bridge over the Canal de l'Escant, and a footbridge across the Escant River, which was inoffensive. The approaches to the banks of the canal and river were at the time swarted by machine-gun fire, and the construction of these bridges made the subsequent operations possible. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

GROUNDS, GEORGE AMBROSE, D.S.O., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), 8th Bn. Tank Corps. On the night of 10-11 Aug. 1918, during the operations near Prozat, for conspicuous gallantry in charge of two sections of Tanks co-operating with the Infantry. When some confusion was caused among the latter by heavy machine-gun fire in the darkness he went forward with complete disregard of danger, and reorganized the column, keeping the leading Tanks in action for an hour and a half after the Infantry had withdrawn. He remained out alone for some time after the last Tank had withdrawn to ensure getting accurate touch with the situation. (D.S.O. gazetted 18 Feb. 1918.)

HARMAN, CHARLES, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Leinster Regt., attached 4th Bn. Bedfordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership in the attack on Canal du Nord on 27 Sept. 1918, resulting in the capture of 700 prisoners, five guns and many machine guns. When the right half of the battalion was held up by heavy machine-gun fire, and the left half, which had advanced, exposed to reverse fire from a strong point, he led battalion headquarters against it, capturing two officers, 95 men and five machine guns. He showed fine determination and fighting qualities in the subsequent consolidation under heavy fire. (D.S.O. gazetted 10 Jan. 1917.)

HOLFORD, JAMES HENRY EDWARD, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Nottinghamshire Yeomanry, attached 12th Bn. Durham Light Infantry (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of a battalion during the operations on the Piave from 27 to 30 Oct. 1918. Under heavy machine-gun fire he frequently reorganized his battalion and led them forward to their next objective, showing a total disregard for his own safety. His courage and able leadership were most marked. (D.S.O. gazetted 15 Jan. 1901.)

IRVINE, ALFRED ERNEST, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Durham Light Infantry, Commanding 12th Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 8 and 9 Sept. 1918, near Havrincourt. The plans for attack on the village necessitated the possession of a slag heap known to be held by the enemy. Pushing out patrols to locate the exact position of the enemy, he went out himself, and with his intelligence officer, made a personal reconnaissance about 200 yards in front of the outposts to the top of the slag heap, and as he was not fired on ordered the patrols to push on there. The next morning he again went up to the outpost line, and reconnoitred some 250 yards beyond under constant sniping. The knowledge he gained enabled him to capture a post and light field gun, and his personal determination cleared up the situation. (D.S.O. gazetted 31 May, 1916.)

JACKSON, GEORGE HANBURY NOBLE, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Brigadier-General), Border Regt., Commanding 87th Infantry Brigade. For great gallantry and resource in the operations near Gheluvelt on the 28th Sept. 1918, and the following days. Whenever circumstances were in the least difficult he was always to be found with the leading troops fearlessly exposing himself and inspiring all ranks by his example. (D.S.O. gazetted 27 Sept. 1901.)

KELLETT, JOHN PHILIP, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1/2nd Bn. London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and able leading of his battalion on 27 Sept. 1918, at the crossing of the Canal du Nord during the attack near Oisy-le-Verger. The villages and enclosed ground were occupied by a large number of machine-gun posts, which threatened to hold up a rather thin attack. By quick and skilful manoeuvring he reduced the centres of resistance one after the other, capturing a number of prisoners well in excess of his own losses. (D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

MORRIS, CHARLES READ, MUNROE, D.S.O., M.B., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 99th Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps. For exceptional gallantry and devotion to duty on 20 to 24 Sept. south-west of Villers Gislain, in working continually for five days under heavy shell fire, supervising and co-ordinating the work of the Medical Officers while at work at night in the advanced dressing station. It was twice blown in by shell burst. He carried out important surgical work, and by his pluck and endurance set a fine example to all around him. (D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

O'CONNOR, RICHARD NUGENT, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. and Brevet Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Scottish Rifles, attached 2nd Bn. Honourable Artillery Company (Italy). He was entrusted with the command of the troops detailed to capture the Island of Papadopoli on 24 Oct. 1918. By his personal careful reconnaissance and plans for attack the whole island was captured, together with some 600 prisoners, with small loss to his battalion. The operations were carried out at night in two phases under most difficult conditions; in the second phase he, with a few of his battalion headquarters, came across an enemy point manned by some 60 men and two officers, and immediately charged them and caused the whole garrison to surrender. By his most gallant and able leadership in these operations, the crossing of troops for the main attack was carried out without loss. (D.S.O. gazetted 16 Aug. 1917.)

PETER, FRED HARRIS, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers, attached 5th Bn. Yorkshire Light Infantry, Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and ability in command of his battalion at Havrincourt, 12-14 Sept. 1918. It was chiefly owing to his arrangements that, in spite of heavy fire, the battalion reached its objective with few casualties. After a heavy counter-attack he successfully cleared the village and took over a 500 yards' frontage facing a different way. After a second counter-attack, when units were mixed, he reorganized the line under heavy bombardment and held it. (D.S.O. gazetted 11 Jan. 1919.)

RITCHIE, THE HONOURABLE HAROLD, D.S.O., Temporary Major, 11th Bn. Scottish Rifles, attached 1st Bn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack south of Villers Gislain on 21 Sept. 1918. When he heard that his men were held up by uncut wire and a machine-gun barrage, nearly all the officers being casualties, he went forward and led the attack. In doing so he was wounded, and after he had had the wound dressed again went forward and directed his men in repelling a counter-attack, until he had to be sent to the dressing station. His grit and endurance were a fine example. (D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

ROME, CHARLES LESLIE, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 11th Hussars, attached 3rd Dragoon Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership of his regiment when ordered to capture Honnechy and the high ground east of it on 18 Oct. His quick appreciation and dash enabled the regiment to seize its objective in spite of extreme shelling and enfilade machine-gun fire. Shortly afterwards he was wounded and rendered unconscious when organizing a further advance. On regaining consciousness he insisted on remaining to give the brigadier a clear report of the situation, and only went to the dressing station when ordered to do so. The capture of Honnechy, which was entirely due to his initiative, had a most important bearing on subsequent operations. (D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

UTTERSON KELS, JOHN EDWARD, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Bn. Royal Scots Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the 9½ miles' advance east of Ypres from 28 Sept. to 5 Oct. 1918. His battalion was one of the leading assault battalions in a five miles' advance on to the southern end of Passchendaele Ridge. Although he was knocked down by a shell and severely shaken, he continued in command, refusing to leave. The battalion captured several guns and 200 prisoners. The next day, at a critical period when the front line was held up, he pushed forward his battalion, which was then in support, and relieved the situation. (D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

WALSH, THEOBALD ALFRED, D.S.O., Major, Somersetshire Light Infantry attached 9th Battn. Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership at Villers Guislain on 19 Sept. 1918. The battalion which he commanded captured the whole of its final objective. When the enemy counter-attacked the troops on his left, driving them back, he collected 25 men of his Headquarters company and, with a cheer, led them straight into the enemy's flank, driving them back in disorder. He was hit in the leg, but waved the men on as he lay on the ground, and saved a critical situation.

WEST, ALEXANDER HENRY DELAP, D.S.O., Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 5th Army Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and ability on 25 and 26 Aug. 1918, in handling two brigades of artillery during the operations south of the Somme which resulted in the capture of Château Wood and Olymona Wood, an advance of some 3,000 yards. In spite of a very heavy barrage, he personally handled his brigade, and in a difficult operation contributed largely to the success of the infantry. He showed marked courage and ability to command.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

CANADIAN FORCE.

EWING, ROYAL LINDSAY HAMILTON, D.S.O., M.C., Major, 42nd Battn. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of his battalion throughout the operations south of the Scarpe, which resulted in the capture of Jigsaw Wood, 26 to 28 Aug. 1918. His gallantry and able leadership ensured the attainment of objectives upon which rested the success of the brigade. He showed marked initiative and an absolute disregard of personal danger.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

MCDONALD, JOHN ANGUS, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 3rd Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry on 2 Sept. during the attack east of Arras. He went forward with his brigade in close support of the advancing infantry. He reconnoitred positions for his batteries under heavy shell and machine-gun fire, and set a splendid example by his personal disregard of danger and determination to push forward. The batteries went forward with great dash, and effective fire was brought to bear on many targets, including enemy strong points and hostile batteries. His skilful leadership and the work of his brigade gave the greatest confidence to the attacking infantry.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

McEACHERN, NORMAN ANGUS, D.S.O., Lieut., 10th Battn. Canadian Infantry, Alberta Regt. For conspicuous gallantry at Villers-le-Cagnicourt, Bury Switch and the Canal-du-Nord from 2 to 4 Sept. 1918. He led his own company, and at times two others, brilliantly, pushing ahead in face of heavy fire, and beating down all opposition. After making a daring reconnaissance at the head of a patrol, he led his company first to the final objective, where a line was established. Shortly afterwards he was severely wounded. He set a fine example of courage and leadership to all.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 Oct. 1917.)

PYMAN, COLIN KEITH LEE, D.S.O., Major, 5th Canadian Battn., Saskatchewan Regt. For great skill and gallantry while acting as second-in-command of the battalion between the 7th and 9th Aug. 1918, during the advance on Aubercourt. When the line became much weakened through casualties, he collected men together, and, after a vigorous fight, placed them in the gaps. He was instrumental in capturing a field gun and a number of prisoners, and on another occasion in throwing out a protecting flank, thus enabling the advance to continue. He was wounded on the 9th within 50 yards of the final objective.

(D.S.O. gazetted 15 Oct. 1918.)

RANKIN, JAMES SABISTON, D.S.O., Major, 46th Battn. Canadian Infantry, Saskatchewan Regt. In front of Dury, on 2 Sept., he was in command of the battalion during the successful capture of the village. Later, the enemy launched a heavy counter-attack against the posts to the east of the village, causing them and the adjoining posts to withdraw, and gaining a footing in the position immediately to the east and threatening the village. He showed splendid resource and courage, and went forward, under heavy machine-gun fire, to investigate the situation. He successfully organized and launched a counter-attack from the companies in support of his battalion, and succeeded in restoring the situation.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

SHEARER, GEORGE WYMAN, D.S.O., Major, 11th Battery, 3rd Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and determination whilst in support of the attacking infantry after the capture of the Drocourt-Quéant Line on 2 Sept. 1918. He pushed his battery forward and established his observation post south of the windmill on Mount Dury, which was under intense shelling and machine-gun fire. Although wounded, he directed his battery with skill and courage throughout, dealing effectively with hostile machine guns, batteries and enemy troops in the open, remaining on Mount Dury for 18 hours after he was wounded.

(D.S.O. gazetted 3 June, 1918.)

TUDOR, LORN PAULET OWEN, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 5th Battn. Canadian Infantry, Saskatchewan Regt. On 1 Sept. 1918, for conspicuous gallantry and ability to command. When the enemy had penetrated several hundred yards of the newly-won positions east of the Hendecourt-Dury Road, this officer launched his battalion in a successful counter-attack, regaining previous positions, killing numbers of the enemy and capturing 200 prisoners. He then maintained his position under heavy fire and against repeated enemy attacks until zero hour. His personal example of fearlessness did much to hearten his battalion in the fine work they accomplished.

(D.S.O. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)

WORRALL, RICHARD, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 14th Battn. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. On 1 Sept. 1918, for conspicuous gallantry during the attack on the Crow's Nest and Hendecourt Château Woods while in command of his battalion. He advanced his line half a mile, and under heavy fire maintained his position all day. The following day, though his left was exposed to withering machine-gun and artillery fire, he captured a village, taking prisoners a whole battalion. Still pushing on, he took the final objective, and established his position, having advanced some 5,000 yards from the jumping-off line. He displayed fine courage and leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 11 Jan. 1919.)

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

DUNCAN, WALTER JOHN CLARE, D.S.O., M.C., Capt., 33rd Battn. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry throughout the operations south-west of Bouchavesnes on 31 Aug. 1918. He commanded his company brilliantly, and in face of strong opposition and heavy fire captured some 200 prisoners, 10 machine-guns, and four trench mortars. Throughout the whole operation he displayed wonderful dash and courage, and by his fine leadership succeeded against seemingly overwhelming odds.

(D.S.O. gazetted 26 July, 1918.)

MITCHELL, JOHN WESLEY, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 8th Battn. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry during the taking of Rosières Station and the village of Lihons on the 9th and 11th Aug. 1918. When his battalion had suffered heavy casualties he personally went forward, and, under heavy fire, reorganized his line. Again, after his battalion had taken Lihons, where the situation was obscure, he again went forward, and did the same under withering machine-gun fire. His fine leadership and coolness under fire were largely responsible for the success achieved by his battalion.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

SASSE, CECIL DUNCAN, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 4th Battn. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry in the attack on Chuignolles and Chaignes on 23 Aug. 1918. In face of exceedingly heavy fire he brought his battalion through to the final objective with extraordinarily few casualties, and succeeded in capturing several hundred prisoners and some field guns. He then advanced an additional mile, captured Fontaine les Cappy, and skilfully protected his new position. The brilliant success of his battalion was due to his splendid leadership.

(D.S.O. gazetted 29 Oct. 1915.)

STACY, BERTIE VANDELEUR, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel, 1st Battn. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry in the attack on Chuignolles and Chaignes on 23 Aug. 1918. He established his headquarters close behind the fighting troops, and in spite of heavy shell fire exercised valuable control during the progress of the fight. By personal reconnaissance he was able to direct the fire of the heavy artillery upon numerous field guns and machine guns, which were causing casualties. Also, by organizing the fire of Vickers and Lewis guns upon enemy machine-guns he was able to send on the attack. Upon gaining the set objective he pushed out patrols, which brought back valuable information, enabling the gain to be further exploited. Owing to his splendid leadership his battalion made an advance of nearly three miles, and captured several hundred prisoners and some machine guns.

(D.S.O. gazetted 4 June, 1917.)

ULRICH, THEODORE FREDERICK, D.S.O., Major (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), 6th Battn. Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and leadership in command of his battalion near Herleville Wood on 23 Aug. 1918. He kept in close touch with the attack, and controlled their movements under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire. He made the most of his opportunities, quickly grasping the situation, and set a fine example to his men.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

WOODS, PERCY WILLIAM, D.S.O., M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 55th Battn. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and able handling of his battalion on 1 and 2 Sept. 1918, north of Peronne. The position being obscure after an attack, he went forward personally and consolidated the line under heavy shell and machine-gun fire. The two officers and a runner with him were killed, but he continued his work, and completed consolidation. His courage and devotion to duty greatly inspired his men.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ARMSTRONG, CYRIL LIONEL, M.C., Temporary Major, 11th Battn. West Yorkshire Regt. (Italy). Near Lido on the nights, 24-26 Oct. 1918, he acted as beachmaster and superintended the embarkation of very large numbers of troops of two divisions under persistent shell fire. His coolness and untiring energy were instrumental in getting them across the first stream of the Piave with no disorganization and few casualties. On 29 Oct. near Soffrat, he handled his battalion brilliantly in the fight for the crossings of the Monticuna river, forcing a crossing against superior numbers of the enemy strongly entrenched, and made a considerable advance, taking over 800 prisoners. He showed courage and leadership of a high order.

BARBER, PHILIP STANLEY, M.C., Temporary Capt., General List (Brigade Major, 50th Infantry Brigade). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Martinpulch on 25th Aug. 1918. When a gap was reported on the right of the Divisional front, he rode forward in the face of intense fire to investigate, and righted what, at the time, was a very critical situation. Two days later, when the Brigade was somewhat disorganized by an enemy counter-attack, he again went through heavy machine-gun fire and re-established the positions, gaining the confidence of all ranks by his coolness and disregard of danger.

BEAVAN, FRANK ELLIOT, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), Welsh Horse Yeomanry, attached 25th Battn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. On the 21st Sept. 1918, a hostile barrage on the battalion, which was waiting to attack, caused heavy losses and confusion. He dashed forward, and, by his magnificent fearlessness and example, at once steadied the battalion, which, owing to all the senior officers having become casualties, he led to the first objective. Only a few junior officers then remaining, he reorganized and led the battalion to the second objective, which he captured. His numbers were by this time reduced to a mere handful of men, and, being unable to withstand a determined enemy attack, he skilfully withdrew, bringing back most of the wounded against odds of twenty to one. His courage, coolness, and splendid example turned a temporary reverse into a moral victory.

BERRILL, JACK SYLVESTER THOMAS, Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 7th Battn. London Regt., attached 2/10th Battn. On 9 Aug. 1918, when in command of a support company, the battalion was suffering heavy casualties, and their advance held up by direct machine-gun fire from Chipilly Spur, and enfilade fire down the valley. He worked his company forward, and seeing the nest of enemy machine guns which was causing most of the casualties, with a handful of men rushed through the village, which had not been cleared, under heavy shell and direct fire at close range, capturing eight guns and over 50 prisoners. He then signalled to the assaulting troops, and leading the remainder of his party over the spur, established himself in the final objective. His daring lead, quickness and total disregard of danger were mainly responsible for the capture of the ridge.

BLAND, CHARLES FRANK, Capt., 8th Battn. Essex Regt. (Territorial Force), attached 10th Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the action near Becourt on 23 Aug. 1918. With the assistance of one N.C.O., he personally rushed three machine guns in succession, which were holding up the advance, and killed no less than five gunners himself. On reaching the objective he organized his own and other companies in depth under heavy shell and machine-gun fire, handling his men with skill and resource.

BRUNTON, JOSEPH, M.C., Temporary Major, 12/13th Battn. Northumberland Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in the operations near Wallcourt on 8 Oct. 1918. When the battalion was held up west of the wood he led them forward under machine-gun fire and shelling at close range, and captured the wood. Although wounded and considerably shaken by a shell which burst close to him, he returned to battalion headquarters to report. While he was away the battalion was driven out of the wood, so he again went up and restored the situation. The success of the advance under heavy fire without a barrage was due to his energy and resource.

CAVE, WILLIAM STURMY, Capt., 2/4th Battn. Hampshire Regt., Territorial Force. For fine leadership and gallantry during operations at Havrincourt, 12 and 13 Sept. 1918, especially while in command of the leading company in an attack on the village. Hearing that the attack was held up by an enemy machine gun, he at once went forward with a few men, personally shooting the gunner and capturing the gun with four prisoners. Later, he again displayed great courage with a small party of men, and was responsible for the capture of two heavy machine guns, two officers and 16 men.

CHADWICK, ROBERT NEPAUL, Temporary Second Lieut., 10th Bn. Welsh Regt., attached 2nd Bn. For conspicuous gallantry near Bethécourt, on 15 Sept. 1918, when ordered to clear a wood with his platoon. Making clever use of covering fire from his Lewis guns and getting his rifle sections round the flanks he led the attack and single-handedly captured a machine gun and crew of six. Although wounded, he advanced again, and with four men rushed a second machine gun, killing two of the crew with his revolver and capturing the gun. He was severely wounded this time, but refused to leave until he had reorganized his platoon and handed over the command to his sergeant. He showed magnificent courage and marked ability to command.

COWLING, HAROLD EDWARD, M.C., Temporary Lieut., 11th Bn. Northumberland Fusiliers (Italy). During the attack on the enemy's lines on the north bank of the Plave on 27 Oct. 1918, this officer was adjutant of his battalion, and after his C.O. and Second-in-Command had become casualties he took command. He reorganized the much depleted force, and but for his most gallant and able leadership the third objective could scarcely have been captured. In addition, ascertaining that his left on the first objective was under enfilade fire from C. Touon, he personally collected some men and captured the two enemy machine guns in this position. He did fine work.

DIGBY, THE HONOURABLE EDWARD KENELM, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), 1st Bn. Coldstream Guards. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative on and previous to 27 Sept. 1918, during the operations across the Canal du Nord while commanding the battalion. The objective was the Hindenburg support line east of the Canal, which had to be crossed. The battalion was in the front line prior to the attack, so all preparations had to be made while in the forward zone. He thought out everything carefully, and despite heavy opposition from the start, all went smoothly. Although wounded in the leg, he remained at duty until relieved.

FETHERSTON, GUY, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), 162nd Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry as Brigade Commander near Gouzeaucourt on 18 Sept. 1918. He was wounded while making a forward reconnaissance, but continued at duty during the next twelve days, keeping in constant touch with an ever-changing situation, and, under heavy shelling, gaining information of great advantage. He showed great pluck and devotion to duty while suffering from his wound, and his great personal influence contributed much to the success of the brigade.

FISHER, THOMAS DOUGLAS, M.C., Second Lieut., 5th Bn. Lancashire Fusiliers, Territorial Force, attached 2/4th Bn. York and Lancaster Regt., Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and initiative on 2 Sept. 1918, in command of a company in front of Vaulx Vrancourt. He led his men through a hostile barrage to their objective. His other officer was almost immediately wounded, but he encouraged his men in the advance in face of intense machine-gun fire and point-blank fire from three field guns, which were subsequently captured. Later, he held his ground against a strong counter-attack. About midday he and one other officer were the only two left with the battalion, and he reorganized the men of all companies, advanced and consolidated. His behaviour when suddenly saddled with responsibility was magnificent.

GILL, FREDERICK GORDON, Capt. (Acting Major), 1/24th Bn. London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry, leadership and ability during operations on the 30th Aug. 1918, east of Maupas. After the attack had been successfully carried out, under particularly heavy shell fire, he personally reconnoitred the position gained, under severe shell, machine-gun and rifle fire, to superintend its consolidation. The result of the operations was the capture of over 200 prisoners, three 77 mm. guns and a large number of machine guns.

GOLDTHORP, ROBERT HEWARD, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 4th Bn., attached 2/10th Bn. West Riding Regt. (Territorial Force) (temporarily attached 1/28th Bn. London Regt.). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 27 Sept. 1918, in the attack on the spur running south-west from Bourlon Wood and east of Méuvres. When the leading companies were held up by machine-gun fire, suffering heavy casualties, he went forward collecting personnel and reorganizing the attack, which resulted in the capture of the objective. He showed a fine offensive spirit, which encouraged his men at a critical period.

GREENWOOD, GEOFFREY BRYDE, Second Lieut., 6th Bn. Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regt., Territorial Force, attached 10th Bn. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership round Gauche Wood on 18 Sept. 1918. In a counter-attack delivered by the enemy, the battalion on his left was driven in, and the left company of his battalion was beginning to give way. Quickly grasping the situation, he led his platoon over the open, under heavy machine-gun fire, and recaptured the whole of the lost ground, killing 25 of the enemy and taking six machine guns. He shot five himself with a revolver, and although wounded remained until fresh troops arrived. He did splendid work.

HALL, DOUGLAS MONTGOMERY BERNARD, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Coldstream Guards, attached 4th Bn. North Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of a battalion in the attack near Zandvoorde, on 29 Sept. 1918. When the attack lost direction over difficult ground, he went forward himself and succeeded in changing the direction, in face of heavy machine-gun fire. His coolness and powers of leadership had an inspiring effect on the men of the battalion.

HARRISON, MICHAEL CHARLES COOPER, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Bn. Royal Irish Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 27 Sept. 1918, in command of the supporting battalion in the attack on Graincourt and Anneux. Throughout the day, under constant artillery and machine-gun fire, he kept in close touch with the front, despatching reinforcements when and where required. On the following days, near Cambrai, he never relaxed his efforts in encouraging all ranks by his courageous bearing.

HERRICK, ROBERT LYSLE WARREN, Lieut., Indian Army Reserve of Officers, attached 20th Lancers, Indian Army (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry, on 21 Aug. 1918, in the vicinity of Wadi Nimrin, east of Ghoraniyeh bridgehead defences, in charge of a patrol of six. Observing two enemy behind a bush, who opened fire, he went forward to reconnoitre and saw an enemy party of about 20. Detaching the N.C.O. and one man to work round the flank, he charged with his remaining four men, in face of heavy fire, and captured the lot. He then took his prisoners safely back over two miles of open country, under heavy machine-gun and shell fire. He showed fine courage and leadership.

JONES, RICHARD HODKINSON, M.C., Temporary Major, Hampshire Regt. (Salonika). For conspicuous gallantry during an attack on an enemy position at White Scar Hill on 18 Sept. 1918. He was in charge of the attacking party, and, owing largely to his courage and determination, the enemy position was taken by assault. Under subsequent heavy shelling he held on to the position, and when ordered withdrew his force in order to our lines. His coolness and disregard for safety were most marked.

KENNINGTON, JOHN, M.C., Temporary Major, Lincolnshire Regt., attached 1st Bn. Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty east of Arras on 30 Aug. 1918. When his battalion was assembling for the attack it was heavily shelled, and he was wounded in three places and badly shaken. In spite of this he carried on, launching the attack under most trying conditions, and, owing to his careful organization and attention to details, bringing it to a successful conclusion. His determination and courage had a stimulating effect on his men.

KERRICH, WALTER ALLAN FITZGERALD, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Engineers (Commanding Royal Engineers, 7th Division) (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry and resource. In connection with operations on the Plave it was of vital importance to throw a bridge, and, up to midnight, 24-25 Oct. 1918, every effort to bridge the particular crossing had failed. This officer took the matter in hand, waded the river at various points until he found a possible crossing, and then, under enemy observation, worked unceasingly until the bridge was completed, later maintaining it under heavy shelling and frequent bombs from aeroplanes. Had it not been for his fine work the successful operations on 27 Oct. would have been rendered most difficult.

LAMOTTE, LEWIS, Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Bn. Royal Sussex Regt., attached 2nd Bn. Yorkshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Herleville during the fighting of 23 Aug. 1918. Thanks to his personal supervision his companies reached their objective without serious loss, after destroying several machine-gun nests through the village. Throughout the day he was constantly among his men, suggesting improvements and preparing against counter-attacks. The success of the operation was largely due to his energy and judgment.

LEES, SIR JOHN VICTOR ELLIOT, Bart., M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), King's Royal Rifle Corps, attached 18th Bn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 1 and 2 Oct. 1918. The first day, near Villers Farm, he was constantly with the furthest advanced troops, supervising their progress and overcoming difficulties. On the following day, during the attack south-west of Gheluwe, he supervised the forming up of two companies, and was constantly under heavy shell fire, while consolidating the captured position, and also during a counter-attack. He did not spare himself for several days in his efforts to ensure success.

LINDSAY, GEORGE WILLIAM GUY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), retired Indian Army, attached Royal Scots Fusiliers (Salonika). For conspicuous gallantry and fearless leadership of his battalion on 19 Sept. 1918. Though badly wounded he established his headquarters in the Tongue, and continued to command his battalion which had consolidated itself in this position. By his cheerful bearing under intense machine-gun fire and bombardment he encouraged his battalion to hold on to the position for many hours, though both flanks were exposed to enfilade fire.

LINDSEY-BENTON, REGINALD HERBERT, Major, 9th Bn. London Regt. North of the Somme, 2 Aug.-15 Sept. 1918, he commanded his battalion with great gallantry and success throughout lengthy operations. In two successive attacks he gained and held the objectives in spite of most determined resistance on the part of the enemy. The results achieved were largely due to his fine leadership.

LLOYD, WILLIAM JOSEPH, Second Lieut., 7th Bn. Lancashire Fusiliers, Territorial Force, attached 5th Bn. West Riding Regt., Territorial Force. For very gallant leadership at Havrincourt, 12 to 15 Sept. 1918, while in charge of a bombing attack over a sunken road, where six of his men and an officer were killed in attempting to cross. He rallied his party, crossed and recrossed the gap himself several times, and finally captured the objective, taking 20 prisoners and a machine gun. In spite of determined enemy attacks from all sides, he held the position throughout the day, and thereby gave great assistance to his battalion in its advance.

LOWE, THOMAS ALFRED, M.C., Lieut. (Temporary Capt. and Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Irish Regt., attached 1st Bn. Royal Irish Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 1 Oct. 1918, near Dadizele. He was visiting his forward posts when the enemy suddenly attacked under cover of shell and machine-gun fire, inflicting numerous casualties. He went round encouraging his men, collecting ammunition from the dead, and inspiring such confidence that the attack was beaten off, and the line properly reorganized.

MACINTYRE, HUGH ROSS, M.C., M.D., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Army Medical Corps, attached 69th Field Ambulance (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations on the Plave between 27 and 29 Oct. 1918, especially on the morning of the 27th when in charge of stretcher-bearers. He crossed to the right bank of the Plave immediately behind the infantry under very heavy fire, and supervised the collection and evacuation of the wounded under great difficulties, having to ford the river several times. He set a very fine example to all under him by his untiring energy and total disregard for his own safety.

MCCLEVERTY, GUY MASSY, M.C., Capt., 1/2nd Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Resht, Persia, on 20 July, 1918. He was in command of a relief party sent to extricate a force besieged in a building. He displayed great courage and initiative, and it was mainly due to his resource and daring leadership that the relief was successfully accomplished. His work throughout the operations was of a very high order.

MUIR, JAMES, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 5th Bn. Royal Scots, attached 5/6th Bn. Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry near Brle on 5 Sept. 1918, while in command of a company. After supervising the reconnaissance he forced the crossing of a river under heavy shell and machine-gun fire concentrated on the bridge. He next located and led a party against an enemy machine gun, capturing or killing the team and securing the gun. His cool courage and determined leadership had a very inspiring effect on all under him.

MUNDY, PIERREPONT RODNEY MILLER, M.C., Capt., 2nd Bn. South Wales Borderers (Salonika). For conspicuous gallantry in command of the leading company in the assault on Grand Couronne on 18 Sept. 1918. Though wounded in the thigh he continued to lead his men to the final assault of the enemy position, and on the readjustment of our line he, with the one other remaining officer, rallied the remnants of the battalion, and organized a new position on the Tongue, beating off an enemy counter-attack. Finally, with only 15 men left, he withdrew them in an orderly manner to our lines. His courage and leadership throughout inspired all ranks.

MURRAY, TERENCE DESMOND, M.C., Capt., 1st Bn. Leinster Regt. (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry during the raid on Ghurabeh Ridge on night of 12-13 Aug. 1918. He led two companies against the east end of Ghurabeh Ridge. By his skillful leadership and fine example of courage he was responsible for the capture of 110 prisoners and five machine guns. He subsequently organized and carried out with conspicuous success the withdrawal of these two companies from a very extended and difficult position.

NEELY, GEORGE HENRY, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 6th Bn. London Regt., attached 1/18th Bn. On the evening of the 6th Sept. 1918, he personally led his men, with conspicuous coolness and gallantry, in an assault, and succeeded in clearing out many nests of hostile machine guns, which had been hiding up the attack all day. During the night he reorganized his own unit, and assisted others, and completed the work of disposing of further enemy machine-gun posts, finally continuing the advance on Liermont, driving the enemy from the village, and establishing himself on the high ground to the east. Throughout his magnificent example inspired all in contact with him with the greatest confidence.

PARKER, WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Capt., 5th Battn. attached 9th Battn., Scottish Rifles, Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the nine miles' advance east of Ypres, from 28 Sept. to 9 Oct. 1918. He was primarily responsible for maintaining the direction of the advance, and overcame many obstacles in the form of machine-gun nests and concrete emplacements, keeping well up with the barrage, and consequently with light casualties. His company captured a large number of prisoners.

RICHMOND, LEONARD, Temporary Second Lieut., 12th Battn. Cheshire Regt. (Salonika). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as battalion intelligence officer. He carried out many valuable reconnaissances before the attack on the "P" Ridge on 18 Sept. 1918. He taped out the assembly positions of the leading battalion in Jackson's Ravine, and carried out his duties generally with such skill that the assembly of the brigade proceeded in perfect order. After the attack had developed he assumed command of a company which had lost its leaders and rallied them under intense fire. Later, under very heavy fire, he remained with his commanding officer, who had been mortally wounded. He showed marked courage throughout.

ROBERTSON, JAMES BASIL WILKIE, Temporary Capt., 11th Battn. Northumberland Fusiliers (Italy). For conspicuous gallantry and ability during attacks on the enemy's lines on the north bank of the Piave on 27 and 29 Oct. 1918. He led his company brilliantly and captured a large number of machine guns and prisoners, setting a very fine example to his men throughout the operations. On 27 Oct., when the senior officers had become casualties, the battalion under his command captured all objectives.

ROSS, DAVID, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 2nd Battn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 23 Sept. 1918, near Villers Guislain. The night on which he took over a newly-captured trench with his company, he worked past a block on his right and established a new one 200 yards down the trench. The following day he fought up and down the trench with varying results, killing and wounding many of the enemy and taking five prisoners. Day and night for four days he was attacking and counter-attacking with great dash, on one occasion taking 43 prisoners. He inspired the men with fine fighting spirit.

SANDARS, SAMUEL EDGAR, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers (Special Reserve), attached 3rd Battn. London Regt. For remarkable gallantry during operations near Chipilly, 8 to 10 Aug. 1918. In a heavy mist, when companies were apt to lose direction, he pushed forward with his battalion headquarters and led an attack on Malard Wood, capturing large parties of prisoners. Then, in spite of being wounded, he rushed a quarry and captured four machine guns and 70 prisoners. Later he led the line forward under heavy fire to the final objective, where he took charge of elements of the brigade and Allied troops, and established a line of posts. He displayed the greatest courage and was most severely wounded.

SANDERS, HARRY JAMES, M.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 1/24th Battn. London Regt. At Le Forêt and St. Pierre Vaast Wood, 30 Aug. and 2 Sept. 1918, this officer led his company in the attack, and succeeded in capturing the objectives and 60 prisoners, seven machine guns, and two 77mm. guns. When the position on Hill 150, near Rancourt, was obscure, he went forward several times under very heavy shell and machine-gun fire to clear up the situation. Throughout the operations he displayed great courage and ability.

SANDILANDS, PRESCOTT, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Royal Marine Light Infantry Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On 27 Sept. 1918, at Anneux, after the capture of the village, most of the subordinate officers having become casualties, he went up to the forward posts under heavy machine-gun fire and supervised the reorganization, reconnoitring the front, and ensuring that touch was gained with the flanks. That night he was conspicuous in repelling a counter-attack. The next day, by his influence and determination, he worked the battalion forward in the face of strong opposition, and despite heavy casualties.

SAVILL, SYDNEY ROWLAND, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1/16th Battn. London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 27 Sept. 1918, during the attack near Oisy-le-Verger. He controlled the passing of his battalion over the Canal du Nord in face of strong opposition, and, pushing forward parties, cleared the other side, capturing over 50. This enabled his battalion to form up for the main attack, which he skillfully conducted. Over 400 prisoners were captured during the day by the Brigade.

SENIOR, EDWARD, Major, 5th Battn. West Riding Regt., Territorial Force. For great gallantry during the crossing of the Escalut Canal on 28 Sept. When the attack was proceeding, and the situation obscure, he went forward to clear up the situation. As all companies had to cross in single file at two crossings, a great deal of confusion existed, and his coolness at a critical time, directing the consolidation under very heavy fire, largely contributed to the success of the operations. He then went forward and made daring reconnaissances of the enemy line, bringing back valuable detailed information, on which the evening's attack on the enemy's positions was based. Throughout the operations he did excellent work.

SHEARMAN, THOMAS, Capt. (Acting Major), 5th Battn. Yorkshire Light Infantry, Territorial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as second-in-command of the battalion, when he exercised splendid control throughout operations. On one occasion during a hostile counter-attack he stuck to his post when others had moved back, and from where he was ascertained the situation, and dealt with it immediately. It was due to his sound judgment that the line, where penetrated, was restored at once. Later, his shelter was blown in and he was imprisoned for two hours, but, in spite of being badly shaken, he displayed great initiative in collecting available troops and driving the enemy back.

SHERINGHAM, CHARLES JOHN DE BUNSEN, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), General List, attached 8th Battn. Somersetshire Light Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership in command of his battalion near Havrincourt Wood on 9 and 10 Sept. 1918. When the leading troops were checked by a hostile barrage, he went forward to steady and encourage the men, getting them on over open ground to the north of the wood. On both days he handled his battalion with skill and judgment, which kept the casualties down, despite the heavy shelling.

SKEIL, ALEXANDER PATRICK, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), Royal Scots Fusiliers (Russia). For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership in Northern Russia during Sept. 1918. He was detached to Ossinova on 11 Sept., and during the next few days captured Preluki, Rapolka, Korovla, and Rostovskaya. By 16 Sept. he advanced on Konitzgorie, but learning that his advance was known to the enemy, he changed his objective, and aimed at Kourgomev, thus undertaking a surprise march of 16 kilometres with a force which had exhausted its rations and had had no rest for 25 kilometres over forest tracks and swamps. In spite of this he arrived with every man, and so lowered the morale of the enemy that they evacuated the strongly fortified positions at Troitska and Gorka, so that Selmsng, 25 miles up river from Pless, was occupied without opposition. He rendered valuable service.

TANNER, ARCHIBALD GERARD, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Fusiliers, attached 10th Battn. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership at Bihucourt on 23 Aug. 1918. After the battalion had gained its objective, he found that the units on either flank had been held up, so making a reconnaissance under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, he threw back defensive flanks, securing his position. His personal direction and initiative inspired his men with confidence.

TUFFLEY, VICTOR EVELYN, Lieut., 2/10th Battn. London Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack at Sally-Laurette on 8 Aug. 1918. When his company officer was killed, he took command, and captured a village leading one party after another against machine-gun nests posted in different parts of it. He took eight machine guns, and was largely responsible for the capture of about 200 prisoners, subsequently consolidating on the further side of the village. His leadership both at the time and in later operations was full of daring and initiative.

VICKERS, STANSFIELD, Major, Royal Field Artillery, Territorial Force, attached D/82nd Brigade, Royal Field Artillery. He displayed exceptional gallantry and thrust in reconnoitring forward positions for his guns to support the advancing infantry. While out in front of the firing line, he was temporarily held up and shot at by a hostile machine gun at a hundred yards' range, but he noted the position, and on returning to his battery bombarded it with such effect that the occupants, 19 in number, put up the white flag and surrendered. He went down and brought the prisoners in himself.

WHITEHEAD, CLAUDE MAGUIRE, M.C., Temporary Capt., Royal Lancaster Regt. (Salonika). For conspicuous gallantry on 19 Sept. 1918. The commanding officer and adjutant being wounded, he took command of the battalion and personally led them through an attack on the Doiran Front. Though wounded in the first phase of the attack, he continued to lead them on. By his fine example of determined courage he enabled the battalion to reach their second objective; and when forced to withdraw he supervised the withdrawal, though again wounded, and was the last to leave.

WHITMARSH, ARTHUR JOHN, Temporary Capt., attached East Kent Regt. (7th Battn.). For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership in command of a company on 22 Aug. 1918, near Albert. He led his men through the town, which had been barely mopped up, under heavy fire without a casualty to their assembly post. He then worked his men forward 500 yards under intense machine-gun fire, and maintained his important position till dark, with the loss of all his officers and 60 per cent. of his men. On the 25th and 26th, with only one officer, two sergeants and 80 men, he fought his way forward, capturing 60 prisoners and inflicting heavy casualties. His energy and determination were an inspiration to all ranks.

WILBERFORCE, WILLIAM, M.C., Capt. (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 1st Battn. Royal West Kent Regt., attached 14th Battn. Royal Warwickshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Gouzeaucourt on 27 Sept. 1918, in the attack on the trench system up to Dunraven Trench, and then the formation of a defensive flank to the right. He successfully controlled a very difficult advance diagonally across three parallel lines of trenches. When the enemy counter-attacked with fresh troops and specially trained bombers, driving back his battalion and another, it was largely due to his efforts that a new line of defence was formed and held.

WOODHOUSE, PHILIP RANDAL, M.C., M.B., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), 9th Field Ambulance, Royal Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of a bearer division. On 27 Sept. 1918, at Maison Rouge, when loading wounded on an ambulance wagon, it was damaged, and an ammunition dump close by set on fire by heavy shelling. He at once got the fire out, and evacuated the wounded to safety. On two other occasions he did good work under heavy shell fire, clearing a road which was blocked by a tree blown across it, and also in evacuating wounded when his A.D.S. was hit by a shell.

WORSLEY, SIDNEY JOHN, M.C., Capt., 4th Battn. North Staffordshire Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Verbrandenmolen on 28 Sept. 1918. He led his company to the allotted objective, capturing a field gun. The following day, at Zandoeuvre, he again led his company in the face of very heavy machine-gun fire, and was wounded in the chest while doing so.

YOUNG, JOHN DOUGLAS STARFORTH, M.C., Temporary Lieut., 10th Battn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership on 10 Sept. 1918, near Attilly. Having assembled his company under peculiarly adverse circumstances, he launched an attack at dawn and captured an important and commanding position, which he held throughout the day in spite of danger to his flanks, which were exposed by the failure of supporting troops to reach their objective. He withstood several attacks and finally routed the enemy by a successful counter-attack, and when relieved at dawn the next day he handed over the line intact. Throughout the operations he displayed exceptional dash in attack and skill in handling his troops in the defence of an important position.

CANADIAN FORCE.

ANDERSON, WILLIAM HAROLD KERR, Lieut.-Colonel, 13th Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps. During the operations before Arras, 2-5 Sept., he was in charge of the evacuation of wounded. He succeeded in keeping in close touch with the infantry during the whole of the battle, so that the wounded were evacuated almost as soon as they became casualties. His duties were often performed under enemy artillery fire, which caused many casualties, but by his courage and personal example he kept his men at their splendid work until all casualties were carried out.

BAULD, WILLIAM ALFRED GORDON, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), No. 7 Canadian Cavalry Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during mounted operations from 8 to 11 Oct. 1918. He was in command of the advanced cavalry field ambulances. On the night of the 9th-10th Oct., when ordered to search and clear the wounded from three villages, which were being heavily shelled, and the approaches badly damaged by craters, he organized the evacuation of the wounded, making certain that all were found and removed. He showed great coolness and energy.

BAYNES-REED, REV. WILLIAM LEONARD, Canadian Chaplains' Service, attached 75th Battn. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 8-9 Aug. at the capture of the village of Lequesnel. He was constantly in the forward area, attending to the wounded and ministering to the dying under intense fire of all descriptions. His unselfish devotion to duty and his courage were splendid examples, and his services earned for him the respect and affection of all those among whom he worked.

BLACKSTOCK, GEORGE GRANT, Major, 4th Battn. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and fine leadership in the attack on the Canal du Nord on 2 to 4 Sept. 1918. He commanded the battalion during this operation with great ability and judgment, and his example of coolness and gallantry under heavy fire in the front line, where he was continually present, had a most inspiring and encouraging effect on officers and men, and was largely responsible for the determined dash with which the attack was pushed home. He personally made daring reconnaissances under heavy machine-gun fire, which enabled him to make skilful dispositions for further advances.

BRADFELD, REGINALD HENDERSON, M.C., Capt., 75th Batta. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In command of a company during the attack on 2 Sept. 1918, east of the Droocourt-Quéant line, he rallied his men under very heavy fire, and led them forward over some 500 yards of open ground, capturing a strong position and about 150 prisoners and 18 machine guns. He then led what remained of his company forward and established posts in advance and brought fire to bear on the enemy's flank. He showed determined courage and leadership.

BRITTON, JAMES CAPELL, Major, 4th Batta. Canadian Machine Gun Corps. In front of Dury, 2 Sept., for most conspicuous gallantry. When in command of a machine-gun company he pushed forward his batteries through heavy fire to most advanced positions, enabling them to inflict heavy casualties on the enemy. Later, when the whole situation was in doubt and communication forward temporarily cut, he went forward and made a daring reconnaissance. He was subjected to the heaviest shelling and machine-gun fire, but completed the reconnaissance and returned to headquarters with a valuable report.

BROOKS, ALLAN, Major, 7th Batta. Canadian Infantry, British Columbia Regt., attached 11th Canadian Infantry Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry in the operations of 2 and 3 Sept. in front of Arras. As brigade observing officer he showed great daring and initiative, pushing forward at all times with the most advanced troops under the heaviest fire. Taking a wire with him, he kept brigade headquarters well informed of the situation, and enabled the commander to make decisions which saved many lives. When the enemy were retiring he pushed forward over 500 yards in front of the infantry and telephoned back information from a long distance in front of our advance. During the two days he personally killed 20 of the enemy by sniping shots.

BROWN, ROBERT, Capt., 46th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Saskatchewan Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership at Dury and Ecourt, St. Quentin, 2 to 4 Sept. 1918. He commanded the right support company, and, finding the assault company held up by very heavy fire and his expected tank broken down, he made a daring reconnaissance forward and then led the assault through the village. By his prompt courage and initiative he was responsible for his company breaking up the southern defences of the village.

COOK, GEORGE HAROLD, Major, 9th Battery, 3rd Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the capture of the Droocourt-Quéant line on 2 Sept. 1918. He made a daring reconnaissance and established his battery in a forward position and his observation post on Mount Dury near the windmill. He remained at his post all day under intense shelling, and did admirable work on enemy batteries and strong points. His coolness and ability were most marked.

EWART, CECIL, Major, 8th Batta. Canadian Railway Troops. Near Ypres, between 28 Sept. and 5 Oct. 1918, for conspicuous gallantry and efficiency in reconstructing railway track during the advance. He repaired lines through a cutting under continuous shell fire, and as a result of his determination and courage a line was put into operation by which hundreds of wounded were evacuated to places of safety, and also guns, ammunition and supplies carried forward to the advancing troops. His organization was splendid.

GIRVAN, JOHN POLLANDS, M.C., Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 15th Batta. Canadian Infantry, 1st Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry opposite Cherisy on 1 Sept. 1918. He commanded his battalion with the greatest skill and ability, pushing resolutely forward in face of extreme machine-gun fire, and after a personal reconnaissance continuing his advance and capturing and consolidating a position some 6,000 yards in front of the jumping-off line. His courage and leadership were admirable.

GRAHAM, REV. EDWIN ERNEST, M.C., Canadian Chaplains' Service, attached 13th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 29 Aug. 1918, in front of the Ulster Trench east of Arras. He went out in broad daylight in full view of the enemy to their wire and brought in wounded men. During the succeeding days he was tireless in his efforts to succour the wounded and dying under heavy fire, and when the battalion attacked the Droocourt-Quéant system on 2 Sept. he was continuously in the forward area, exposing himself regardless of danger, and it was largely due to his personal efforts that all wounded were evacuated during the day. He set a splendid example to all.

GRAHAM, GORDON, Lieut. (Acting Capt.), 10th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Alberta Regt. For conspicuous gallantry at Villers-les-Cagnicourt on 2 Sept. 1918. His company commander having early become a casualty, he assumed command, and handled the company as well as two others for a time with exceptional ability, his tactics and fearless leadership being greatly responsible for the capture of the final objective on his portion of the front. At one period of the advance he personally engaged an enemy field battery with a Lewis gun, with the result that the crew were killed or driven off and the gun captured. He did excellent work.

HALL, GEORGE WILLIAM, Major, 12th Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During the action in front of Arras, from 2-6 Sept. he was in charge of the evacuation of wounded. Time and time again he went through heavy enemy shell and machine-gun fire to direct the clearing of the wounded. On the afternoon of 2 Sept. he succeeded in clearing a number of wounded who were being shelled with gas shell to a place of safety, and dressed many wounded under heavy fire. His work throughout the battle was admirable.

HANSON, HAROLD STUART, Lieut., 43rd Batta. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 27 Aug. 1918, in the capture of Swarty Ridge and four field guns by his company. With his left flank 2,000 yards in the air, and only 30 men, he held the village throughout the night, beating off five enemy fighting patrols. The next day he again led his company in the attack, and with only 8 men left cleared the Remy Bridge-head and held it till relieved. His determination and energy made up for his lack of men.

JUCKSCH, ARNOLD HOMER, M.C., Capt. (Acting Major), 58th Batta. Canadian Infantry, 2nd Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 27 Aug. 1918, during the attack on Bois du Sart. He directed the assembly of the battalion under heavy fire, and started all the units off. He then took command of a company which had lost all its officers and led a counter-attack. He next took a patrol into Hatchet Wood and cleared it of the enemy, bringing back all his wounded and about 50 prisoners. His work in reorganization and able tactics enabled the battalion to score several successes.

KILPATRICK, REV. GEORGE GORDON DINWIDDIE, Canadian Chaplains' Service, attached 42nd Batta. Canadian Infantry, Quebec Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 8 Aug. 1918, during the capture of Hill 102, east of Domart. Immediately behind the front line, exposed to heavy fire of all descriptions, he dressed and attended to the wounded and ministered to the dying without regard to his own safety, and with an untiring and unselfish devotion to duty that was an inspiration and a splendid example to all.

KIRKPATRICK, GUY HAMILTON, Lieut.-Colonel, 72nd Batta. Canadian Infantry, British Columbia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the operations against the Droocourt-Quéant line, near Dury, on 1 and 2 Sept. 1918. He personally supervised all preparations for the action, and the success of the operations was in a large measure due to his grasp of the situation and organizing ability. On 1 Sept., during an enemy counter-attack, his personal example in the face of the enemy was excellent, and did much to steady all ranks. He also assisted in organizing a counter-attack to meet the enemy. Later he went forward with the attack, reconnoitred captured enemy positions and reorganized preparatory to a new advance. His courage at all times was most marked.

MADDEN, REV. AMBROSE, M.C., Canadian Chaplains' Service, attached 7th Batta. Canadian Infantry, British Columbia Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 8 Aug. 1918, in the attack on Caix. He went forward on his own initiative with the attacking troops and assisted the medical officer in attending to the wounded in the open under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire until he himself was severely wounded in three places by shrapnel. The calmness of his demeanour, his disregard of his own safety, and his unflinching efforts were a very fine example to all.

PARRY, JAMES LEWIS ROWAN, Major, 50th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Alberta Regt. For great gallantry and initiative in front of Dury during the operations from 1 to 4 Sept. 1918. He went ahead on a reconnaissance of the assembly positions and took the battalion to its position in darkness under heavy enemy fire, his work being largely responsible for the success of the operations. On 2 Sept. he volunteered to go forward and make a reconnaissance after the objectives had been captured. He did this in face of heavy enemy artillery fire, bringing back valuable information. Later he personally directed the advance of the battalion over a piece of ground badly enfiladed by enemy artillery, and got the battalion into its new position with slight casualties.

PAWLETT, FRANCIS, Lieut.-Colonel, Saskatchewan Regt., seconded 2nd Batta. West Riding Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the operations east of Arras from 28 Aug. to 3 Sept. 1918. He commanded the battalion throughout a week's operations, constantly going forward and making personal reconnaissances, which enabled him to send in good information and to issue clear and concise orders to his company commanders. He organized the sending up of reinforcements and stores, which never failed, and helped all ranks to do their best under very heavy strain. His leadership and quick appreciation of the situation were largely instrumental in the success of the operations.

PRATT, ARTHUR WILLIAM, Major, 116th Batta. Canadian Infantry, 2nd Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of the leading company in the attack on Boing village on 28 Aug. 1918. In spite of heavy casualties from gas he got his men to the first objective, where he took over command of the battalion on his C.O. being killed. During the night he beat off two counter-attacks, and in the morning continued the advance, capturing and consolidating the village. His enthusiasm in reorganizing and encouraging exhausted men was admirable.

ROLSTON, JOHN MITCHELL, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 2nd Batta. Canadian Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry during the attack on the Droocourt-Quéant trench system on 2 Sept. 1918. He made a reconnaissance under heavy fire prior to the attack, and obtained information which enabled him to make the best disposition of his companies for the ensuing operation. During the attack he went forward with the infantry and personally superintended the work of his companies in the removal of road mines and the repair of roads under shell fire, thus facilitating the advance of the artillery in support of the infantry. By his fearless energy he produced the best work from those under him.

SLADE, ARTHUR JOSEPH, Capt., 50th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Alberta Regt. For great gallantry and devotion to duty while in command of a company in front of Dury during the operations 2-4 Sept. 1918. He gained his objective with the greatest dash, capturing close on 400 prisoners and about 20 machine guns. Twice during the attack he personally rushed enemy machine guns, once with six men and the other time with a batman. His work throughout the operations was of the highest order.

SMYTHE, ROLSA ERIC, M.C., Major, 58th Batta. Canadian Infantry, 2nd Central Ontario Regt. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the operations about Bois du Sart, Boiry and Artillery Hill between 27 and 29 Aug. 1918. He commanded his battalion from the jumping off, throughout the heavy fighting at the above places, and his handling of the men when very tired was most skilful, resulting in the repulse of several counter-attacks, and the successful consolidation of the captured positions.

SUTHERLAND, DONALD MATHESON, Lieut.-Colonel, West Ontario Regt., attached 52nd Batta. Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in action near Bois-de-Vert, 27-28 Aug. 1918, when he handled his battalion with great tactical ability. His personal courage and leadership were largely responsible for the success of the operations, at a time when casualties were severe and enemy opposition was most stubborn.

TURNER, ROYES LIONEL, Major, Canadian Infantry, Manitoba Regt. (Russia). During the entire operations from 4 Aug. on the Archangel-Vologda Railway, he has done most valuable work and has shown great devotion to duty. He has taken part in every operation, and his reconnaissance work and liaison work with the attacking infantry has always helped our advance to an enormous extent. He has shown great courage under fire, and his influence has always had a great effect over all the Allied infantry.

TWEED, LORNE TRELEAVEN, Major, 1st Batta. Canadian Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack on the Droocourt-Quéant line on 2 Sept. 1918. He established a report centre in an open trench, which, owing to a check in the advance, was subjected to heavy machine-gun and artillery fire. Despite this, he got into touch with the engineering companies working on the forward roads, collecting information as to the work, and reporting to Battalion Headquarters. The same afternoon, when the position was obscure, he again worked forward and ascertained what further work was required. His initiative and resource were a great asset.

WEAVER, CHARLES YARDLEY, Major (Acting Lieut.-Colonel), 40th Batta. Canadian Infantry, Alberta Regt. For conspicuous gallantry in command of his battalion during operations south of the Scarpe between 26 and 28 Aug. 1918. His constant presence in the forefront of the battle under severe shelling and machine-gun fire, and his complete grasp of the tactical situation, were responsible for the marked success of his battalion throughout three days' operations.

AUSTRALIAN IMPERIAL FORCE.

ANTHON, DANIEL HERBERT, M.C., Lieut., 20th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. On the 30th Aug. 1918, near Cléry-sur-Somme, he advanced at the head of a few men against a strongly-held machine-gun post, which, after bombing, he charged alone, capturing seven men and the gun. He then, by a flanking movement, captured a trench, taking 54 prisoners, besides killing and wounding several others. This gallant action allowed the battalion, which had been held up for a long time, to advance.

BRODZIAK, CEDRIC ERROL MEYER, Major, 3rd Batta. Australian Machine Gun Corps. For conspicuous gallantry near Bray-sur-Somme on 22 Aug. 1918. He commanded the flank company of the division in the attack, and in face of strong opposition secured and consolidated his objectives. When the right flank of the division on his left was held up he made good the gaps that occurred, capturing the southern portion of Happy Valley and the Chalk Pit, and thus assuring the advance of the division on his flank. During the afternoon the enemy broke through, and his left flank was in the air, and the enemy behind him, but he held his position and formed a defensive flank. By his fine initiative and determination he enabled the divisional line to be maintained, and inflicted such casualties that the enemy was forced to withdraw.

BROWN, WILLIAM JOHN, Major, 2nd Australian Light Horse Regt. (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 14 July, 1918, in command of a post near Mussulabch, which was heavily shelled. The enemy attacked it in strength, but were repulsed. Major Brown, leaving sufficient of his garrison to protect his front, directed the bulk of his machine-gun and rifle fire on to an enemy concentration in Wahi Dhib, and also took their parties attacking Abu Talbut right in reverse, inflicting heavy casualties and demoralizing the enemy. Thereby he materially assisted the counter-attack by another cavalry regiment later in the morning. Throughout the operations he handled his command with great coolness and judgment.

COUTTS, DONALD DUNBAR, Major, Australian Army Medical Corps, attached 24th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. On the 1st Sept. 1918, during the attack at Mont St. Quentin, although the R.A.P. was consistently shelled, he attended the wounded almost continuously for 52 hours, during five of which he was forced to wear his gas respirator, displaying throughout the greatest courage and devotion to duty. On the day prior to the attack a shell burst on a dug-out, wounding several men and pressing one down, severely wounded, blocking the entrance. He immediately went forward, regardless of intense shell fire, and succeeded in extricating the man and removing him, over exposed ground, to the rear.

FERRES, HAROLD DUNSTAN GORDON, M.C., Major, 58th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry in taking the eastern side of Peronne on 2 Sept. 1918. He had to advance to the attack along a narrow causeway swept by enemy fire, and, while personally leading his battalion, was early severely wounded by shell fire. Though suffering much pain from his wound, he reorganized the battalion, which had suffered severe casualties, and launched the attack. The clearing of the enemy from the ramparts and outskirts of Peronne was entirely due to his resolute leadership and courage. A large number of prisoners and 50 machine guns were captured during this action.

FLETCHER, JAMES LIONEL, M.C., Capt., 25th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. During an attack near Mont St. Quentin, on the 2nd Sept. 1918, an enemy strong point held up the advance. After a daring personal reconnaissance, during which he captured a machine-gun post with three guns, he surrounded and took the strong point, which contained 17 machine guns and two trench mortars. He then reorganized his company and led the attack on the objective. When the acting commanding officer of the battalion was wounded, he took command of the whole front line, and his fine gallantry and untiring efforts set a wonderful example to all.

HOSKING, WILLIAM STANLEY, M.C., Capt., 27th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. In command of a support company during operations on the 2nd Sept. 1918, at Allaines, north-east of Peronne, he displayed conspicuous gallantry and resource in attacking a hostile trench which was holding up the advance, capturing it and taking 60 prisoners. After all the company officers except himself and one other had become casualties, he collected the remnants of the companies and advanced with only 28 other ranks against 600 enemy infantry and a direct-firing hostile battery. This prevented the enemy reorganizing for a counter-attack. His courage and fine leadership were most marked.

HUNT, RALPH ALEC, Lieut., 12th Field Company, Australian Engineers. For conspicuous gallantry on 8 Aug. 1918, near Cherisy. With a small party he reconnoitred and, under machine-gun fire, crossed bridges to the enemy's side. While examining one of the bridges the sapper whom he took with him was wounded, and he carried this man for 200 yards under fire to a place of safety. After getting his pontoons up to the water side under heavy fire, he furnished an accurate report on the state of the roads and bridges in the neighbourhood to his officer commanding. His coolness and excellent work under trying circumstances were most praiseworthy.

LANE, JOHN BAYLEY, Capt., 18th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry during the attack on 8 Aug. 1918, east of Villers Bretonneux, near Amiens. Single-handed he attacked an enemy strong point held by 17 enemy with a machine gun, killing three of the occupants and capturing the remainder. The following day, near Framerville, after being wounded, he continued to lead his company, and, after gaining his objective, was again wounded, but refused to leave until the position had been made secure. He set a splendid example of courage and devotion to duty.

LOWTHER, GEORGE FREDERICK, M.C., Capt., 18th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry as company commander in the advance east of Amiens on 8 and 11 Aug. 1918. In spite of thick fog and hidden defences, he gained the final objective. The following day he, with a few men, rushed a machine-gun post, and further captured and consolidated fresh ground. On the 11th he, to conform with the advance of another battalion, established posts forming a defensive flank, and, while doing so, rushed, with four men, another enemy post. On being finally ordered to withdraw, he extricated his company from a difficult position with very few casualties, being himself the last to leave. Throughout he showed fine courage and leadership.

MARFELL, WILLIAM LESLIE, Major, 7th Brigade, Australian Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 30 Aug. 1918, east of Clercy. During the whole day, under extremely heavy shell and machine-gun fire, he personally directed the fire of his battery from the front line, rendering great assistance to the infantry. His tireless energy and cheerfulness during a week's continuous fighting have set a splendid example to his men.

MCCANN, WILLIAM FRANCIS JAMES, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), 10th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Lihous on 10 Aug. 1918. After the attack had failed at Crepey Wood, he successfully captured the position with his company in face of very heavy fire; and, when the enemy, in greatly superior numbers, counter-attacked, he held them off, personally killing many of the enemy and exposing himself freely until reinforcements enabled him to drive off the enemy and re-establish his original line. His courage and fine leadership prevented an important position falling into the hands of the enemy.

MCDONALD, JOHN HINWOOD, M.C., Major, 20th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. On the 31st Aug. 1918, during the attack on Mont St. Quentin, he advanced alone against an enemy machine-gun nest, silencing two guns which were causing casualties and capturing the crews. On arrival at the objective, he rapidly reorganized and consolidated, reconnoitring the whole battalion front under heavy fire. Later, he personally directed a withdrawal in a most skilful manner and under very severe enemy fire, establishing himself in an admirable position with few casualties. Throughout he showed conspicuous gallantry and powers of leadership.

MURRAY, JOHN JOSEPH, M.C., Major, 53rd Batta. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry near Peronne on 1 Sept. 1918. He led his company with great skill and initiative, and cleared the assembly position, thus allowing the remainder of the battalion to take up its position in time for the attack. Later, while advancing under heavy artillery and machine-gun fire, he led his company through two unbroken belts of wire. Finally, under heavy fire, he supervised consolidation of the ground won, and throughout set a fine example of courage and energy to his men.

NOEDL, LEWIS, M.C., Capt., 7th Field Company, Australian Engineers. For very conspicuous gallantry and devotion under exceptionally heavy fire from the 30th Aug. to 1 Sept. 1918, during reconnaissances for a construction of bridges across the Somme Canal. By dint of his example and inspiring spirit in face of every kind of difficulty and opposition, and although time after time driven off by heavy shell and machine-gun fire with severe casualties, he carried out his work, and the ultimate success of the operations was greatly due to his coolness, courage and unflinching energy.

O'SHEA, PATRICK JOSEPH FRANCIS, M.C., Capt., Australian Army Medical Corps, attached 8th Batta. Australian Infantry. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Chaignes on 23 Aug. 1918. Keeping up with the advance, he was always in the hottest part of the line, dressing wounded and organizing stretcher-bearers. Realizing that an R.A.P. could not cope with the casualties, he dressed them where they lay and made prisoners carry them back. In many cases he carried men back himself under heavy fire of all descriptions, and working in gas-drenched areas. He had no rest for three days and nights, and did another medical officer's work as well as his own.

TOWLE, PERCY GILCHRIST, Capt., 37th Batta. Australian Imperial Force. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the night of the 29th-30th Aug. 1918, at Clercy. In charge of his company of only 28 men with 25 prisoners, he was attacked by some 150 of the enemy, who had at first surrendered. He was surrounded practically, and by fire from front and flanks his party, before he was reinforced by other troops at 3 p.m. next day, was reduced to 12 men. His performance was a splendid one, and it was due to his determined courage and able leadership that his company, besides holding out, retained their prisoners.

WEBB, ERIC NORMAN, M.C., Major, 7th Field Company, Australian Engineers. During operations near Peronne from the 29th to 31st Aug. 1918, he displayed the greatest courage, skill, and powers of leadership and organization in constructing and repairing bridges for crossing the Somme, under continuous shell and machine-gun fire. He also carried out valuable reconnaissances on water supply and roads up to the front line to assist the advance, and throughout this period his untiring efforts and determination contributed in a large measure to the success of the operations.

WILLIAMS, THOMAS, Major, 4th Australian Light Horse Regt., XXII. Corps, Mounted Regt. For conspicuous gallantry during a period up to 12 Sept. 1918, on the Somme. He worked his patrols in a daring and able manner, keeping divisional headquarters supplied with reliable information. By personal reconnaissances he was able to direct the artillery on to splendid targets with excellent results. His work right through the operations was of a very high order.

NEW ZEALAND FORCE.

BARROWCLOUGH, HAROLD ERIC, M.C., Capt. (Temporary Major), 1st Batta. New Zealand Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership near Havrincourt Wood from 8 to 13 Sept. 1918. He was in command of a battalion up against a strong position stoutly defended by the enemy. He gained good information from personal reconnaissances, during one of which the enemy counter-attacked. He rallied his men, and, leading them forward, drove back the enemy with bomb and bayonet.

JARDINE, LEONARD HANDFORTH, M.C., Lieut.-Colonel, 2nd Batta. New Zealand Rifle Brigade. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership at Gouzeaucourt from 8 to 13 Sept. 1918. His battalion was engaged in very heavy fighting against strong enemy positions held by picked troops. He constantly reconnoitred the front, having to pass through gas and enemy barrage, and by keeping in the closest touch with the situation he was able to cope with several enemy counter-attacks. It was owing to his skilful leadership that the operation was a success, and his courage and coolness under heavy fire inspired all ranks.

MITCHELL, GORDON ROSS, Major, Otago Mounted Rifles, XXII. Corps, Mounted Troops. For conspicuous gallantry during operations on the Somme from 22 Aug. to 18 Sept. 1918. This officer with his squadron was attached to the division on the left flank, and during the whole time, owing to his splendid leadership, his squadron obtained information of the utmost value. On the 24th Aug., in the vicinity of La Boisselle, when the position was obscure, he personally went forward under heavy machine-gun and shell fire and brought back most valuable information to divisional headquarters. Several times during the operations he made personal reconnaissances and obtained most reliable information.

NEIL, JAMES HARDIE, Lieut.-Colonel, No. 3 Field Ambulance, New Zealand Army Medical Corps. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during operations near Bapaume and Bancourt from 23 Aug. to 3 Sept. 1918. He was in command of the ambulance, and constantly visited the forward R.A.P. under heavy shell fire, and selected positions for the bearer relay posts. During the action round Bancourt he went forward with two light ambulance cars to within a few hundred yards of the front line and supervised the evacuation. It was owing to his gallantry and personal supervision that the evacuation of the wounded was so successfully carried out.

London Gazette, 7 Feb. 1919.—"War Office, 7 Feb. 1919. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned rewards for distinguished service in connection with military operations in East Africa. Dated 1 Jan. 1919. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

LILLEY, HARRY ARTHUR, Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Yorkshire Regt. and King's African Rifles.

MILES, ARTHUR TREMAYNE, M.C., Temporary Major, King's African Rifles.

POMEROY, EDMUND JOHN, Major, West India Regt.

WILSON, ROBERT GERALD HAMILTON, M.C., Temporary Major, King's African Rifles.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE.

BRADSTOCK, FREDERICK EDGAR, M.C., Temporary Major, Cape Corps, attached King's African Rifles.

London Gazette, 8 Feb. 1919.—"Air Ministry, 8 Feb. 1919. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the undermentioned rewards on Officers of the Royal Air Force, in recognition of gallantry in flying operations against the enemy. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

FELLOWES, PEREGRINE FORBES MORANT, D.S.O., Lieut.-Colonel (Sea Patrol, Flanders). On 28 May, 1918, Lieut.-Colonel Fellowes, Commanding 61st Wing, undertook the task of attacking the lock gate at Zeebrugge, the damaging of which was at that time of great importance. He flew a DH-4, and by very skilful airmanship he succeeded in dropping a 230 lb. bomb from a height of only 200 feet right on the lock gate in question. It has since been ascertained that the effect was considerable, and involved much dislocation of the enemy's plans for many days.

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

DARWIN, CHARLES JOHN WHARTON, Capt. (Acting Major) (France). This officer has proved himself an exceptionally skilful and gallant patrol leader, conspicuous for utter fearlessness and disregard of danger. On a recent occasion, in company with one other machine, he attacked a formation of 14 Fokker biplanes, one of which was shot down and crashed. He has accounted for three hostile aircraft.

GOODE, HARRY KING, D.F.C., Second Lieut. (Acting Capt.) (Italy). During the recent operations this officer has displayed magnificent courage and determination in attacking enemy aerodromes, kite balloons and retreating columns, inflicting very heavy loss. On 29 Oct. he led two other machines in a bombing raid against an enemy aerodrome; he completely destroyed with a bomb one hostile machine on the ground, and attacking the hangars and workshops with machine-gun fire, he caused many casualties amongst the mechanics. Later on in the same day he returned alone to attack the same aerodrome, and found the enemy about to evacuate it. Flying at a very low altitude—at times his wheels almost touched the ground—he destroyed one machine with a bomb and set fire to another with machine-gun fire. The enemy personnel were driven back into the village by the vigour of his attack. Capt. Goode's utter disregard of personal danger inspired all who served with him.
(D.F.C. gazetted 3 Dec. 1918.)

HAZELL, TOM FALCON, M.C., D.F.C., Capt. (Acting Major) (France). A brilliant fighter, distinguished for his bold determination and rare courage, he has accounted for 29 enemy machines, 20 being destroyed and nine driven down out of control; he has also destroyed 10 balloons. On 4 Sept. he rendered exceptionally valuable service in leading his flight to attack hostile balloons that were making a certain road impassable. Within an hour three of these balloons were destroyed, Major Hazell accounting for two.
(M.C. gazetted 26 July, 1917.)
(D.F.C. gazetted 2 Nov. 1918.)
(Bar to D.F.C. gazetted 2 Nov. 1918.)

LOVEMORE, ROBERT BAILLIE, Lieut. (France). On 28 Oct. this officer, attacked by two Fokkers, was driven down and compelled to land on marshy ground the enemy side of a river. Having extricated himself from his machine, he saw another of our machines land a short distance away, the pilot being thrown out; proceeding to the spot, Lieut. Lovemore found the pilot insensible, his head and shoulders under water, and the fuselage over his legs. Releasing him from the fuselage, he dragged him out of the water, and in a few minutes the pilot recovered his senses. Lieut. Lovemore then proceeded towards the river, and seeing a corporal of ours on the other side he directed him to go and get help, he himself returning to the pilot, whom he carried to the river bank. On arriving there he saw an Infantry Officer on the opposite bank, who swam across to join him, and between them they carried the pilot down to the river and swam across, holding him up. The enemy by this time had brought up machine guns, so that they were under fire when swimming across; they, however, got across in safety, and a stretcher party arriving, the pilot was carried back to our lines. The cool courage and disregard of danger displayed by Lieut. Lovemore is deserving of very high praise.

McCLOUGHRY, WILFRED ASHTON, M.C., D.F.C., Major (Australian Flying Corps) (France). The record of this officer's squadron, when equipped with Sopwith Camels, was unique, not only in the number of aircraft destroyed with almost insignificant loss to ourselves, but also in the persistence with which they carried out innumerable raids at the lowest altitude. The high morale and individual enterprise of the members of this squadron must be largely attributed to the personality and influence of their leader, Major McCloughry. When the squadron was re-armed with Sopwith Snipes the change in type necessitated a complete reversal of their aerial experience. By his careful and untiring leadership he succeeded in so training his squadron that in a series of raids on three successive days they accounted for upwards of 30 hostile aeroplanes.
(M.C. gazetted 18 July, 1917.)
(D.F.C. gazetted 2 Nov. 1918.)

MACLAREN, DONALD RODERICK, M.C., D.F.C., Lieut. (Acting Capt.) (France). Bold in attack and skilful in manoeuvre, Capt. MacLaren is conspicuous for his success in aerial combats. On 24 Sept. he and his patrol of three machines attacked a formation of six enemy scouts, although the latter were protected by 16 other enemy aircraft at a higher altitude. Firing a burst at point-blank range, this officer shot down one in flames. In all he has accounted for 48 enemy machines and six kite balloons.
(M.C. gazetted 22 June, 1918.)
(Bar to M.C. gazetted 16 Sept. 1918.)
(D.F.C. gazetted 21 Sept. 1918.)

NETHERSOLE, MICHAEL HENRY BRADDON, Major (France). A squadron commander of exceptional merit, who, by his enthusiasm and fine example has revolutionized the tactics of his squadron. Formerly accustomed to bombing from a high altitude, the members have descended to low altitudes, thus ensuring greater accuracy of aim. On 30 Oct. he led his squadron on a low bombing raid against an aerodrome. The raid was most successful, he himself destroying two hangars. On the return journey he kept his machines so well together that, though they were attacked by large numbers of hostile scouts, they succeeded in destroying five of them with no loss on our side. The engagement continued during the whole of the return journey, but the squadron succeeded in causing considerable damage to hostile troops on the ground in addition to the casualties in the air as noted above.

STRANGE, LOUIS ARBON, M.C., D.F.C., Lieut.-Colonel (France). For his exceptional services in organizing his wing and his brilliant leadership on low bombing raids this officer was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross not long ago. Since then, by his fine example and inspiring personal influence, he has raised his wing to still higher efficiency and morale, the enthusiasm displayed by the various squadrons for low-flying raids being most marked. On 30 Oct. he accompanied one of these raids against an aerodrome; watching the work of his machines, he waited until they had finished and then dropped his bombs from 100 feet altitude on hangars that were undamaged; he then attacked troops and transport in the vicinity of the aerodrome. While thus engaged he saw eight Fokkers flying above him; at once he climbed and attacked them single-handed; having driven one down out of control he was fiercely engaged by the other seven, but he maintained the combat until rescued by a patrol of our scouts.

(D.F.C. gazetted 2 Nov. 1918.)

London Gazette, 15 Feb. 1919.—"Admiralty, S.W., 15 Feb. 1919.—Honours for Services in Action with Enemy Submarines. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers for services in action with enemy submarines. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

BEST, HUMPHREY WILLIE, Commander, Royal Navy.

MARK-WARDLAW, WILLIAM PENROSE, Lieut. (now Lieut.-Commander), Royal Navy.

(The award of the Distinguished Service Cross to this Officer, which was announced in Gazette of the 13th Sept. 1915, has been cancelled.)

LAKE, HENRY NEVILLE, D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Navy.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

OLPHERT, WYBRANTS, D.S.O., D.S.C., Lieut.-Commander, Royal Naval Reserve.

"Honours for Services in Minesweeping Operations.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services in minesweeping operations off the Belgian Coast, including the minefields off the ports of Ostend and Zeebrugge, between the 18th Oct. and 8th Nov. 1918. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

BUCKLAND, ARTHUR EDGAR, D.S.C., Lieut., Royal Navy. In recognition of the courageous and efficient manner in which he controlled and carried out the minesweeping operations off the Belgian coast, including the minefields off Ostend and Zeebrugge, which presented some particularly dangerous and difficult features.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order:

CAYLEY, HENRY FRANCIS, D.S.O., Commander (Acting Capt.), Royal Navy. For the gallant manner in which he personally conducted difficult minesweeping operations, rendering invaluable advice.

"Honours for Services in Monitors off the Belgian Coast between the 1st July and 11th Nov. 1918.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

PARKER, PATRICK EDWARD, Commander (now Capt.), Royal Navy.

MOORE, NORMAN CAMERON, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Navy.

STUDD, RONALD GRANVILLE, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Navy.

"Honours for Miscellaneous Services.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

CALVERT, THOMAS FREDERICK PARKER, Commander, Royal Navy.
DERING, CLAUD LACY YEA, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Navy.
HINE, ALFRED GORDON, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Navy.

"Honours for Services in Destroyers of the Harwich Force between the 1st July and 11th Nov. 1918.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

KIRKBY, ERNEST WALTER, Lieut.-Commander, Royal Navy.

"Honours for Services in Destroyers of the Dover Patrol between the 1st July and 11th Nov. 1918.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

STOKES, OLIVER MAURICE FITZGERALD, Commander, Royal Navy.

To receive a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order :

GUNNINGHAM, ANDREW BROWNE, D.S.O., Commander, Royal Navy.

"Honours for Palestine Operations (Oct.-Dec. 1917).—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their services during naval operations carried out in conjunction with military operations in Palestine from Oct. to Dec. 1917. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."

NARES, JOHN DODD, Commander, Royal Navy, H.M.S. Enterprise. Did most useful service prior to the operations in fixing positions north of Gaza, thus enabling a map to be drawn up. Rendered every assistance to R.A. Egypt from the 6th to 12th Nov. 1917, when the Rear-Admiral's flag was flown in Enterprise.

CROCKER, CECIL JAMES, Commander, Royal Navy, H.M. Monitor M.31. Was senior officer of the M. class Monitors. After the capture of the Sheikh Hassan position, in the early morning of the 2nd Nov. 1917, the monitors and destroyers operated to cover this position whilst it was being consolidated. When the enemy made a strong and determined counter-attack, lasting from about 3 to 4.30 p.m., Commander Crocker closed his squadron inshore and maintained a heavy fire upon the enemy, which went far to break up the attack. He displayed great tact and resource, and maintained close relations with the military on the sea flank of the Expeditionary Force, and it was largely due to his personality that the naval co-operation was so successful.

STANLEY, EDMOND ALAN BERNERS, M.V.O., Commander, Royal Navy, H.M.S. Stauch. Senior officer of destroyers employed guarding the flank of the Army during the Gaza operations, and rendered valuable service during the enemy's counter-attacks upon Sheikh Hassan.

HASELFOOT, FRANCIS EDMUND BLECHYNDEN, Lieut.-Commander (now Commander), Royal Navy, H.M.S. Grafton. This officer's previous experience, coupled with his energy and originality, was of the greatest value. He prepared observation posts and arranged communications from them to the signal stations, designed and constructed spotting clocks, placed landmarks and fixed them by triangulation, produced special squared maps for naval bombarding purposes, and assisted in the survey north of Gaza. During the operations he was attached to the XXist Corps as Liaison Officer, in which capacity he did excellent work.

LUARD, TRANT BRAMSTON, Major and Brevet Lieut.-Colonel (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), Royal Marine Light Infantry, H.M.S. Hannibal. Was employed with Lieut.-Commander Haselfoot to establish observation posts before Gaza for naval use. He was in charge of the spotting officers and men, and rendered valuable services in authorizing fire. The accuracy and success of the sea bombardment was largely due to Major Luard's organization.

GREGORY, GEORGE, O.B.E., B.D., Commander, Royal Naval Reserve. Was Naval Transport Officer in charge of the landing of stores and ammunition on the coast. The victualling of the Army and the supply of ammunition was largely dependent on the landing of stores upon an open coast under unfavourable conditions; it reflected great credit on Commander Gregory and his staff that this work was so well performed, and that such excellent results were obtained from the Egyptian labourers employed on it.

HANNING-LEE, VAUGHAN ALEXANDER EDWARD, Lieut.-Commander (Acting Commander), Royal Navy, H.M.S. Ladybird. Senior officer of river gunboats. These vessels replaced the destroyers on flank guard when the latter were absent fuelling, and were also employed cutting wire defences before the attack upon Sheikh Hassan, and in firing on trenches and observation posts. The Ladybird's fire upon Askalon, about 3.30 p.m. on the 8th Nov. 1917, disorganized the enemy's spotting arrangements and reduced the casualties of our troops.

London Gazette, 3 March, 1919.—"War Office, 3 March, 1919. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned awards for distinguished service in connection with military operations in Mesopotamia. Dated 1 Jan. 1919. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

MITFORD, THE HONOURABLE BERTRAM THOMAS CARLYLE OGILVY FREEMAN, Capt., Royal Navy. For his services in command of H.M.S. Lowestoft at the bombardment of Durazzo on the 2nd Oct. 1918.

CRAVEN, FRANCIS WORTHINGTON, Lieut., Royal Navy. In recognition of his services when H.M.S. Otranto was wrecked on the 6th Oct. 1918. H.M.S. Otranto was damaged in collision with the S.S. Kashmir whilst carrying a large number of American troops. Lieut. Craven displayed magnificent courage and seamanship in placing H.M.S. Mounsey alongside H.M.S. Otranto, in spite of the fact that the conditions of wind, weather and sea were exceptionally severe. After going alongside and embarking a certain number of men, it was reported that the Mounsey had sustained considerable damage, and that there was a large quantity of water in the engine-room. Lieut. Craven, therefore, left the Otranto, but on finding the damage was not so serious as had been reported, he again went alongside, though he had previously experienced great difficulty in getting away. His action resulted in the saving of over 600 lives which would certainly otherwise have been lost. His performance was a remarkable one, and in personal courage, coolness and seamanship ranks in the very highest order.

London Gazette, 22 March, 1919.—"War Office, 22 March, 1919. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the undermentioned awards for distinguished service in connection with military operations in the field. Dated 1 Jan. 1919. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

BUTT, PERCY LOVEL, Engineer Lieut.-Commander (now Engineer-Commander), Royal Navy. For gallant conduct in action on board H.M.S. Partridge on the 12th Dec. 1917. H.M.S. Partridge, while screening a Scandinavian convoy, was attacked by a superior enemy force and put out of action. Engineer Lieut.-Commander Butt, in order to make sure that the ship would sink and not fall into the enemy's hands, went three times into the engine room, which was full of steam, and remained there until there was no doubt that the vessel would sink.

"Honours for the Mercantile Marine.—The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honour to the undermentioned Officer of the Mercantile Marine, in recognition of zeal and devotion to duty shown in carrying on the trade of the country during the war. To be a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order."

MENISH, ROWLAND LEONARD HASTINGS, Chief Officer (Lieut., Royal Naval Reserve).

London Gazette, 26 May, 1919.—"War Office, 26 May, 1919. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

HARKER, THOMAS HUBERT, D.S.O., Capt. (Temporary Lieut.-Colonel), King's Royal Rifle Corps, Special Reserve, Commanding 1/7th Battn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers, Territorial Force (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and able leadership on the night 19-20 Sept. 1918. He led his battalion ten miles over difficult country, and surprised and captured a strong enemy position, taking over 200 prisoners, 15 machine guns, and a battery of 4.2 in. guns. It was entirely due to his bold and clever leadership that this extremely difficult night operation met with such complete success.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1918.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

ALDORTH, THOMAS PRESTON, Capt., Royal West Kent Regt., Special Reserve, attached 2nd Battn. (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Sharqat on 28 Oct. 1918. During an attack he encountered an enemy strong point. He collected some 12 men, and by skilful manoeuvring and dashing leadership rushed the position, capturing over 100 prisoners and six machine guns. He showed fine courage and leadership, and his splendid action greatly assisted in the success of the advance.

BERRYMAN, EDWARD ROLLESTON PALMER, Capt. and Brevet Major, 2/39th Garwhal Rifles, Indian Army (Brigade Major, 34th Infantry Brigade) (Mesopotamia). For most conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout the operations at Mushaq and Sharqat, 28-30 Oct. 1918. He displayed the utmost zeal and determination, and, though early wounded, continued to carry out his duties most ably under heavy fire. Weakened by fever and his wounds, he nevertheless remained at duty for four days and rendered invaluable assistance to the brigade.

CATTELL, GILBERT LANDALE, Lieut.-Colonel, 1/7th Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at the Lesser Zab 25 Oct. 1918. In command of an advanced guard he most skilfully reconnoitred, and then forced the Zab under heavy fire, finally seizing the enemy's position on the high ground on the high bank. His able dispositions and bold leadership enabled the objective to be taken with a minimum of losses.

CHANNER, GUY, Major, 14th Sikhs, Indian Army (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Mushaq on 25 Oct. 1918, and at Sharqat 29 Oct. He was wounded whilst commanding his battalion, but refused to be evacuated until the battalion was drawn back to the reserve. It was largely due to his energy, courage and resource that a determined enemy counter-attack was successfully repulsed.

CURSETJEE, HEEBAJEE JEHANGIR MANOCKJEE, M.B., Capt., Indian Medical Service (attached 14th Sikhs) (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Mushaq 26-27 Oct. 1918, and at Sharqat 29 Oct. Throughout the operations he displayed the greatest zeal and disregard for danger while tending the wounded under heavy fire, working unceasingly for 48 hours. He has previously rendered excellent service, and once was severely wounded.

MARTIN, HUGH GRAY, Major, 337th Brigade, 341st Battery, Royal Field Artillery. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty north of Sharqat on 28 Oct. 1918. He showed marked ability in selecting positions for his guns under continuous and heavy fire, and organized a well-directed enfilading artillery support for the column with which he was operating. He exposed himself freely in the open until communications were established.

SARGON, ARTHUR IRONS, Capt., Indian Army Reserve of Officers, attached 14th Mahrattas (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in command of two companies at Mushaq on 26 Oct. 1918. Although early wounded and exposed to heavy fire, which caused many casualties, he maintained his position for a whole day and night. The excellent service rendered by his companies was in great measure due to his grit and determination.

THOMAS, WILLIAM LEWELLYN, M.C., Temporary Major, 2nd Battn. British West India Regt. (Egypt). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 22 Sept. 1918, at Maif Jeseh. On learning that an officer's patrol was fighting a rearguard action against vastly superior numbers, he took up a platoon and kept the enemy in check until the remainder of the battalion had arrived as reinforcements. The enemy were driven back. He displayed great initiative in the subsequent attack, which resulted in the capture of Maif Jeseh and 40 prisoners.

VILLIERS, ERIC HYDE, Temporary Capt., 1st Battn. Highland Light Infantry (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His company, acting as advanced guard at night near Mushaq on 25 Oct. 1918, came under heavy fire at close range. He quickly rallied his men, and, with another company, charged through a double line of high wire and captured the enemy trench, with some prisoners. He penetrated and captured part of the enemy's second line. He displayed great dash and courage, and was instrumental in retrieving a critical situation.

WILLIAMS, JAMES HUBERT, Capt., 1/10th Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Mushaq on 26 Oct. 1918, and at Sharqat on 29 Oct. On two separate occasions he led his company over 2,000 yards of open and exceedingly difficult country to attack the enemy's position. By his courage and fine leadership he forced his way under heavy fire to within 400 yards of the position on the first occasion, and 300 yards on the second. His rapid advance greatly helped operations in other parts of the field.

WINTLE, CHARLES EDMUND HUNTER, Lieut.-Colonel, 114th Mahrattas (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Sharqat 29 Oct. 1918. He boldly led his battalion into action, and repelled a strong counter-attack. He was then left rather in the air, as the enemy had driven a salient into our line. In spite of this, and having sustained heavy casualties, he held his ground throughout the night, and reorganized his command under heavy fire in a most able manner.

WOULFE-FLANAGAN, RICHARD JOHN, Lieut.-Colonel, 2nd Battn. Royal West Kent Regt. (Mesopotamia). For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Sharqat 28 Oct. 1918. Throughout the action he commanded his battalion with great judgment, quickly selecting the salient points of attack. Although his numbers were considerably reduced, he, by making use of some machine gunners and a company of another regiment, eventually gained a complete sweep over the enemy, capturing 180 prisoners and nine machine guns. He did fine work.

London Gazette, 27 May, 1919.—"War Office, 27 May, 1919. His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following immediate awards for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in North Russia, conferred by Major-General C. C. M. Maynard, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., in pursuance of the powers vested in him by His Majesty. Awarded the Distinguished Service Order."

CANADIAN FORCE.

EASTHAM, ALFRED, M.C., Capt., Canadian Machine Gun Corps, attached Malmoot Company. For conspicuous gallantry in command of the attacking party at Nadvolski, 19 Feb. 1919. His dispositions were such that none of the enemy escaped, all being killed or captured. He displayed great courage in the hand-to-hand fighting in the village. He later with his force captured Station 22 and the whole of the garrison of the post at the Onda. Throughout he displayed unflinching energy.

MACKENZIE, LAWRENCE HOWARD, Major, Nova Scotia Regt., attached Malmoot Company. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of the party which took Segeja 19 Feb. 1919. The success was due to his arrangements for transport and attack. A distance of 170 versts had to be travelled, and the weather was intensely cold. He took Segeja with slight loss, and the success of the whole operation was largely due to his marked ability for organization, his sound judgment and his courage.

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the following immediate awards for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in North Russia, conferred by Major-General W. E. Ironside, C.M.G., D.S.O., in pursuance of the powers vested in him by His Majesty. Awarded a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order."

CANADIAN FORCE.

ARNOLDI, FRANK FAUQUIER, D.S.O., Major, Canadian Field Artillery. He has handled his battery on all occasions with marked determination and skill. His work in connection with the retirement from Seltzy, and the battle of Toulgas on 11 Nov. 1918, was of a very high order. He has many times made difficult reconnaissances, and to him is largely due the splendid technical fitness and offensive spirit of the battery.
(D.S.O. gazetted 1 Jan. 1917.)

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

GILMORE, GEORGE HENRY, M.C., Temporary Capt. (Acting Major), Royal Sussex Regt., attached 2/10th Battn. Royal Scots. For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership in command of the left wing of the Seletskoe Detachment during operations from 25 Jan. to 10 Feb. 1919. Thanks to his ability and presence of mind the retreat was carried out successfully. On 1 and on 7 Feb. he took personal command of important reconnaissances, and directed operations which enabled the force to extricate itself from a difficult situation.

London Gazette, 27 May, 1919.—"Admiralty, 27 May, 1919. The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the following honours to the undermentioned Officers. To be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order."
